Opening cattle prices were strong compared with the previous close and 50 cents above a week ago. Heavier following runs slowed up the market. Weighty steers sold at $6.25-$7.75 cwt. and a few choice heavies brought $8-$8.25. Good butcher steers and heifers were $6.75-$7 and a few light steers made $7.25. Plain butchers ranged down to $5.50, though there were few sales below $6.

Butcher cows ranged from $3.75-$5.50 with canners and cutters at $2.75-$3.50. Good light bulls brought $5-$5.50, bolognas $4.50-$4.85. Fed calves sold mostly between $7 and $9 cwt. with three choice at $9.75. The few stockers offered were steady at $5.25-5.6. Milker and springer trade was dull with tops at $65-$75 each.

Starting at $11 for tops, calf prices dropped to $9-$9.50 for choice. Common calves were priced as low as $4.50. Hogs closed at $9-$9.10 off trucks for bacons. Sows brought $6.50-$6.75 off trucks.

Lamb receipts included $3,370 from the west. Most westerners went at $8.75 with a few at $8.85-$8.90. Sheep were also lower at $2-$5 cwt. according to quality. Good light western ewes sold at $6 cwt.

years ago, and he will be free if he chooses, therefore, to revive the old custom of going through Rome in state to take formal possession of papal properties outside the Vatican walls.

The Holy Father's primary interest in diplomatic affairs was demonstrated this morning by his receiving Monsignor Giovanni Battista Montini, assistant secretary of state for ordinary affairs. He was believed to have given the Monsignor instructions for notifying the diplomatic corps of the coronation.

Some Vatican sources predicted that on the basis of his attitude in the past, Pius XII would work to better relations with countries, such as Germany, where they have been troubled.

Policies Slow But Firm.

The Pontiff's policies are expected to take form slowly, with firmness.

"Calmness in conduct and actions in dealing with the church's internal and international relations so as to better various situations" was the description of the Holy Father's likely attitude from one Vatican source.

Toward Germany's treatment of Catholics, this informant said, His Holiness was expected to show "no weakness but an attitude of watchful waiting for betterment of conditions."

In dealing with that situation—since he once was Papal nuncio to Berlin, negotiation the Concordat of 1929 with Germany and signed that of 1933 with Chancellor Hitler's government—the 63-year-old Pontiff was regarded as particularly qualified for personal observations and experience.

Screams For Air

Men and women in night attire screamed for air from their perches on window ledges. Some crawled to the roof. Others jumped into fire nets.

"I jumped but daddy aimed me," 11-year-old Denton Elliff of Montreal said from his cot in children's hospital, in describing his 30-foot plunge into a fire net. The father, M. Elliff, also threw his three-year-old daughter, Sybil, into a net. Mr. and Mrs. Elliff escaped down a ladder.

"I remembered to say 'thank you' when they helped me down the ladder," said Mrs. E. L. Ward of Kentville, another survivor.

R. McGarvie of Montreal paid tribute to an "Italian man who is a crippie and who was convalescing at the hotel" for giving the alarm that helped him and his wife to escape."

She felt miserable—draggy—low in vitality—lower in spirits. She hadn't thought of her kidneys, until a friend suggested Dodd's Kidney Pills. At once she took Dodd's. The "washed out" feeling was soon replaced by clear headed energy and restful sleep. Headache, backache, lassitude and other signs of faulty kidneys disappeared. 112

Sainthood Sought

Although kept busy with preparations for the election of a successor to Pope Pius XI, Dennis Cardinal Dougherty of Philadelphia and George Cardinal Mundelein of Chicago have started a move in Vatican city to raise "to honors of the altar" Mother Elizabeth Seton, founder of the Sisters of Charity in the United States. "Honors of the altar" in lay parlance means sainthood. It would be the first time that a person born and bred in the United States would be thus honored should mother Seton be raised to sainthood.

for some time that there should be a medical man on the staff of the penitentiaries, someone who was expert in mental disease and that sort of thing. The idea is to have three men at the head of our penal system whose names and abilities will be a guarantee to the people of Canada that this very important branch of administration is being looked after properly."

Referring to the recent transfer of 130 convicts from Kingston to penitentiaries in the west, Mr. Lapointed said it might be desirable to have enough accommodation for all Ontario convicts at Kingston, but when there was room for some in the west and overcrowding in the Kingston penitentiary it was more economical to transfer them.

Hon. H. H. Stevens (Con. Kootenay East) thought more attention should be given to removing the causes of crime. Idleness, unemployment and over-crowding in cities were causes of recent increases in crime. Crime had become a highly organized business or racket in many cities.

"The youthfulness of criminal classes today is something appalling," Mr. Stevens said. "There are a great many very young people in the penitentiaries, largely because of idleness and lack of opportunity for work. Parliament must take cognizance of this situation."

There should be some efforts not only to improve the situation of the prisoners after they were convicted but to prevent or remove the causes of crime "we dare not disregard the prevention side of this question," Mr. Stevens said.

"Let me conclude by saying that this fastidious gentleman who criticizes the representatives of Canada as a whole in this House, the men whom the people of every riding sent here to represent their views, ate the bread paid for by the taxpayers, drank the win paid for by the taxpayers in his house in Washington for four and a quarter years at an expense to this country in excess of $125,000."

"So has the Liberal party," shouted S. H. Landeryou (S.C. Calgary East)

"Let me suggest that if there is a gentleman in this House who approves of the subversive and vile, slanderous imputation on Canada and our parliament, let him rise in his seat and support it," replied Mr. Slaght.

Mr. Lapointe said Mr. Slaght had raised the question there was one statement in the Herridge speech he wanted to repudiate for all members of parliament. This was "you will never get prosperity until you get into parliament men who love this country better than themselves."

Vincent Dupuis (Lib. Chambly-Rouville) said if Mr. Herridge was a Moses he would not be able to cross the Red Sea without drowning himself.

Chest Wheezing Means Bronchitis

The principal symptom of bronchitis is a dry, harsh, hacking cough accompanied with a rapid wheezing and feeling of tightness across the chest.

There is a rising of phlegm, especially in the morning. This phlegm is at first of a light color, but as the disease progresses becomes yellowish or greenish, and is sometimes streaked with blood.

You will find in Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup a remedy to stimulate the weakened bronchial organs, subdue the inflammation, soothe the irritated parts, loosen the phlegm and mucus, and help nature to easily dislodge the morbid accumulation.

Family Life Is Having A Real Innings In Rural Areas In Recent Weeks

(Examiner Correspondence.)

DOURO, March 3.—Family life is having an innings in rural areas in recent weeks. The old saying "You can go home when you can't go anywhere else" is changed to "you have to stay home because you can't go anywhere else."

Three days have elapsed since Sundays big storm and still practically all local roads are impassable for cars, and not very good going for horses. One of man's great inventions, the car, is a helpless thing after the storm king has gone on a rampage. The present attitude of most people seems to be "What's the use expending a lot of labor on a road only to have it filled in by tomorrow or next day's storm?"

Different expedients are used to get mail. In most cases one farmer goes to the corner, meets the mail courier and brings his own and his neighbors' mail. No mail man is making his full rounds.

The Warsaw stage failed to make the Peterborough trip on Monday, having to turn back. People are taking the whole situation very philosophically. But pity the rural reporter as there positively is no news. News is usually scarce in winter, but this winter it is non-existant.

ELEANOR WALSH

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HASTINGS, March 3.—Impressive funeral services, largely attended, were held in Our Lady of Mount Carmel Roman Catholic church, here yesterday, for the late Eleanor Walsh who died at her home in Asphodel township early Tuesday morning following a lengthy illness. Many attended from the Westwood district where the late Miss Walsh spent most of her life. Father P. Costello, pastor, sang the Requiem Mass and delivered the sermon.

He told of the patience and suffering of the late Miss Walsh during her illness of some years—offering her sufferings to God through daily prayers, with a spirit of cheerfulness. She had undertaken to take the place of a mother to a large family some years ago when the good mother of the children passed away. In this respect, she had fulfilled her duties well until she became sick.

This life is merely the beginning of an endless eternity and each one of us must meet the trials and hardships with a spirit of improving our moral well being. Gold, to reach it's purest form must pass through intense heat but it emerges shining and bright. So it is with us. If we are to attain our goal in the next world, we must pass through many little difficulties which help purify our souls.

Father Costello cited an instance where a man, who had been in great suffering on the battlefields of France during the world war, had questioned him why God would permit such suffering if He was such a good God. Father Costello replied that God had not created the war—nor did He create the suffering. Rather, it was the work of man who failed to recognize his Maker—who had almost forgotten there was a God to offer prayers to, and particularly at a time of emergency such as the world was passing through at that time. Such was not the case with the late Miss Walsh, who Father Costello referred to as a fine example of a good Catholic.

Interment was made in Mount Carmel cemetery.

FELT NERVOUS, RUNDOWN COULDN'T SLEEP AND WAS FULL OF ACHES AND PAINS

Often Common Results of Faulty Assimilation and Elimination.

MR. WILLIAM H. ALMAS

"For years I was troubled with stomach gas and indigestion," said Mr. William Almas, 28 Barton Street East, Hamilton, recently.

"After eating I would get a burning feeling in my stomach and hot, sour liquids would rise in my throat. I would fill up with gas and get awful dizzy feelings. Little spots floated before my eyes and my tongue was always coated. Frequently I used to get sharp pains in my shoulders and back. I felt very nervous, rundown and couldn't sleep well.

A friend told me about how Syntona had helped him, so I decided to try it, and it has given me great relief. Now I can eat well without all that stomach distress, the pains in my back and shoulders are relieved, my nerves are more relaxed and I sleep better. Syntona has been a wonderful medicine for me, and I am glad to recommend it to any person who suffers as I did."

Syntona produces these results without the aid of harmful drugs. It is made only from pure herbal juices that have long been known for their medicinal value. Many who have taken it say that in only a few days their whole systems take on a feeling of new energy and vigour.

Local men and women can get Syntona in Peterborough at Elliott's Drug Store. Ask about the special introductory offer.

SIDE ROADS BAD

Although the trunk highways in the district are reported in fairly good condition, reports from the country are to the effect that side roads are still badly blocked and in some cases there has been no motor traffic for over a week.

FIVE FEWER DEATHS.

Births, marriages and deaths were all fewer in number last month than in February of 1938. Births this past February stood at 49, a year ago at 52; marriages were 19 as compared with 20; deaths were 21 as compared with 26.

TEACHERS ABSENT

As a consequence of the prevailing epidemic of la grippe no fewer than nine teachers of the staff of the Peterborough Collegiate Institute and Vocational School were reported as off duty yesterday. Scores of pupils are also absent from the same cause.

NO POLICE COURT

This has been an exceptionally quiet week in police circles and as a result there was not a single case on the docket for Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., this morning. This was an unusual occurrence for a Friday morning.

BROKEN PIPE.

Public Utilities employees found the ground still frozen hard to-day when they dug into Antrim street between George and Water streets to repair a water line that had apparently burst, flooding the entire street. Water even oozed up through the sidewalk so great was the amount that tumbled from the burst pipe.

SEES NO OPPOSITION.

Wilbert Davey of Hamilton township, a former Warden of Northumberland-Durham, was in Peterborough the other day on a business trip and told the Examiner the vote on the fixed assesment by-law for the new Aluminum Company's factory would be just a matter of form. "I can't imagine any of our township people voting against it," he said. This is the plant that is going to be built on the east side of Cobourg.

Another sign of spring was noted in a Hunter street garage when the first simonize job of the year was ordered. Tom Dawson is the chap who did the ordering, evidently having a high disdain for sloppy streets in March.

STILL OFF DUTY

Constables McGillen and Menzies of the Peterborough police department are still confined to their homes battling with the flu germ. Provincial Traffic Officer Lloyd McClure who has been a victim of the epidemic all week was able to be out again today.

ALDERMAN RECOVERS

Alderman H. J. McCannan returned to his office Thursday afternoon, resuming work after an absence of nearly two weeks with a severe attack of influenza that approached close to the stage of pneumonia. Ald McCannan said today that it was his longest period of illness in thirty years.

A "SAP" TO ASK

"Is the sap running yet?" a guileless reporter enquired of a certain wisenheimer who delivers papers by truck, and otherwise shall be nameless. "No," he answered, "it's like a lot of others I know, not even walking these days." A crack like that is worth about a dime a dozen, but it is about all that is available today.

CITY'S HEALTH GOOD

Here's an ironic note in the municipal news today. Dr. J. Murray Fraser, M.O.H., informed the Examiner that Peterborough's health at present warrants a rating of good. Oh! mustard plasters where are thy sting? Oh! Vicks they victory! No communicable diseases have been reported to Dr. Fraser, the Queen Mary Hospital is vacant, and although colds and influenza have got many of the citizens down or a bit wabbly and under par, distressed as with the heeby-jeebies, there are no ailments within the city that merit listing at the city hall.

Maritime Coal In Demand In Peterboro'

For a city its size, Peterborough is one of the biggest users of Nova Scotia coal in all Ontario, according to C. Gerow of the Dominion Coal Company, speaking at the weekly luncheon of the Kiwanis club in the Empress hotel today.

He defended the subsidy arrangement established by the Dominion government for the extension of sales of Nova Scotia coal into the Ontario government on the grounds that it has proved to be of great value to Canada's home industries without interfering to any extent with international trade.

Tenth Comes From N.S.

"The Province of Ontario requires annually about 10,000,000 tons of bituminous coal, and of this amount more than 1,000,000 tons may now be supplied with Nova Scotia coal, the balance still being imported from the United States. The purchase of this 1,000,000 tons of Nova Scotia coal by Ontario consumers keeps within Canadian boundaries about $3,000,000 per year which otherwise would leave the country as payment for imported coal. At the same time, the marketing of this extra 1,000,000 tons by the Nova Scotia mines is required in order to prevent serious hardships in our coal mining industry. With the industry in a reasonably healthy condition, its purchasing power is of real importance to the manufacturer of all other commodities manufactured in Canada. As example the purchases of required commodities by the various Nova Scotia coal mining companies amount to about $15,000,000 per year, and the annual wages and salaries paid amount to nearly $20,000,000 per year when operations are normal. Of these amounts, well over $2,000,000 is spent annually in Ontario by the operating companies for direct purchases, and it can be readily understood that a large portion of the wages and salaries also finds its way into Ontario for Ontario manufactured goods. These substantial purchases of the Nova Scotia coal mining industry would not be possible were it not for the marketing of the additonial coal in the province of Ontario, made possible by the freight subsidy provided by the Dominion government. The amount of this subsidy is only slightly more than $1,500,000 per year, and it is quite conceivable that this amount is not more than would be required to take care of relief measures required for unemployment in the coal fields were the Ontario market not made available.

"Hence it maybe said with much confidence that the assistance granted by the Dominion government for the marketing of Canadian coal is more in the nature of a sound investment rather than an expense. And in conclusion, I am sure you will agree that the Nova Scotia coal mining industry after having progressed in development for over one hundred years, still remains one of Canada's greatest national assets."

The speaker outlined the growth of the coal industry in Nova Scotia from its beginnings as Canada's first organized industry a little more than a hundred years ago to its present large status. Nova Scotia coal was first mined in the year 1720 by the French military authorities from surface outcrops near Louisburg but no real developments in the industry took place for another hundred years, he said. Greatest impetus the industry had known occurred in 1893 when seven operating companies amalgamated to form the huge Dominion Coal company, and during the next two decades rapid development occurred. The main producing fields are practically the same today as those originally developed.

Four new members were introduced to club members today and accepted into the association. They were James Gillespie, T. L. Ashton, G. S. Fraser, and Ernie Gregson. ohn I. Allen introduced the members, who were addressed by Carl S. Browne, chairman of the Kiwanis education committee. "We share in work for the welfare of our fellow citizens, work that as individuals would not be open to us," he told them. "What you get out of Kiwanis is directly proportional to what you put into the club." President W. A. Richardson welcomed the candidates on behalf of the club. T. L. Ashton replied briefly for the class. The speaker of the day was introduced by Charles Saunders, and Cliff Hall moved a vote of thanks. Guests were G. H. Roper of the Y.M.C.A. and Dr. A. J. Brace of the Y.M.C.A's world work committee.

Seven Killed When Trolley Jumps Track

Seven persons, including four school children, were killed when this street car hurtled from its rails, while rounding a curve in Boston, Mass., and crashed into a tree. The force of the impact almost cut the street car in half. Seven persons were rushed to the hospital for treatment of serious injuries, while 10 others were treated for minor injuries The motorman of the ill-fated car told authorities that the accident occurred when "the brakes didn't hold" on a sharp down grade.

Letter Posted In Vancouver On Wednesday Delivered In Peterborough 26 Hours Later

Citizens generally are beginning to realize that the Post Office Department is not only "on its toes" in a business sense, but also on winged toes with cheap transcontinental mail deliveries on a new time schedule that has been astonishingly swift.

For example, the Peterborough Lock Company received at 4.50 p.m. on Thursday a letter that was posted in Vancouver at 2 p.m. on Wednesday, an extraordinary service which prompted the management to telephone Postmaster Chas. Lacheur, acknowledging the Department's accomplishment and expressing their appreciation of it.

A margin of a few more minutes would have made it at least possible to have send off immediately a reply by way of the afternoon train to Toronto where it would have been whisked off to Vancouver during the night reaching the coast before noon today. At that the answering letter that has been sent will be in Vancouver before the first letter would have been delivered by the former carriage by train.

This is only one of numerous improvements the Department is putting into effect, another one being a reduction in the rate for parcel post delivery.

Big Wood Truck Skids Off Road

Earl Trotter of Apsley had a narrow escape from injury on the Apsley-Burleigh Falls road Thursday afternoon when the big truck he was driving, laden with three cords of wood, skidded off the icy road into the ditch, four miles south of Apsley. Fortunately the deep snow prevented the heavy machine and its load from turning over and thus saved the driver from injury. However the truck itself, a new machine owned by Robert Trotter of Apsley was damaged to the extent of $40 in the run-off.

Trotter who was headed for Peterborough saw two trucks stopped on the road in front of him and thinking that he had not room to pass tried to stop. However the road surface was very icy and his truck shot of finto the ditch. The accident was investigated by Provincial Constable Don. Carruthers.

LINDSAY, March 3.—The Lindsay tax rate has been reduced by one-half a mill. At a special meeting of the council, held Wednesday evening, to consider the estimates, it was decided to set the rate for Lindsay for the year 1939 at 43 mills, as compared to 43.05 in 1938.

While the estimates were an increase of practically two thousand dollars over the estimates of 1938, Alderman Lorne W. Jordan, chairman of Finance, stated in moving that the rate be 43 mills that he believed the town could be operated on that rate when the surplus on 1938 is considered and since it is expected the County rate will be slightly decreased. Alderman Richard Butler seconded the motion and it was passed unanimously by the council.

The town council, preparing for another bad year in relief, has estimated the sum of $8,200 for this committee's appropriation. The appropriation for relief in 1938 was $6,900, but the cost of relief was $8,138.12. Members of the council felt that even the appropriation of $8,200 was eloquent of some optimism and it is believed that this sum may not be sufficient.

Dog Tags Arrive For Distribution

There was more than a hint of spring in the announcement from Police Inspector James F. Reid this morning that the 1939 dogs licenses and tags are now on sale.

The new crop of tags are supplied, as has been the case for many years, by J. J. Turner and Sons, and are different in design from those used last year. It is the custom to change the design each year.

It is estimated that there are some five hundred canines in the city and the work of issuing that many licenses is quite a bookkeeping chore for the police department.

Propose Grandstands Along Royal Route

TORONTO, March 3—(CP). — A proposal that grandstands be erected along the whole length of Fleet street on the waterfront and that this be the chief section of the royal route through Toronto May 23, gained support here today.

Sponsors of the proposal said they wanted their Majesties welcomed at Toronto's front door. They would have the grandstands for the people built by unemployed men and guarded on the day of the royal procession by war veterans and garrison members.

W. J. Stewart, M.L.A., said the example London set in building grandstands for the coronation might well be followed here. It was not too late for plans to be changed.

700 Kept Idle

DETROIT, Mar. 3 — (CP). — Pickets kept 700 men idle at the Dodge Brothers' forge plant here after two men were discharged for refusing to change a tool on a drill unless they were paid tool and die workers wages. The 100 men in the department picketed the plant yesterday and 600 other workers refused to march through the picket line.

Warden Is Objecting To Dumping Snow

A meeting of the Peterborough Exhibition Board will be held tonight in the office of F. C. Paterson. Possibly Tom Brown, president, will mention his associates the fact that Warden James Milby has been objecting with considerable asperity to the carting of snow from some of the city strets onto the unoccupied acres of the Park. North Monaghan's Reeve complains the suburban fringe of the township has enough snow as a hangover from winter without more of it being carted from the city probably to melt and increase the volume of surface water that sometimes accumulates on the level ground between Lansdowne street and the river.

Hastings To Cut Poll Tax Levy

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HASTINGS, March 3 — In an effort to check alleged poll tax evasion in this village, the council will reduce the tax from $5 per head to $3, when they convene tonight (Friday). Reeve Lewis Kelly said that a number of young men were escaping payment by having themselves assessed for rooms, but he believes that with the new reduced rate, there would be little advantage in such a procedure. The assessor was instructed at the last meeting of the council to strike any names off the list who were assessed for rooms without a direct street entrance.

"The young men are the most valuable asset any municipality has and I do not see any point in charging them too high a rate to live here," the reeve told the Examiner. "Personally, I am not in favor of poll tax at all, but the by-law is on the books and we (the council) must collect," he added.

Mayberry Heads Cheese Producers

The election of F. H. Mayberry as president of the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association received the warm approval of the Peterborough county delegates who returned this morning from the provincial convention in Ottawa. They were George A. Elliott of Norwood, Fred Crowe of Dummer, H. B. Wood of Trent Bridge, Stewart Clysdale of Dummer and Frank C. Paterson, church organizations despite a

George VanVolkenburg of Seymour township was elected a director of the association, and as his views of what the association should undertake are known to be in sympathy with those of the new president, it is expected that Mr. Mayberry's plans to bring about certain changes in policy will receive strong support from within the executive.

Prince Hailed

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt, March 3.—(CP-Havas). — The 19-year-old Crown Prince of Iran, Mohammed Riza Pahlavi, who is to marry 17-year-old Princess Fawzia, sister of Egypt's King Farouk, arrived here to-day aboard the yacht Mahroussa. The sirens of evry ship in port greeted the young prince and a squadron of planes flew overhead.

New Centre Theatre Opened By Mayor

Huge crowds jammed the New Centre theatre last night to bid welcome to Peterborough's third motion picture house, opened officially by Mayor James Hamilton. Not a single seat remained vacant and exclamation of pleasure were heard on all sides on the beauty of the appointments. Flowers were heaped in profusion at the entrance, on the stage, and in the waiting room downstairs. Workmen had apparently rushed the theatre to completion for not a vestige of unpreparedness was to be seen, while only a day before it would have appeared to an uninitiated eye that the theatre could not possibly be ready on time.

First ticket was sold to Johnston Murphy, 356 Stewart street, who had never seen a moving picture. Afflicted by deafness, he welcomed the appearance of the new theatre, equipped as it is with ear phones for people who are hard of hearing. An American lady was a user of the new ear phones, and said she found them entirely satisfactory, that for the first time she was able to see and hear a talking picture with enjoyment.

11 Letter Carriers Fail To Report

The casualty list of the letter carriers this morning had mounted to fifty per cent. with eleven of the staff home beneath the elderdown and the blankets.

Postmaster Lacheur was worrying about the depletion of his delivery force earlier in the week, but this morning he had reached the stage of resignation. The worst that can happen now, and of course the Postmaster is solicitous about the condition of the carriers, is that all of them might be flattened out by the potent germs inconceivably but nonetheless rampant throughout the community.

Demand For Flags Reported Heavy

The visit of the King and Queen to Canada this year is being reflected in a rush of business for at least one department of one of Peterborough's industries. The firm of J. J. Turner and Sons has received many orders from all parts of Canada for flags to be used in connection with the royal visit and it is expected that these orders will continue to come in for some time.

An interesting feature is the fact that there is a heavy demand for the Scottish flag. Evidently Canadian municipalities are anxious to do honor to Her Majesty, the Queen by flying the flag of her native land during her visit to the Dominion.

DEATH AT THE MANOR

By M. E. CORNE

CHAPTER FORTY-THREE

"IS—IS IT important?" I asked Mac when I recalled that Mrs. Witherspoon didn't move when I cut her finger during the manicure.

"I think so. Tell me, Elsie, did the finger bleed?"

"Bleed?" I tried to think. "No—no, it didn't bleed. The cut made a gash like I said and the blood sort of came to the top, but it didn't run over. It was like—like jelly!"

Phil whistled. I glanced from one to the other. "What does it mean?"

"It means, girl," Mac said, "it means that she was dead when you cut her finger."

"Dead?" I had difficulty swallowing. "Then—then I was working on a corpse?"

"You were," he affirmed. "Dead bodies, Elsie, don't bleed."

"Oh!" I gasped. "I couldn't have saved her?"

"No, you couldn't have saved her. It was her time to go and she went."

"Why—that's what Mr. Horace said. His very words!"

"So where does that get us?" Phil demanded. "She died half an hour earlier than we thought. That fact doesn't solve the mystery by a whole lot!"

Mac agreed: "It doesn't solve the mystery, lad, but it helps. It does help."

"Well, it's way over my head." Phil was cross. "If you know who did the killing, as you keep hinting, why don't you do something about it?"

Mac regarded them tolerantly: "Ever hear the old saying: 'There's a time and a place for everything'?"

"Sure, but—"

"This is the place, Benson, but it isn't the time. I don't know the identity of the killer. I only suspect. And if it is who I think it is, we have about as much chance of proving his crimes as Elsie here has of flying to the moon. Our man or woman is no common murderer. He or she is smart—clever! Our criminal left no loose ends. Not one!"

I said anxiously: "But you have eliminated Mr. Richard?"

"Mostly, Elsie; mostly. Unless I'm greatly mistaken, he hasn't the guts — begging your pardon — for murder. Stealing just about finished him!"

"Poison is a woman's weapon, isn't it, Mac?" inquired the chief, scratching his head.

"Poison is anyone's weapon," Mac informed him, his eyes twinkling. He was too old a hand to be so easily tripped. "And that reminds me that I want to take a look at the laboratory upstairs. Not that I expect to find the cyanide neatly labeled and waiting for me," he hastened to add "but it just doesn't pay to take things for granted in this business. Well?" He raised his voice inquiringly. Someone was knocking.

"I may come een?" A familiar voice sounded in the hall.

"So!" exclaimed Phil in a bored tone. "Our palsy-walsy, the count! Wonder what he wants?"

"Mac!" I jerked the detective's sleeve, "I—I think I know what he wants. Tell him to come back in a minute."

"You know!" Mac's eyebrows were in momentary danger of tangling with his hair. "My God! Is there no end to your deceit?" He looked angry. I thought he would refuse my request, but he only shrugged his shoulders and went to the door. "Now what?" he demanded when he had sent the count about his business.

I closed my eyes, took a deep breath and began. When I had finished my story of the meeting in the woods he had no word to say. He stood staring at me as if I were some strange sort of insect he had never seen.

"You take the cake, Elsie!" he said finally. "Are you quite positive you aren't hiding the murderer 'round the house somewhere?"

I had the grace to flush. "Sorry—anyway, you know now."

"Yes, I know NOW," he echoed, and added something about "locking the barn door after the horse was stolen." I never knew a man so fond of quoting maxims.

"So his royal highness tries his hand at blackmail!" Phil remarked thoughtfully.

"Regular blackmailers' paradise, this!" Mac growled. "Everyone with something to hide, and willing to pay to keep it hidden! Evidently Orsini knows where the tissue came from; and now that the girl has turned him down, he's going to squeal."

"But we've hunted high and low for those tissues," Phil reminded him. "Not a soul in the house smokes hand-rolled cigarets; I can vouch for that!"

"Don't worry your head about it," Mac advised. "We'll just wait for his nibs to return and tell us all about it!"

But McIntyre, for once in his life, was over-optimistic. The count did not return to tell us all about it. Ten, fifteen, twenty minutes we waited until, at last, with a muttered oath, Mac jumped up and dashed out into the corridor.

"I'll find that fellow if I have to tear the place to pieces!" he stormed. "You!" he hailed a figure in cap and apron. "Have you seen Count Orsini?"

"No." The girl shook her head. "I see no one," she said, and passed quickly by him, darting fearful backward glances at his scowling countenance.

"Are you looking for someone?"

"Yes!" He strode toward her. "I'm looking for that ex-fiance of yours."

"Ex?" Daphne appeared amused. A half-smile hovered about her lips. "Aren't you a trifle premature, Mr. McIntyre?" she drawled. She nodded behind her. "Count Orsini is inside. We have been discussing plans for a quiet and early wedding."

"And that," remarked Mac dispiritedly, "is that!"

"How can she marry that—that clotheshorse?" I demanded indignantly of the world in general. "And break Mr. Jeffrey's heart?"

"You never can tell why a girl marries a certain man," Mac returned, with a flash of his old humor. "Look at you and Phil—"

"Hush!" My face felt like a four-alarm fire. Phil and I were not even engaged.

Phil grinned, enjoying my discomfiture. "Oh, I'm not so bad, am I, Elsie? Of course, I haven't much money, but I am good looking!"

"Conceited pup!" I retorted, sticking my tongue out at him. "You'll never cause Appolo any anxious moments!"

"My God!" He groaned in mock despair. "Will you never stop raving about that guy? You think maybe you're a Venus?"

"If you two want to compete for a beauty prize," said Mac, disgusted, "you can stay here and compete! I'm going to the third floor and turn that laboratory inside out."

"You're not sneaking away from us! Not at this stage of the game!" Phil grabbed my hand. "Lead on, Macduff!"

My first impression of the laboratory was that it was the cleanest, lightest and most cheerful place in the entire house. It was white and shining. The sun streamed in through floor-to-ceiling windows. A pool of sunlight danced in the center of a spotless tiled floor. Looking upward, I discovered a skylight.

Around three sides of the room ran narrow metal tables filled with all sorts of queer contraptions, the trappings of science! A large sink, taps gleaming, and a row of flat-topped porcelain tables set end to end, and dividing the room into identical halves, gave the impression of a modern and up-to-date kitchen. Against the fourth wall stood a steel cabinet, windowless, and with long doors, bright as mirrors, meeting in the middle. The doors were fastened by a lock, which now hung open.

McIntyre, at sight of such shining splendor, rubbed his chin thoughtfully. "Never realized science was so clean," he said. "Thought messing with test tubes was a nasty business."

"Where do we start?" Phil asked. "And what do we hunt?"

"We start at the cabinet and we hunt cyanide."

I grunted. "You don't think your smart murderer is leaving cyanide scattered around loose, do you?"

"What would you do, Elsie, if you were a murderer and had some cyanide to dispose of in a hurry?"

I opened my eyes widely. "Sort of a 'purloined letter' business, you mean? You believe he hid it here in the laboratory, where it wouldn't be noticed among the other poisons?"

"Elsie, I apologize!" He made me a sweeping bow. "You do have a brain in your head, after all! Only sometimes you use it, but mostly you don't!"

"Good Lord!" exclaimed Phil, examining the interior of the cabinet. "There's enough stuff in here to kill off an army!" Row upon row of squat-necked bottles faced us from the glass shelves. All were neatly labeled.

"We begin!" cried Mac, and began lifting the bottles one by one. I questioned helplessly: "How will we know cyanide if, and when, we find it?"

"It's rather colorless powder, Elsie, with a faint pinkish cast. And it smells of bitter almond."

"I know. I hope I don't stick my nose into it." I wrinkled that organ. "I don't want to have another sneezing fit."

"Well, it isn't here!" Mac sighed some time later. "Foiled again, my hearties!" He twisted an imaginary mustache. "Guess I'm slipping, children." He strolled to the windows and peered down into the yard below. "By golly!"

"Eh?" Phil ran around the table. "What?"

"That!" Mac pointed downward. All I could see was a shabby, bursting barrel stuffed with trash and papers. "Come on!" he shouted. "We're going to investigate that trash pile!"

For a Perfect Wedding Be Sure of Details

Perfect—that's the way you want your wedding, whether a grand affair or a simple one. And so it will be, when you know answers to questions of etiquette, dress, budgeting.

How many attendants? For an elaborate wedding you may have as many as 10 bridesmaids, a maid of honor. Their dresses are in the same general style as your own, with dainty hats or wreath headdresses, bouquets to harmonize. Attendants usually buy own dresses, the bride may buy accessories.

The groom selects enough ushers to take care of guests. At a formal daytime ceremony they wear cutaways, striped trousers like the groom and best man.

But at a very informal wedding the bride has only one attendant, wearing like herself a simple afternoon dress or suit, a hat, gloves and corsage. Best man and ushers, if any, dress like the groom—in business suits, with ties and accessories uniform.

What are the duties of a best man, a maid of honor? How should guests be seated at the ceremony? These and other perplexing questions are answered in our 32-page booklet. Tells who pays for the various items, the bride's family or groom. Gives etiquette for the entire ceremony, reception.

Send 15c in coins or stamps for your copy of PLANNING AND BUDGETING YOUR WEDDING to Examiner, Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

DOROTHY DIX

ARE wives responsible for their husbands' philandering? A man thinks that they are. He says: "Every married woman wants to keep her husband not only lawfully, but companionately; yet, nevertheless, nine times out of ten, when a married man wanders away from his own fireside it is the wife's fault.

"I have a friend, for instance, a fine chap who has been married several years and has one child of whom he is extremely fond, yet he has been unfaithful to his wife virtually ever since he was married and has spent the money on outsiders that is needed in his home. He admits that his wife is very good to him and stuck with him when he was financially down. But he doesn't get the companionship at home that he he so desires, so he hunts for it outside.

"I know of another case where a young man is married and has two lovely children and thinks the world of his wife and kids. His wife works right alongside of him in business, and she has a very congenial personality and is nice to get along with, but all the same he is a stepper-out.

"Why does he do it? Because something is lacking at home. Something he wants that his wife doesn't give him. And it is up to every married woman to find out what this intangible something is and supply it, for that is the only way they can stop their husbands from philandering. Men really are domestic animals and would much rather spend their evenings at their own firesides if their wives would make home as entertaining and peppy as night clubs are.

"Goodness knows, I am not defending steppers-out," said this man in conclusion. "I am just telling wives why their husbands roam, and that it is their own fault when they do."

Being a woman, and hence wise to the faults and frailties of my sex, I am willing to admit that there are wives who drive their husbands away from home and to the "other women" by their nagging and complaining and fault-finding; by their being so slouchy that no man can bear to look at them, and by their being so dull and stupid that their husbands have to flee for thir lives to keep from being bored to death.

The model wife is just as likely to get a husband with a wandering foot as is her sister who is an example of everything a wife shouldn't be. All of us know women who are pretty and sweet, amiable, intelligent and crackerjack housewives whose husbands break their hearts with their affairs. We wonder why these husbands are not content with the blessings God has given them. But they are not. And perhaps they don't know why themselves.

So the answer to the question of why husbands philander is that that is the way they were made. The call of the wild is in their blood. Never as long as they live in captivity are they thoroughly domesticated and house-broken. No woman, no matter how beautiful and talented, brilliant and diplomatic she may be, can hold one of these male butterflies.

He will always flit from woman to woman, tiring of each as soon as her novelty has worn off, forever on the quest for something new. He has no depth of feeling, no loyalty, no sense of responsibility, nothing of what we call character and principle. He is as faithless to his mistresses as he is to his wife. His only interest in love is in playing the game.

To say that such men are driven to philandering by their wives is untrue and absurd. They are driven to it by their own unstable, adventurous natures. And the pity of it is that they do not recognize this themselves and refrain from marrying. It would save many a wife a broken heart.

DEAR MISS DIX—I am 30 years old. Have been working for the last ten years in the office of a doctor, who is 60 years old. He is very much in love with me. He says he never intends to marry me, but he doesn't want me to have any friends, or to go out with any boy. My sister, who lives in a large city, wants me to come and live with her and tells me she can get me a job with the firm for which she works. Of course, I am not in love with the doctor, but I am getting older every day and want to marry and settle down. What do you advise? JEANETTE.

ANSWER:

Go at once to your sister. That is a Heaven-sent opportunity to get out of the rut you are in, away from your doctor, and to take a fresh start in life in a new environment. Even if your employer wanted to marry you, he is much too old for you. Thirty years is too great a difference in age between a husband and wife, especially in these times when so many of our customs, thoughts, habits and manners have been revolutionized, and when an old husband would be continually finding fault with a young wife because her ideas were not as pre-war as his.

The doctor has frankly told you that he does not intend to marry you, but he is shutting you off from all chances of marrying any other man. That is a horribly unfair and unjust thing for him to do, and you should not let him make you the victim of his selfishness and jealousy.

Another reason for changing your environment is that you will make new acquaintances and among them you may find Mr. Right. A strange girl coimng into any new circle always attracts attention. There is something fresh and novel about her that piques men's interest in her, as you will realize when you recall how many girls you know who marry away from home.

* * * *

DEAR DOROTHY DIX—A man who is twelve years older than I am and who is very settled in all of his habits wants to marry me. I am very kiddish and like to have a good time. In fact, that is all I think about. Do you think we will be happy and congenial if we marry? HELENE.

ANSWER:

Certainly not. You would be miserable and probably divorced in a year. No girl should marry until she has had her playtime of life and is ready to settle down and be a fireside companion. DOROTHY DIX.

GOODNIGHT STORY

By MAX TRELL

Knarf and Hanid, the shadows with the turned-about names, went to visit their good friend, Mother Goose. Usually Mother Goose was very cheerful. But to-day she sat in her old rocking chair with her knitting on her lap and looked very sad.

"What's the matter?" Knarf said. "You don't seem very happy."

"It's Little Bo-Peep I'm worried about," she said.

Lost Her Sheep?

"You mean because she's lost her sheep? She'll find them again," Knarf said. "Just you wait and see."

"What's the matter?"

But Mother Goose sighed. "Dear me! She's always losing them and finding them again. But one of these days she won't find them again. And then poor Little Bo-Peep will be without her sheep."

The two shadow-children were silent for a moment or two. Then all at once Knarf exclaimed: "Oh! I've got an idea! I know how to keep Little Bo-Peep's sheep from getting lost!"

Mother Goose looked up quickly.

"Yes—I know just the way. How many sheep are there?"

"Dozens and dozens," answered Mother Goose.

"And now I'd like to know how many children live-in-the-shoe?"

"Why!—dozens and dozens. There are just as many children as there are sheep in Bo-Peep's flock. In fact, there are so many children living-in-the-shoe that their mother doesn't know what to do."

"Well, I know what to do with them. Let every one of them take care of one of Little Bo-Peep's sheep. Then they'll never get lost."

"Why!" said Mother Goose, smiling for the first time, "that's a wonderful idea. I don't know why no one ever thought of it before. The children who live-in-the-shoe will have something to do, and Little Bo-Peep's sheep will never get lost. It settles two of our troubles at one time. Thank you, my dear — thank you!" And Mother Goose gave Knarf a kiss, and gave Hanid another, and then hurried out, as happy as can be.

Looking Back
On This Date

On this date (March 3) in 1913 there began the famous blockade of the Borden naval aid bill, which lasted until the 15th, with the exception of a recess over the intervening Sunday. The House in continuous session for two weeks created a new record up to that time for disorder. Clause 2 was supposed to be non-contentious, but the Liberals, determined to delay passage as long as possible, waged a bitter debate, until midnight on the 3rd. Then Sir Wilfrid Laurier asked for an adjournment; Prime Minister Borden asked that progress be reported. This was refused then and twice later, and it was then evident that the House was in for at least an all-night sitting. Few anticipated more; but the opposition decided on a blockade; the Conservatives decided upon a fight to a finish ;and so the talk and excitement went on until 2 a.m. on Sunday morning, March 9, when it was decided not to break the Sabbath.

The struggle was renewed Monday, March 10. With a view to impressing the urgency of the situation, Mr. Borden read a memorandum from Mr. Winston Churchill, first lord of the admiralty. The Liberals ridiculed this document and the talk went on with nerves at such a ragged edge that at times there was danger of personal bodily conflict between the members. Disorder reached its climax on March 15. At one time all the Liberal members were on their feet. Michael Clark, of Red Deer, was "named" by the Speaker, and the Prime Minister drew up a motion for his explusion, but "Red Michael" apologized and was not expelled.

Looking back on this historic struggle Sir Robert Borden said in his Memoirs: "I am satisfied it was a mistake to carry out our tactics during the second week. We were determined to make it manifest to the country that there was systematic and organized, obstruction. I am convinced that the second week added little, if anything, to aid our cause in that regard. During that week the nerves of members on both sides were so frayed by excxitement, strain and exhaustion that they had, to a great extent, lost their self-control."

It became evident that closure would have to be resorted to. It was, and led to more exciting times, which will be recalled in due course.

Royal Ovation

LONDON, March 3.—(CP-Havas)—The King and Queen received an ovation when they attended the performance last night of Moliere's "L'Ecole Des Maris" and De Musset's "Le Chandelier."

The orchestra played "God Save The King," and "La Marseillaise," upon the entry of sovereigns into the royal box. The queen wore a white satin gown with gold sequins and a diamond tiara.

Woman Assessor

BRACEBRIDGE, Ont., March 3.—(CP)—Miss Phyllis Kaye was appointed assessor of Monck Township yesterday in succession to her father, the late J. Byron Kaye. She is believed to be the only woman assessor in Ontario.

As a result of the invasion of China, people of Japan are turning from fiction to books on industry.

We Noticed

....Witty males who have jested for years about women's funny hats will be busy looking at the giddy creations created by shoe designers for spring wear that they won't even notice headwear this year.

....Shoe firms of the middle west displayed 1939 spring and summer styles recently that made even shoe buyers gulp over the riotous colors. A popular color effect was achieved with the new wines that have a decided blush cast. Names of shades differed with designers from grape to chokeberry.

....Shoe designers this year are evidently following the trend of bathing suit makers—and exposing more and more. Feet will peep through cut-outs and coarse mesh, and in many of the shoes toes and heels are exposed to the breezes.

Imagination Is Required For Chinese Dishes

(By Mary Moore)

Many an expert Chinese cook will look on these recipes with a doubtful eye but on reading them will find no changes have been made from the authentic methods unless the recipe called for such impossible things as birds' nests or shark's fins!

Chow Mein

Boil one-half pound of narrow-width noodles in plenty of water without salt. When tender drain well. Fry in cooking oil or lard (about 2 or 3 tablespoons) with 1 teaspoon salt—if they are not turned too much a fine gold crust will form on the bottom. When nicely fried turn out on large hot platter.

Now the "fixin's" that go on top of this can be any number of things but the following is most popular: 1 cup meat raw or cooked cut in strips, 1 onion chopped fine, 1 stalk celery cut fine, ¼ cup canned mushrooms. Mix the meat with ½ teaspoon cornstarch, ½ teaspoon salt and 1 tablespoons soy bean sauce (this sauce is used in practically every savory Chinese dish—much as we use salt—it is made from soy beans which have been soaked and allowed to sour or ferment in the soaking water—these are then pickled in brine—which in turn is strained to make it into a sauce.) Fry the meat, mix until heated through, then add the vegetables, cooking 2 or 3 minutes. Cook two or three minutes before adding a small sauce made of 1 teaspoon cornstarch, 1½ tablespoons soy sauce, 1 teaspoons sugar, and 1-3 cup water. Bring this whole mixture to a boil and pour it over the noodles and serve at once.

Ju Yook Chop Suey.

(Pork Chop Suey)

Twelve oz. bean sprouts, 2 oz. dried mushrooms, 4 oz. bamboo shoots, 6 oz. onion, ½ oz. lichen (I don't know with what to replace this), 8 oz. pork, salt, cornflour water. (Use plain tap water instead), sesame oil (corn oil will have to do), stock, sugar, Soy sauce.

You will have to purchase your dried mushrooms at the nearest Chinese restaurant.

Soak the mushrooms in hot water for 15 minutes, then cut in halves. Cut the bamboo shoots, the meat, the onion in pieces. Sprinkle a little salt in the hot oiled pan, put in the bamboo shoots, the onions, mushrooms and cook for 1 minute. Next add the bean sprouts, and again cook for 1 minute. Lastly add the meat, the water, a few drops of Chinese sauce (soy sauce), and stir for a minute. Add 1 cup meat stock, a little sugar, and few drops of oil. Cook for 1 minute and serve with Soy Sauce.

Gum Lu

(Goden Cakes)

Sift together 1½ cups rice flour (wheat flour will do if it is impractical for you to use rice flour), and a pinch of salt. Into this stir 3 tablespoons melted chicken or goose fat (cooking oil or butter would do). Add ¼ cup finely ground nuts. Then stir in the beaten yolks of 2 eggs and mix well. Stir in 1 cup honey. If mixture is too thin add more flour. Stir for at least 15 minutes. Pour into small cake pans (muffin tins would do if well greased) bake slowly 2 hours.

Fish Cooked Very Poorly By Majority Of People

(By MARY MOORE)

We have some friends who agree to disagree over fish just as we do —so when we invite them to dinner our feminine friend and I have either boiled salmon with a rich egg sauce or baked halibut with lemon — and our husbands satisfy their inner cravings with steaks.

I admit I love fish—but it seems to me that the majority of people cook it poorly.

There is a seeming paradox in fish cookery—when it is baked the oven should be heated to 500 deg. Fahr. When it is boiled it should be done at simmering point. I'll explain this inconsistency in the recipes.

However, neither of these methods are what cooks commonly resort to —I'll wager that in nine homes out of ten if fish were to be served to you during Lent it would be fresh—pan-fried too—not deep fat fried, which method is so much more palatable.

Since we are obliged to bow to the inevitable and everyone has not time to wait for an oven to heat to 500 deg. Fahr. no inclination to change from his old habits, let's pan fry them the best possible way.

Most Fish Is Overcooked.

Generally speaking cooks tend to overcook fish, which dries it out and gives it a certain poor reputation which requires all the power we food-propagandists can muster to lay it low.

There is a gelatinous substance in the tissues of fish that is called albumin—very similar to the white of an eggs. You all know how fast hot cooking will make the white of an egg hard and rubbery. Overcooking will do the same to fish—making it dry and hard to digest.

If either eggs or fish are cooked properly the white albuminous substance is delicately soft and creamy and easy to digest and pleasant to taste.

Fish should be cooked only long enough to "set" this substance and no more, just as the white of an egg is "set" when it is done. At this point each flake of the fish may be pulled apart into loose folds, which contain such an abundance of the fishs flavorful juice.

Actually fish takes a very short time to cook—for instance take the now-famous Spencer method with fish fillets:

Mrs. Spencer's Oven Method For Fish Fillets.

Two lbs. of filleted fish will serve six people.

I enjoy describing this method for I have seen Mrs. Spencer do it, and her very air made fish seem like ambrosia for the gods—which it was fit for when she was finished with it.

Cut the fillets into portions three to a pound and place on your left hand. Next a bowl containing the milk in which it is to be dipped—flavored with at least 1 tablespoon salt to each cup of milk. On the right side are a shallow dish containing finely sifted crumbs (preferably cracker) and the oiled baking pan.

With the left hand dip the fish in the bowl of milk, then into the crumbs. With the right hand cover the fish with the crumbs and place it in the baking pan. Keep the right hand for the dry work, the left hand for the wet—thus the crumbs are kept dry.

Sprinkle the fish in the pan with drops of oil or melted fat—they can be daubed with a pastry brush.

The oven temperature should be from 500 to 600, which is very hot indeed, but will cook your fish in 10 minutes. It will not burn—but do not add water. If the heat has been right the fish may be lifted from the pan when done and the pan will be quite clean underneath. Lift to hot platter, garnish with parsley, and serve immediately, with lemon.

To Boil Fish.

My advice to you is never to boil fish unless you are prepared to make a rich sauce to serve over it.

To insure the fish remaining intact, no breaking or rough edges, we think fish should be wrapped in cheesecloth or cooking parchment for boiling. First cut it into pieces for serving—this overcomes having to cut it when done when the edges often pull and become very ragged. Wrap the pieces in each cloth—either separately or two to each piece—just so they can be laid flat on bottom of kettle. Have water boiling—plunge fish into it, let boil 2 minutes, then add 1 pint cold water and reduce heat so that fish simmers only. Allow 6 to 10 minutes for each pound of fish—fillets require 6—large pieces of fish such as a 2-lb. piece from the centre of a salmon requires at least 25 minutes for the whole piece. To give the fish good flavor add salt—about 2 teaspoons—and ¼ cup vinegar to the water. To make the fish easy to take up a shallow pan is most efficient.

Pan-Fried Fish (Sauteed).

To 1 cup flour add 2 teaspoons salt and mix well. Dip each piece of fish in the flavored flour. Have the pan hot containing 3 tablespoons frying oil. When one side is golden turn and brown other side. A one-inch fillet of fish fried at medium temperature requires about 8 minutes in the pan altogether—to test it pull it apart at the thickest section with 2 forks—if it is creamy white throughout it is done and should be removed from pan immediately.

Mock Hollandaise Sauce.

Three tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons flour, 1 cup boiling water, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, ½ teaspoon salt, speck cayenne, 2 well-beaten eggs. Melt the butter in top of double boiler, then add the flour and six. Pour in the boiling water while stirring and add salt and cayenne and lemon juice. Stir until it thickens and let stand over very low heat until just before serving time. Then beat eggs and pour mixture over them while stirring, reheat and serve immediately. This is best served with boiled fish, but is good with any fish. Of course it is also good with vegetables such as spinach, broccoli, cauliflower, etc.

Welsh Society Holds Ninth Annual Banquet

In toast and song the members and friends of St. David's Welsh Society gathered at the Y.M.C.A. on Wednesday evening to honor their patron saint, Saint David.

The occasion was the ninth annual banquet of the society, and although illness prevented many from attending, a goodly number of friends were present.

President Vivian Mills presided as toast master, and extended a cordial welcome to the gathering, mentioning particularly the guests of the evening, Rev. T. H. Floyd and Mrs. Floyd of St. George's Church, and Rev. J. L. Hughes, Mrs. Hughes and their daughter Eileen of Brighton. Mr. Hughes was first president of the organization. The Caledonian Club was represented by Mrs. O. Sugden and Mrs. Shadgett.

The tables were attractively decorated with daffodils, the floral emblem of Wales, and everyone present wore a daffodil, which was presented at the door. The Welsh flag formed a background for the head table.

Following the banquet, Mr. Mills called on the gathering to honor a toast to "The King." The toast to "Wales" was ably expressed by Mrs. R. Jones, who spoke of the contribution the Welsh people had made to the world in music, art and literature, as well as in great men. The speaker mentioned the fact that there are 86,000 Welshmen in the United States, and that at least 12 of the signatures to the American Declaration of Independence were Welshmen. The discovery of steel wool, a product much in use to-day, was made by a Welshman. A reference was also made to the National Eisteddfod (which means a session of song), where Welshmen from all the world gather annually to compete in art, literature and music. A poet is crowned and a bard is chaired annually, therefore Wales could not honor any one poet. Part singing was originated in Wales in the year 1188. The whole assembly then rose and sang the Welsh National anthem, "Mac Hen Wlad fy Nhadan," ("Land of My Fathers").

The toast to "Canada" was then taken, followed by the singing of "O Canada," after which Rev. T. H. Floyd responded. He took his listeners on an imaginary trip through Canada, mentioning each province in turn, and spoke of the contribution each made to Canada. He spoke of the rich resources of their country, but reminded them that Canada has something more than this in men of character, and urged a strong and united Canada to meet the present world conditions.

The toast to "Our Society," concluded the toast-list, and the assembly sang "The More We Are Together." Rev. J. L. Hughes then was called to respond, and he spoke of the work of the society. He stresesd the reasons that first inspired the Welsh people of Peterborough to organize. They felt the need of maintaining the spirit of fellowship and loyalty among Welshmen of Peterborough and district, and told of the contribution they could make towards a better community, country and empire. He emphasized the fact that we are a group within the empire and loyal to the British flag, and stated that in Canada there is no room for national societies living under protection of the British flag which had not the interests of the empire at heart. He urged the society to keep striving to maintain the original ideals of the organization, and although small in numbers, to make up in enthusiasm.

Greetings were received from the St. David's Societies of Buffalo and Toronto, also from the National Gymanfa Ganu of Buffalo. Mr. R. Hendry expressed the good wishes of the Caledonian Club.

The musical part of the program was very enjoyable, and included several Welsh airs in the Welsh tongue. The program was as follows: Solos by Gladys Mills, Mrs. W. J. Davies, Mr. A. Kirkcaldy, Mr. R. Hendry, Mr. J. Cairns and Mr. R. Evans. Recitations by Miss Q. Hope, euphonium solo by Mr. A. Hempstead. The accompanist for the evening was Miss Frances Wells.

Following the program, several Welsh hymns were sung in Welsh by all present, Mrs. J. L. Hughes at the piano. A very successful banquet closed with the singing of "God Save the King."

Husband Hunt Undertaken By German Girls

Gretel and Lisl and lots of other German girls are taking part in the biggest man-hunt the Reich has ever known. For the girls want husbands, and want them quickly.

For them, this year is leap-year. In Munich alone, it is estimated, every eligible bachelor has received at least three marriage proposals.

The reason for this marriage rush is the conscription of female labor in Germany to make up the serious labor shortage.

Only married women are exempt from the various jobs which German girls are now forced to take at certain ages. Girls are taken from their families to work on farms; others are warned that if they refuse jobs as maidservants they will be sent to labor camps.

In Vienna the number of marriages since the Anschluss has almost trebled, and the first "Hitler babies" are now arriving.

Some of the newly wed Hitler couples have been bitterly disappointed, because husbands lost their jobs in party organization in the recent purge of petty Nazi officialdom.

A large number of enthusiastic young Nazi husbands, who enjoyed parading in uniforms and collecting a nice salary for little work, resent being sent to work in arms factories and other industries, where they receive only small wages.

Miss L. Stoneham Given Bon Voyage Party

In honor of Miss Lillian Stoneham, who leaves shortly for an extended trip abroad, a delightful surprise party was held this week at the Richard Hall Store by members of the staff.

Games and contests were enjoyed, and during the evening Miss Stoneham was presented with a Langmuir bag. The presentation was made by Miss Ida Taylor, and an address was read by Miss Ida Crossland. Mr. C. Saunders spoke briefly of the high regard in which Miss Stoneham is held by her business associates, expressing his hope that her journey be a pleasant and happy one.

The table, at which coffee was poured by Mrs. J. McIntyre and Miss M. Pinning, was centred with a green shamrock, and lit with tall green tapers.

Among those present were Mr. C. Saunders, Mr. and Mrs. J. McIntyre, Mr. and Mrs. R. Davidson, Mrs. A. White, Mrs. M. Thirnbeck, the Misses W. Saunders, D. Saunders, J. Rose, G. Sharpe, M. Vance, M. How Women in Their 40's Can Attract Men

Here's good advice for a woman during her change (usually from 38 to 52), who fears she'll lose her appeal to men, who worries about hot flashes, loss of pep, dizzy spells, upset nerves and moody spells.

Just get more fresh air, 8 hrs. sleep and if you need a reliable "WOMAN'S" tonic take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made especially for women. It helps Nature build up physical resistance, thus helps give more vivacity to enjoy life and assist calming jittery nerves and those disturbing symptoms that often accompany change of life.

Pinkham's is WELL WORTH trying.

Wife Preservers

It is economical for a man to own several suits of clothes at a time. They will need less pressing and last longer, for resting a suit between wearings allows the wool to regain its shape.

McArthur Rink Wins Neill Cup To Conclude District 'Spiel

Tom McArthur, who piloted his rink through the schedule to win the honors of Group A, came through with 8 points in the dying ends of the Neill Trophy final, to snatch victory from Ross Downey's quartette, by the smallest margin possible, one shot.

E. Northey, Lakefield, took first prize in the consolation event, with G. Cairs of the local club coming in second.

It has been a long time since so much interest and enthusiasm has been shown in a bonspiel, as there was in the one that came to a successful ending last evening; with 38 rinks entered from our local club and the surrounding district, and playing nearly every night since Monday, Feb. 20. One is almost reminded of the famous Winnipeg 'spiel that takes weeks to finish.

A Big Crowd

So great was the crowd that not a seat was available and standing room was at a premium. Even Peterborough's three outstanding bachelors, Ross Dobbin, Bill Campbell, and Bruce Scott, passed up their social obligations to secure a ring side seat.

As for the final game itself it was chuck full of everything that makes a game good from a spectators point of view. Good shots, bad shots, many chances missed, and many a good shot made.

In the Consolation final, the Lakefield boys had things pretty well their own way. George Cairns, who, according to the rules of the game, had to play with three men, put up a good fight, but the handicap was just a little too much.

Taking it all in all it was one of the best spiels staged by the curling club. The co-operation of the curlers was greatly appreciated and to all those who helped to make it a success, the club is greatly indebted.

We expect to hold our regular bonspiel tomorrow at 1.45.

Orfuns Eliminated By Quinte Cagers

Running wild in the final quarter, after being held even for three quarters of the game, Belleville "Y" girls bombarded the locals' basket to win 37-19, eliminate the Orfuns and go into the Ladies' Lakeshore League finals against C.G.E. The locals had a 10-4 lead in the first quarter, and were ahead 14-11 at the half, but Belleville from then on gave the Orfuns but 5 points, scoring 20 themselves.

Belleville had a 17-16 edge at three-quarter time and from then on broke away time and again while the Orfuns were striving to tie it up, and were going away at the end as the Orfuns' defence literally fell apart.

The teams looked about on even terms most of the way, but Belleville's last quarter explosion earned them the win. There were 23 fouls called on the teams by Referee K. Gillespie and Umpire J. Andrews, 14 on the Orfuns and 9 on Belleville. Belleville made 3 throws and the Orfuns but one in 12 tries. All the winners shared in the scoring, B. Shorey and A. Cruji starring, with B. Blade and R. Ellis best for the Orfuns.

The teams:

Orfuns (19) —A. Livingstone, R. Ellis (2), J. Dawson, L. Magee (1), B. Blade (12), G. Mortimer (4), S. Levine (2), B. Bestard, J. Weir.

Belleville (37).—M. Maclean (6), B. Shorey (8), A. Cruji (.0), M. Hitchon (7), L. Melchior (4), M. Sharpe, M. Rowbotham (2), M. Miller.

Junior Playoffs Again Tied Up

St. Paul's sewed up the Church Hockey League junior finals at two games apiece with a 2-1 nod in overtime over All Saints last night at All Saints' rink. The game was on poor ice and play close but not too classy. St. Paul's scored in the first when Watson tallied. All Saints had an edge in the second with G. Smith scoring. The Presbyterians pressed hard in the third but failed to break it, while late in overtime. J. Easton took a pass from Watson in close to get the deciding marker. Both goals looked smart in a tight tilt, while the unrelieved defences went good. Leether was off on a penalty when the goal was sunk. The scorers shaded the other scrappy forwards a trifle. The teams:

St. Paul's: Goal, McBride; defence, J. McMillan, Dundas; centre, J. Eston; wings, Watson, Lockington; subs, Dunford.

Referee—L. Parnell.

TWEED, March 3. — Trouncing Trenton on their own ice Wednesday night, Tweed pucksters ended the regular Trent Valley season in the blaze of glory and came within one point of tying Campbellford for second position. Since Norwood defeated Stirling 6-1, they definitely assured themselves of fourth place, with Trenton remaining in fifth just outside the charmed play-off circle.

It is understood that Trenton will not play their one remaining game with Madoc as it will mean no change change in the present standing of the clubs.

	Points
Madoc MicMacs	29
Campbellford	23
Tweed	23
Norwood	20
Trenton	17
Stirling	7

Mark St. Champions Of Juvenile Series

Mark Street pulled out a 6-5 win over George Street last night to retai ntheir Church Hockey League Juvenile title, this being the second straight final victory for them in the playoffs. On slow ice, the game was tight throughout, with Scriver scoring the winning goal with seconds left to play. It was tied at the end of the first 1-1, Eason and E. Routley tallying. Mark Street had a 5-2 bulge to end the second, Eascn scoring three and Robinson one, while Woodgate tallied for George Street. The latter gang put on a drive in the third, with E. Routley, Hamilton and Woodgate scoring tie it up, till Scriver put in the winner. Eason's speed was a dominating feature, with Agnew, Curtis and Scriver also smart. Earl Routley went best for the losers, with Hamilton, Richardson and Henry standing out. Teams:

Mark Street.—Goal, Ralph; defence, Scriver, Agnew; centre, Curtis; wings, Robinson, D. Eason; sub., Harris.

George Street.—Goal, Richardson; defence, Woodgate, Saunders; centre, E. Routley; wings, Hamilton, Henry; subs., Roberts, Craig, L. Routley, Armstrong, Powell.

Referee—Ken Johnson.

George St. Team Sews Up Finals

George St. Bantams took a 3-1 Church Hockey League final win over St. John's last night at All Saints' rink to even up the bantam series. It was a tight shinny match on slow ice with both squads short due to the 'flu. The losers had a good share of the play with Quirt being busier in goal than Moore. There was no count in the first frame while Carter and Smith for George St., and Frank for St. John's counted in the second. St. John's tried hard in the third but were beaten when Greatrix slapped in Smith's rebound. Frank and Smith starred with Greatrix, Coones and Carter also good. Kingdon and Clarke worked hard. Next game is 7.00 p.m. Saturday. The teams:

George St.: Goal, Quirt; defence, Powell, Smith; centre, Greatrix; wings, Morrow, Carter; subs., Young, Kingdon.

St. John's: Goal, Moore; defence, Frank, Farrow; centre, Clarke; wings, Graham, Coones.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER
By SHEPARD BARCLAY
"The Authority on Authorities"

YOU ARE DULY WARNED

YOU HAVE NO excuse for kicking about the hard luck of finding bunched trumps against you, if the bidding of one opponent has advertised to you the length of his partner's holding. That is just what he has done if he has made bids of three other suits. At the most he can have only one trump himself, and he is more likely to have none if he has bid the other suits in irregular order. In that case, he probably has five cards of his first bid and four each in the others.

A bid of 1-Club by West started the suit-showing on this deal. After two passes, South doubled, whereupon West bid 1-Heart, North 1-Spade, South 2-Spades and West 3-Diamonds. This bid should have made it clear to North that West, an accurate shower of his suit lengths, had five clubs and four each of his other suits, so that he was completely void in spades. Whatever spades were out against North, East had them all. North, however, bid 3-Spades and East doubled, counting on his powerful partner to pick off a lot of side tricks and also to be able to double any takeout.

This contract was defeated two tricks, for a very bad score to North and South, and a very good one to East and West. At another table of the same tournament, the bidding went exactly the same up to the point of West's 3-Diamond bid, whereupon the opponents passed and managed to set that contract a trick.

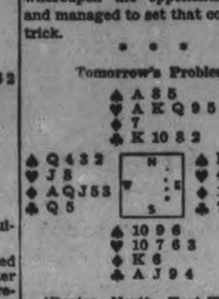
Tomorrow's Problem



(Dealer. North. East-West vulnerable.)

Why should a bid of clubs along the way by South discourage North from going to a slam in hearts, instead of encouraging him?

C.B.C. Not Part Of Government Or The Civil Service Board Chairman Tells Committee

OTTAWA, March 3.—(CP)—The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation is not part of the Government of Canada or the Civil Service, Leonard W. Brockington of Winnipeg, chairman of the C.B.C. board of governors, told the House of Commons radio committee as it opened hearing Thursday.

The position taken by the C.B.C. Board with regard to its duties was outlined by Mr. Brockington. Confusing statements were frequently heard in public discussion which indicated that this position was not always clearly understood.

"We are not part of the Government of Canada; we are not civil servants nor a part of the civil service," Mr. Brockington said. "We don't expend the taxpayers money, except in the matter of capital expenditures advanced by the Dominion government.

"We are trustees of the payers of licenses. These include Canadians of French and English language, Liberals, Conservatives, Social Crediters, members of the C.C.F. and of many other organizations."

Gov't Only Names Board

The government was responsible only for the appointment of the board and for the supervision that had been placed with the minister by the order-in-council authorized by the Radio Act.

Parliament was responsible for the act.

"For all other matters we alone are responsible," Mr. Brockington said.

The board of governors had never been swayed by any considerations of a political or partisan character. Nothing had ever been refused by the board on political or partisan grounds. No political pressure had ever been applied to the board at any time. If any were attempted it would always be resisted, said Mr. Brockington.

"Our administration officials have been instructed accordingly," he said. "In so saying I hope no one will think there is any attempt on our part to usurp authority. I look on that statement as a statement of plain duty entrusted to us by parliament and accepted by us."

Mr. Brockington defined his conception of the function and duty of operators of private radio stations in this country.

Such operators enjoyed a right to occupy the public domain and, in effect, owned a franchise for that purpose, he said. Therefore every private station was as much a trustee for all classes of listeners as the C.B.C.

Public Utility

Such operations were, he contended, in the nature of a public utility, granted the use of public property, highly regulated and with a limitation of the profit permissible and surplus profits going back into the service. The railways were limited to a 10 per cent. profit. Other utilities were limited to a reasonable return on their investment.

The C.B.C. had no intention or desire to prevent reasonable profit on operations of private stations, he said. But the C.B.C. did not want profiteering in radio broadcasting.

He said he believed some representatives of private broadcasting station who would come before the committee were making a "tremendous profit" on the capital invested in their stations. They were going to attack the C.B.C. before the committee with a view ultimately to increasing their own profit.

Mr. Brockington told the committee it was his hope that legislation would be introduced in the near future limiting the profit permissible in broadcasting.

Best System In World

When all arrangements the C.B.C. had in hand, were completed Canada would have the best system in the world, inasmuch as the corporation would be able to tap the best programs of both the United States and Great Britain, in addition to its own sustaining programs. These conditions would contribute greatly to increasing national unity.

Mr. Brockington sketched to the committee the establishment of a community broadcasting station at Yorkton, Sask. A unique arrangement had been made. The station's equipment would be up-to-date, and its board of directors would be responsible to the local board of trade.

Four hours broadcasting a day would be devoted to educational and cultural purposes, conveying information to the farmers on matters relating to agricultural methods. There would be complete fairness as between parties in the expression of opinion and ther would be no concentration on publicity relating to any particular form of grain marketig. A sum of $300 a year would be paid to the Yorkton Board of Trade for a period, rising to $500 a year, for the provision of scholarships.

The corporation was tackling the problem of giving adequate coverage to all the people of Canada. In 1936 less than 60 per cent of the population were served. This year this figure would rise to 85 per cent.

Areas commanding special attention and which were difficult to deal with for a variety of reasons, particularly because of expense and geography, were receiving consideration. Two areas inadequately served were southwestern Ontario and British Columbia.

Situation Will Improve

Southwestern Ontario was laboring under a sense of injustice and he was prepared to admit it was justified. Once Mexican interference was taken away the situation would improve. The Havana agreement of last year had been signed by all the countries except Mexico. The government had been asked to erect a 1,000 watt station out side Windsor. This would give 100 per cent coverage in this area.

The solution of the problem lay either in implementing the Havana agreement, on the part of Mexico, or in changing the wavelengths.

Mr. Brockington informed the committee that Newfoundland had recently instituted a national broadcasting system founded on that of Canada. A 12,500 watt station would be officially opened on March 13, and a hook up would be made with the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation system.

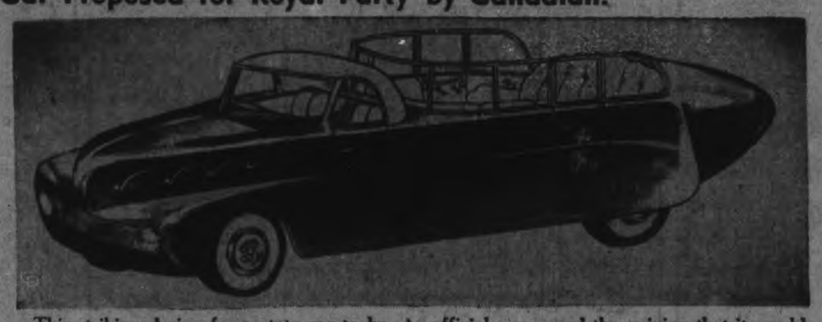
The fears formerly expressed that Canadian broadcasting was likely to become Americanized had not been realized, nor had the Canadian policy robbed National Broadcasting of its distinctive feature. Last month American programs occupied 16.2 per cent of the time on the Canadian system, which was only a small increase from 14.6 per cent in April, 1937.

Total revenue last year was estimated at $3,200,000 and actual collections promised to be almost exactly that amount when some adjustment in collections was made. Expenditures were $3,893,000, meeting all obligations including interest on all Government loans and debt retirement charges. After all obligations have been met, there will be a surplus of $275,000.

In December, 1938, music constituted 312 hours or 53 per cent. of total broadcast time; talks were 132 hours or 23 per cent.; variety, 52 hours, 8.8 per cent.; overseas, 29 hours, 4.9 per cent.; drama, 27 hours, 4.6 per cent.; children's programs, 18 hours, 3 per cent.; special events, 8 hours, 1.3 per cent.; Northern Messenger service, seven hours, 1.19 per cent.; public service, 1.3 hours.

Mr. Brockington said he did not see why time should not be made available to distressed persons seeking lost relatives, as was done by the B.B.C. Another possible innovation was a national advertising service in which names of products or manufacturers would not be mentioned, to promote consumption of Canadian products.

Car Proposed for Royal Party by Canadian.



This striking design for a state car to be used by the King and Queen during their visit to Canada, has been submitted to Ottawa authorities by Jack C. Wright of Toronto. The tonneau of this unusual car is protected by bullet-proof glass and has seating accommodation for seven.

Chase Nabs Lad In Threat Plot

BUFFALO, N.Y., March 3—(AP)—A 17-year-old youth was under arrest today after federal agents blocked an attempt to extort "several thousand dollars" from a prominent farmer with threats of harm to himself and his daughter, a Syracuse University student.

A Federal Bureau of Investigation agent, John Warnes, announced that Robert Case, 17 of Cuyler, had been arrested in connection with an attempt to extort money from Benjamin Lee, well known Cuyler farmer.

Warnes said Case admitted writing a letter threatening Lee with death and warning that his daughter, Barbara, 19, "would come up missing" unless the money was paid.

Case was arrested late last night after a foot race through a wood, when authorities closed in on him in an elaborate "pay-off trap."

The extortion letter told Lee to leave the money in a package near the "little bridge" at Cuyler, Warnes said.

When the time came for Lee to leave the money, automobiles filled with federal agents and deputy sheriffs ringed the payoff spot.

"A short time after Mr. Lee proceeded to the point of the payoff," Warnes said, "some one standing in the darkness nearby was heard to command Mr. Lee to drop the package of money."

As the command was given the officers closed in and arrested Case after a chase through the woods.

Persecuting Religion Abroad Not To Be Tolerated By U.S., Says Roosevelt

Propose To Keep Personal Freedom Alive By "Every Peaceful Means" In Lands Where Democracy Snuffed Out

WASHINGTON, March 4 (AP).—President Roosevelt declared today that the United States would not be passive and silent about the persecution of religion in lands where democracy had been snuffed out.

Instead, he told the United States Congress and a host of diplomatic representatives of foreign powers, America would seek 'by every peaceful means' to keep religious and personal freedom alive.

Addressing a joint session of the Senate and House of Representatives in commemoration of the first session of congress 150 years ago, Mr. Roosevelt denounced the return to the world in recent years "of forms of government which for 2,000 years have proved their tyranny and their instability."

The United States, with many other democracies, never would watch approvingly this return to "personal rule," he declared, continuing:

"Where democracy is snuffed out there, too, the right to worship God in one's own way is circumscribed or abrogated. Shall we by our passiveness, by our silence, by assuming the attitude of the Levite who pulled his skirts together and passed by on the other side, lend encouragement to those who today persecute religion or deny it?

"The answer to that is 'no', just as in the days of the first congress of the United States it was 'no'.

Believe In All Freedoms

"Not for freedom of religion alone does this nation contend by every peaceful means. We believe in the other freedoms of the bill of rights, the other freedoms that are inherent in the right of free choice by free men and women."

Returning to Washington this morning on the sixth anniversary of his first inaugural, the president was tanned and apparently rested from a Caribbean cruise that enabled him to watch the United States fleet engage in mock attack and defence off the Atlantic coast.

In his speech he called upon the government to "act as a whole" for the good of the country. And, with another of his reminders that this was not the "horse and buggy age," he said modern transportation and communication left "to no citizen an excuse for sectionalism, for delay in the execution of the public business of for a failure to maintain a full understanding of the acceleration of the processes of civilization."

Members of congress who had expected him to refer directly to the administration's current drive to reassure and encourage business were disappointed.

See No Solution In McMahon Correspondence

LONDON, March 4.—(CP-Havas)—Publication of the MacMahon correspondence, on which the Arabs base their claims for Palestine, will enliven the Palestine conference but will provide no basis for settlement of the issue, London newspapers agreed today.

The correspondence, exchanged in 1915-16 between Sir Henry MacMahon, then British high commissioner in Egypt, and Sherif Hussein of Mecca, who later became king of Hedjaz, was made public for the first time Friday in the form of a white paper.

Arabs claim the letters contain promises by Great Britain to grant independence to Palestine in return for Arab support against the Turkish empire and Germany. The traditional British interpretation has been that Palestine was not included in the areas the independence of which was promised to the Arabs.

The Daily Telegraph (Conservative) said that "beneath the florid exchanges and compliments translated now from their original Arabic nothing is clearer than Hussein's wish to make the widest possible claims for future territorial aggrandizement, as well as for munitions, provisions and money on the nail—unless it is the desire of the British representative to avoid a cut-and-dried apportionment of territory still at the time entirely in Turkish hands."

"Sir Henry is seen repeatedly, if politely, pointing out that Hussein has not sufficient control of the Arabs as a whole to prevent them from fighting on the German-Turkish side, as many continued, willingly or unwillingly, to do.

A Promise Claimed.

"Nonetheless, the high commissioner promised on Oct. 24, 1915, that Britain would recognize and support the independenceof the Arabs in all regions within the limits which the Sherif of Mecca demanded, but with the most important modifications that we would not act to the detriment of France and that "the two

Boy Rescues Two Sisters From Burning House

Arleen Moore, 3 (LEFT), and her sister, Jacqueline, 5 (RIGHT), were playing in their home at Newmarket when fire broke out. Their 10-year-old brother, Frank, was outside fetching coal. Seeing flames, he dashed into the houe, dragged Arleen out and sent her with Jacqueline to get help. Back into the house he went in hopeless effort to beat out the flames with his own hands. When help arrived the fire was out of control and the frame house almost destroyed.

McCann Advises Scientific Prison Approach

OTTAWA, March 4 — (CP). — A plea for a more scientific approach to the problems of crime and penitentiary administration was made in the House of Commons last night by Dr. J. J. McCann, Liebral-Renfrew South, as a result of a personal study of conditions in Kingston Penitentiary.

Dr. McCann spoke as the House considered Justice Minister Lapointe's bill to establish a three-man commission to manage Canadian penal institutions. He said he had spent some time at the big prison at Kingston in order to formulate some suggestions from the point of view of a medical doctor.

His suggestions included: greater segregation of convicts into different classes requiring distinct treatment;

Permanent confinement of hardened repeaters and sex-criminals for the protection of society;

Medical examination of all criminals on admission and correction of physical defects which contribute to criminal behavior.

Appointment of rehabilitation officers in al lpenitentiaries whose duties would be to study each individual convict and try to make arrangements for his establishment in society in advance of his release.

The bill received second reading and several sections were approved in committee of the whole.

Prison Populations

At the start of the debate, Mr. Lapointe gave the House a statistical picture of the prison population, in reply to requests made earlier, the minister gave the prison population and staff figures as follows, with staff figures in brackets:

Britain Rounds Up Country Homes For City Women, Children

LONDON, March 4—(CP-Havas).—The government plans to evacuate women and children from the large centres in the event of war, Walter Elliott, minister of health, told the House of Commons Thursday night. Reviewing the government's plans, the minister said an inquiry is in progress to list houses in every town which are ready to receive children and their mothers from the cities. Camps for children are also under consideration. He promised that evacuation would not be allowed to deteriorate into a disorderly exodus, and that children would be first to be evacuated.

He disclosed that on the initiative of the medical associations it had been possible to establish regional medical committees on which doctors desiring to serve the country were represented.

"We have bought 125,000 stretchers and distributed them and another 100,000 are being ordered," he said. "Arrangements are being made to buy central surgical equipment, drugs and dressings for hospitals, first-aid parties and posts."

Supplies Ordered

Mr. Elliot said the following orders for supplies had been placed: 12,000,000 bandages, 5,000,000 dressings, 13,000,000 yards of gauze, 204 tons of lint, 425 tons of cotton wool, and 1,500,000 yards of adhesive plaster.

The government hoped, he said, that at least 95 per cent or these orders would be delivered by the end of June. The total cost, he disclosed, had been estimated at more than £1,000,000 ($4,690,000) and included the cost of beds and bedding.

"We have bought 50,000 bedsteads and mattresses and another 50,000 are being ordered," he stated. "We have ordered 350,000 blankets for use in hospitals and first-aid posts and another 200,000 are being ordered."

3-Inch Goldfish Wins Freshman $10, He Swallowed It Alive

Cambridge, Mass., March 4 (AP)

LOTHROP WITHINGTON, a Harvard freshman, was $10 richer today because he swallowed a live goldfish on a bet. With 100 fellow students watching, Withington held the wriggling, three-inch fish aloft, opened his mouth and gulped. "The scales caught on my throat a bit as it went down," he commented.

Gandhi's Strike Stirs Markets

RAJKOT, India, March 4—(AP).—The health minister of the Bombay presidency flew here today to watch the health of Mohandas K. Gandhi as the frail, ascetic leader of millions of Indians entered the second day of his protest "fast unto death."

Gandhi slept peacefully thoroughout the night on a simple cot placed in the bright moonlight outside his hut. He apparently has suffered no ill effects thus far.

The Bombay stock exchange and cotton market closed today in protest at Gandhi's strike. Prices on other Indian stock exchanges declined.

Already in precarious health, the frail, 69-year-old spiritual leader hoped by his fifth hunger strike to persuade the native rule or Rajkot state, Thakore Saheb Shri Dharmendrasinhji, to introduce governmental reforms, including a "voice on the government" for the people of the western Indian state.

Gandhi sent a curt letter to Thakore Saheb demanding that a reforms committee meet immediately and that its recommendations be implemented a week after a decision is taken. He also said he would agree to revise the list of names of committeemen he had proposed.

Miss Sushila Nayar, his personal medical attendant, declared Gandhi's vitality was low because of the great strain under which he has been working recently.

Before he started his fast Gandhi advised his followers, who sang hymns with him, against imitating him.

"At a very early age I began fasting for self-purification," he said. "And in addition I have had the experience of priceless peace and unending joy. The weapon of fasting can easily savor of violence unless used by one skilled in the art. I claim to be such an artist."

Dunning Brands Debt Free Money 'Suicide'

OTTAWA, March 4—(CP). — A House of Commons vote is expected shortly on the question of whether Canada should adopt a Social Credit proposal to issue some $600,000,000 of "debt free" money—a course which Finance Minister Dunning describes as "national suicide."

Social Credit members expounded their theories yesterday on the formal resolution leading to legislation authorizing Mr. Dunning to borrow up to $750,000,000 to meet maturing obligations and for public works and other purposes. Almost the entire amount will be required for refunding.

J. C. Landeryou (S.C., Calgary East) moved an amendment which would add the provision that the loan authorized would be reduced of the maturing obligations payable of the mautring obligations payable in Canadian funds and that the Bank of Canada be authorized to issue "debt free" money sufficient for such repayments on redemptions.

It was indicated this would involve the issue of about $600,000,000 in new money. The resolution was not in order, but Mr. Dunning urged the new member to redraft it because he wanted the House's decision on record. Debt free money was defined as money which need not be repaid and on which no interest was paid.

People of Canada were becoming alarmed at the rapidly increasing debt, said Mr. Landeryou. He wondered if any provision was made for repayment. Mr. Landeryou read a newspaper report of a statement attributed to the present Defence Minister, Ian Mackenzie, in July, 1935, just before the last general election. Mr. Mackenzie was reported to have advocated a policy of increasing the note issue by $500,000,000 to be applied toward reduction of the national debt.

"I plead with the government, on behalf of the debt and poverty-ridden people, to take action toward fulfillment of its promise," Mr. Landeryou exclaimed. The government had promised to take control of currency and credit, and to reduce the debt burden.

"Is there no way to raise money except by debt and taxation?" "That is right," Finance Minister Dunning said. Mr. Landeryou declared the Liberal party had pledged itself to "battle the money powers" and to

Mild Handling Of Threats To French Colonies Brews Cabinet Split

Colonial Head Scores "Do Nothing" Policy As Blow To Nation's Prestige In Both Asia And North African Areas

By Taylor Henry (Associated Press Foreign Staff.)

PARIS, March 4 (AP).—An undercover fight in the French Cabinet over foreign policy was brought into the open today by what political sources described as a "violent attack" against Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet by Colonial Minister Georges Mandel.

Members of the Senate Colonial Affairs Committee disclosed that Mandel had criticized severely Bonnet's handling of tense relations with Japan and Italy over threats to French colonial prestige in Asia and North Africa.

Mandel indicated, committee members said, that he had to take exceptional measures to counteract what was described as Bonnet's "do nothing" diplomacy.

Political observers considered it possible Mandel's action might bring to a head an often-reported conflict between Cabinet supporters of Bonnet's policy and a group composed of Mandel, Navy Minister Campinchi, Interior Minister Sarraut, and Education Minister Zay.

Senators said Mandel particularly was concerned with France's position in Indo-China and French Somaliland. He was said to have contended that Bonnet took ineffectual action against what many in France consider menacing gestures by Japan in occupation of Chinese Hainan Island, which dominates sea trade routes of Indo-China, and a reported Italian effort to boycott the Somaliland port of Djibouti.

Fear No "Surprise" Raids.

Senators said Mandel documented his claims with correspondence between his office and the Foreign Ministry.

Mandel reported to the committee, however, that as a result of strengthening of defences the colonies were alert and "safe from surprise attack."

He added, nevertheless, they said, that French defences in Somaliland, with vastly superior Italian forces across the border in Ethiopia, were "pitifully inadequate."

Even as he spoke, another small detachment of troops was sailing from Marseille for Somaliland to reinforce some 6,000 men under arms there.

Martin Rallies 700 Delegates

DETROIT, March 4—(AP)—Split between followers of Homer Martin and followers of John L. Lewis became final and official today as Martin opened a convention of his faction of the United Automobile Workers Union, claiming delegates representing "an overwhelming majority" of the union's membership.

Martin said that more than 700 delegates were registered, representing nearly 200 locals. Each local had been served notice that attendance at the Martin convention meant severance of relations with the parent organization.

The faction of the union supported by the Congress of Industrial Organizations, however, claimed that only 37 locals of the U.A.W still were loyal to Martin. This group claimed that out of a total membership of 371,213 in the U.A.W., 315,236 members supported them, while 10,001 members were under suspension, 24,302 have not yet taken a stand, and 21,674 are supporting Martin.

U.S. Hints Debts Be Paid In Tin, Radium, Rubber

WASHINGTON, March 4—(AP).—The United States government is studying possibility that debtor nations may be willing to reduce their war debts to the United States through part payment in strategic war materials.

Dr. Herbert Feis, economic advisor to the state department, has testified before house of representatives military committee that the one government tentatively is considering sending strategic supplies (materials that cannot be produced in the United States and are vitally needed in war-time) as a payment on its debt.

He did not mention the name of the government. It is reported reliably, however, that Belgium has been considering sending radium to America to be applied on her debt.

An exchange of notes along the same line was made with Great Britain several years ago.

With congress now debating a bill to appropriate $100,000,000 over four years for the purchase of strategic war materials, it is believed the United States would be willing to take such products as tin, rubber and nickel, which are not produced here.

In case a deal could not be made on war debt payments, agriculture secretary Wallace would be willing to exchange either cotton or wheat for strategic materials, according to well informed persons.

Use Wheat in Swap

He is said to believe the government could use the wheat of the surplus commodities corporation for this purpose.

Congress would have to authorize the acceptance of strategic materials as part payment on war debts. At present, debts must be paid in United States dollars.

Officials do not expect debtor countries will come forward voluntarily and offer strategic materials in lieu of the amounts owed unless at the same time the United States agrees to apply the materials on the principal (not on unpaid interest) and also agrees to reduce the total of the obligation.

When the United States suggested to Great Britain in 1934 that debts be paid in materials, Britain replied that the only feasible payments in kind would be in goods actually produced by the debtor country, and that they should be additional to what the creditor country absorbed in the normal course of trade and should be consumed by the creditor nation, that is, no re-exported.

Informed persons here said strategic materials would not violate any of these specifications. Britain, it is true, does not herself produce the tin and rubber needed here, but her colonies do, with British finances. The strategic materials would be additional to those ordinarily bought by the Unted States since they would be stored up by the government. And eventually they would be consumed in America and would not be re-exported.

Bundists 'Cooties' Says LaGuardia At New York Tolerance Rally

Kindness Swings Judge In Dog Case, But Worry Plea Fails

Berkeley, Calif., March 4 (AP)

A YOUNG WOMAN told Municipal Judge Oliver Young she raced 40 miles an hour to get her injured dog to a veterinary.

"Kindness to animals is admirable," ruled the judge. "Case dismissed."

Up stepped Joseph Cann, 23. He explained he sped 60 miles an hour to get his girl friend home before her mother worried.

"Kindness to mothers—" the judge informed, "Say, you should have started earlier. Five days or $50."

NEW YORK, March 4.—(AP)—Civic leaders led by Mayor Fiorella Laguardia defended Democratic liberties in the United States last night at a "tolerance meeting" held in reply to the Washington birthday rally of the German-American bund.

The mayor, who last month granted the Bund permission to hold its rally on the ground that all factions were entitled to freedom of speech and assembly, told a crowd of more than 3,000 that overflowed Carnegie Hall:

"I believe in exposing the cooties to the sunlight, and we recently had an exhibition of international cooties."

Laguardia, a Great War flier, said he was not fearful of Naziism gaining ground in New York but "the people of the world cannot be safe as long as any country is controlled by irresponsible dictators."

Declaring that the language of diplomacy could be used only when dealing with "gentlemen," he added:

"We must necessarily depart from the language and tell these dictators that their ideas are not wanted in this country and that their entry in any part of the western hemisphereis verboten."

All Denounce Stand

Roman Catholic, Jewish and Protestant leaders denounced the Bund for the "un-American nature and utterances" of its recent mass meeting.

The meeting, sponsored by the Council Again Intolerance in America, was guarded by 30 policemen. (Seventeen hundred officers were assigned to prevent violence at the Bund rally at Madison Square Garden, attended by more than 20,000 persons.)

An ovation greeted Dorothy Thompson, newspaper columnist who was escorted temporarily from the Bund rally after she laughed at a speaker's remarks. She urged enactment of laws to prevent "a systematic campaign against race and religion with the idea of depriving members of the race and religion of their constitutional rights."

Only Six Bodies Found In Ruins

HALIFAX, March 4 (CP).—The death toll in the $800,000 fire that destroyed the Queen Hotel in an early morning outbreak last Thursday was set tentatively at a minimum of 25 persons today, but fears were held the ice-covered debris might never reveal the exact number that died.

The statement of Clyde MacIntosh, desk clerk, indicated the toll might be even higher than the 25 listed as known to have been in the hostelry at the time and still unreported.

Six charred bodies were in a Halifax morgue as firemen continued the grim hunt for additional corpses. Efforts will be made to recover from the tons of wreckage the vault, containing a list of the guests. Possibility was seen the records might have been destroyed, but if the register is recovered, a better check of survivors and the missing can be made.

Ontario Taboos Royal Probes

TORONTO, March 4.—(CP)—The Globe and Mail says today the Ontario Government is reported to have "washed its hands" of Royal Commission inquiries and no more will be authorized in the province "if they can possibly be avoided."

The cabinet "is said to have discussed the matter very recently, and to have generally agreed that probes of this type represent in most cases a needless bill of expense, with the majority of recommendations brought down in each instance invariably so drastic and difficult of implementation that in the long run they are completely ignored," the paper says.

"At the present time, according to rumor, accounts for one of these investigations have been held up for weeks—and may be held up indefinitely—because of the alleged exorbitant charges for attendance said to have been rendere dthe government by certain witnesses."

11 Bodies Found On 'Plane Wreck

NICE, France, March 4—((AP).—Eleven bodies were reported found today in the burned wreckage of a German commercial airplane which crashed near Roubillon, in the French Alps near the Italian frontier.

The cause of the accident and the identity of the victims, one of whom was a woman, had not been established.

The point where the wreckage was found, partly covered by snow, is on the route covered by a German commercial airline running between Germany and Lisbon, Portugal, through nationalist Spain.

(German authorities disclosed last Saturday that a German plane, apparently a military craft, had been lost in the Mediterranean with 10 persons aboard.)

Alberta Not Consulted On Sudetens Premier Aberhart Protests

EDMONTON, March 4.—(CP).—Premier Aberhart stated yesterday no agreement had been entered into by the Alberta government with any other government, or any organization, in respect to the settlement of 3,000 Sudeten Germans in the Peace River area and in Northern Sasaktchewan.

The Premier stated: "No agreement has been entered into by this government with any other authority as to these people coming to Alberta. A fuller statement will be made on the government's attitude when I have ascertained and considered the exact nature of the report."

Premier T. D. Pattullo of British Columbia, said in an interview at Victoria he believes "some" of the Sudeten German families to be brought to Canada will be settled in British Columbia, but he made it clear the province is not willing to accept full responsibility for their future maintenance.

"The Dominion government must take its share of responsibility," he said.

Settlement of refugees in British Columbia has been discussed by the Provincial government with Canadian National Railways and Hon. T. A. Crerar, Dominion Minister of Resources, Premier Pattullo said.

Want Them Distributed.

The original plan, he said, was to settle the refugees along the main line of the Canadian National in Northern British Columbia, but the Provincial Government would prefer to see settlers distributed through the province.

"In principle I am opposed to mass settlement because there is not the same likelihood of the settlers being assimilated and adopting our ideas," the Premier said.

"I know absolutely nothing about it," said Premier Patterson of Saskatchewan at Regina. "We've never been asked to take any by anyone."

"It is extraordinary. We have no intimation from the Canadian government or anyone this plan was under way. We have not land in Saskatchewan ready for them," said Hon. R. J. M. Parker, Minister of Municipal Affairs and Northern Settlement.

Fixed World Price On Wheat Of 60 Cents A Bushel Studied By 27 Nations

Split Whole Market Among Export Nations On Quota Basis, Subsidies Barred; Sell In Steady Stream, Avoid Price Change

(By J. F. Sanderson, Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

LONDON, March 4 (CP Cable).—A draft plan for a world wheat agreement featuring a fixed price and export quotas is being considered by 27 governments.

A meeting of a special committee of 10 nations has been called for April 13, when it will be announced if the plan is acceptable to the majority of leading importing and exporting countries. If it is, plans will be made for a world wheat conference.

The plan was drafted late in January by a special committee sent here by the governments of all wheat-producing nations.

The plan calls for a five-year wheat agreement with the main object of feeding supplies to the world market in a steady stream so as not to depress prices.

A fixed price of about 60 cents a bushel would be set, below which nations would agree they would not buy. This price would be fixed at such a low figure so importing nations could not complain of increased bread prices. In the past, one of the difficulties of setting a minimum price was the United Kingdom's refusal to observe it. It is understood, however, that the British representative on the special committee now offers no objection.

Penalties Planned.

The plan requires that some form of penalties should be applied if the fixed price were not observed, but this may be left to individual countries.

The draft plan also calls for division of the world wheat market by exporting nations on a quota system. The agreement would split the market aong them on a percentage—not a bushel basis. For instance, a certain percentage of the world demand would be allotted to Canada and when that was exported, no more wheat could leave the Dominion. The actual percentages were not included in the draft agreement but were left to the committee to insert at the April meeting.

No Subsidizing.

The exporting nations would agree not to subsidize exports, but would be free to follow any domestic wheat policy. For instance, internal prices could be set irrespective of the world price, but when wheat is exported it must be sold at the world figure. The agreement would not prevent nations from adopting an internal policy on acreage, a bonus on acreage and acreage reduction, and to set its own prices, providing exported wheat is sold at the world price.

To prevent any country from circumventing the intention of the agreement by manipulating currency, special clauses would be written into it. One of them would provide that the wheat price be fixed in sterling so currency manipulation by an exporting country would not affect it.

One concession by importing countries would be to pledge not to increase wheat acreage. There is some doubt about Germany and Italy agreeing to this and an escape clause may be drafted permitting acreage increases under certain conditions.

Open Up That BIG BOWEL!

For Quick Constipation Relief, Take a Laxative That Works Where Waste Has Jammed

Constipation that makes you dull, draggy and headachy usually occurs in the big bowel (marked X), right when body waste has travelled almost to the point where bowels should m-o-v-e.

To help you fast—to give quick comfort — a laxative should work where the waste has jammed, without upsetting the rest of the bowel tract.

Does like calomel act chiefly near the upper opening of the bowels. Salts flush from end to end. Oils have most of their effect in the small intestine.

But Chocolate Flavor Cascarets concentrate their help in the big bowel—where body waste commonly piles-up and constipation occurs. They move the waste those last few inches, bringing welcome relief overnight. Chocolate Cascarets can do this because they contain cascara, said to give nearest to natural action of any cathartic, which acts to cleanse the big bowel in 10 to 12 hours.

Fearing Open Jets After Gas Fails Half Hour Moncton Forced To Canvass Every User

MONCTON, N.B., Mar. 4 — (CP). — Crews of weary workmen turned in to bed to-day after racing through the streets all night on a door-to-door canvass warning householders to make sure all gas jets were closed.

The crews, carried to the different sections of the city in motor cars, were sent with their early-morning warnings so that householders, finding the gas pressure turned off, would not leave the gas jets open. The pressure failed for only a half-hour and could have been resumed immediately after, according to E. A. Cummings, general manager of the Moncton Gas and Electricity Company. But he said no chances could be taken. It was almost certain numerous persons, finding no pressure from the burners, would leave them open. So the crews of workmen, augmented by others enlisted for the task, weer sent from door to door.

All night long the crews ran from door to door, awakening householders and telling them to check all gas jets as the pressure was to be turned on momentarily. It was early this morning, however, before every house had been visited and its occupants warned.

districts of Mersina and Alexandretta and the portions of Syria lying west of the districts of Damascus, Homs, Hama and Aleppo cannot be said to be purely Arab and should be excluded from the limits demanded."

"These words are crucial. Both the geographical definition and the reference to France were regarded by the British government as excluding Palestine from the undertaking to Hussein. Nothing in the correspondence published appears to contradict the British interpretation of his letter, though it would certainly have been advantageous if more special reference were made to continuation of the proposed frontier south of Damascus."

The Times (Independent) said "the relevant portions of the MacMahon letters will continue to be quoted by the Arabs and by those who support their cause as evidence that Southern Palestine is at least included in an Arab realm promised Sherif Hussein as representative of the Arab peoples — a title to which he had, as a matter of fact, little claim.

"The British government and those who take an official view will undoubtedly maintain on equally good grounds that it was excluded. Both sides have a case, for the boundaries of the region assigned to the Arabs by the relevant letters of October 24, 1915, were not drawn with any approach at precision and its language is extremely loose. This correspondence illustrates the dangerous misunderstanding that can arise from an initial lack of geographical precision."

ties he has had with congress recently, Mr. Roosevelt recalled there had been constant friction between the continental congress and the commander-in-chief of the revolutionary armies and that inefficiency was the rule during the long drawn out war. There was grave doubt whether independence would have been won at all, he said, had not Great Britain been confronted with other wars in Europe.

Most of the speech was an exposition of the rights and freedoms enjoyed under democratic government and denied, the president said, by others.

The United States' constitution had proved, Mr. Roosevelt declared, that the American type of government could not long remain in the hands of persons seeking personal aggrandizement.

In the bill of rights, he continued, lies a vast chasm between "our representative democracy and those reversions to personal rule which have characterized these recent years."

He compared the American right to trial by jury with "some processes of trial and punishment which of late have re-incarnated the "justice of the dark ages."

Under democracy, the President continued, Americans enjoy safety against unwarrantable searches and seizures, freedom to assemble and petition the Congress, freedom of speech—which said had never been so widely exercised as now—freedom of the press and freedom of religion.

Kept in Check by Good Sense.

Because of the mildness of American laws of libel and slander, he said, freedom of speech goes unchecked except by the good sense of the American people.

He said he took it that "no sensible man or woman" believed that freedom of the press had been curtailed or threatened or that it should be.

"Representative democracy will never tolerate supression of true true news at the behest of government."

Other scheduled speakers included Bankhead of the House of Representatives, who declared that "we may have been too tolerant" of recent activities of sinister influences and minorities" at work in the United States.

Using Aluminum Preventative Of Silicosis

MONTREAL, March 4.—(CP). — Experiments showing definite progress through use of metallic aluminum as a direct preventive antidote toward combatting silicosis, dreaded lung disease of miners, was reported to-day by three Toronto doctors.

The doctors—J. J. Denny, W. D. Robson and Dudley A. Irwin—reported their findings in the March issue of the Canadian Medical Journal. Silicosis results from absorption into the lungs of fine silica particles present in mines, particularly after blasting or drilling.

The report said the doctors had been successful in producing silicosis in rabbits by exposing them to quartz dust for five months. However, they found that rabbits whose lungs contained one per cent or more of metallic aluminum showed no evidence of silicosis up to periods of 11½ months.

From their experiments, conducted mostly in Toronto and in the McIntyre Porcupine mines in Northern Ontario, they concluded that the metallic aluminum when converted into hydrated alumina reduced the toxicity of quartz in tissue chiefly by coating the quartz particle with an insoluble and impermeable solution.

No Effect On Health.

The report stated that "aluminum dust must be sufficiently concentrated in the inhaled dust to provide a minimum concentration in the lungs of one per cent at all times." Inhalation of aluminum dust in large quantities over long periods of time showed no effect on the general health of the rabbits and no evidence of toxictiy or damage to tissues, the doctors reported.

The doctors said that experimental work had been in progress at the McIntyre mine for some time to determine the various methods of applying metallic aluminum powder for the prevention of silcosis.

"Certain methods have been devised whereby an excellent dispersion of the powder can be obtained in the underground atmosphere," they wrote. "By using small quantities of aluminum powder, varying from three to 20 grams, dispersed in a dust cloud, reductions in solubility of 90 per cent or better were obtained from dust samples taken 150 to 300 feet from the face, following a drift round blast, having a volume of 8,000 cubic feet.

"These investigations are still in progress and will be reported at a later date."

Auto Workers Fight Excise Tax Removal

WINDSOR, Ont., March 4.—(CP)—Charles H. Millard of Toronto, regional director of United Automobile Workers of America, said today automobile workers in St. Catharines, Oshawa and Windsor in Ontario were campaigning against "grievously discriminating" provisions in the trade treaty between Canada and the United States.

Millard said removal of the three per cent excise tax on cars imported from the United States "combined with the federal government failure to provide us with more adequate protection under the new treaty" would prove a tremendous blow to auto workers and the industry generally.

"Unionization of employees in the Regina assembly plant of the General Motors company of Canada Limited has made very satisfactory progress and we expect they will soon concern themselves with this tariff change question," Millard said.

Urge Special Amnesty For Canadian Prisoner

MONTREAL, March 4 (CP)—Proposal that the Minister of Justice seek on the occasion of the royal visit a special amnesty for prisoners in all Canadian penal institutions was made yesterday at a board meeting of the Prisoners' Aid and Welfare Association.

Definite decision on the proposal, advanced by Lionel Rovienaky of the Jewish philanthropies, was not made immediately by the association. The amnesty, as proposed, would apply both in penitentiaries and jails, but its scope would be left to the discretion of the Justice Department.

The last such clemency marked the silver jubilee of the late King George V., freedom being granted to persons imprisoned for certain types of crime within six months prior to the anniversary date.

WEEKLY GRAIN REVIEW

WINNIPEG, March 4 — (CP). — Wheat futures put in another series of dull sessions on the Winnipeg market this week as prices moved slowly within a narrow range. Continued small demand for export wheat was a major reason for the featureless trend.

Friday's close found values ⅛ to ¼ cent higher than a week ago, with May at 62⅜, July 63⅛ and October 63⅝ cents.

Export sales of Canadian wheat were below 500,000 bushels for the week and with the exception of the sale of a cargo of Argentine wheat to the United Kingdom, little important overseas business could be confirmed.

Canadian and Argentine export prices at Liverpool showed a firm trend as both countries appeared satisfied with disposing wheat as demand developed. Argentina's exportable surplus has been estimated at 209,468,000 bushels while the export surplus of Canadian wheat was placed at 174,250,000 bushels February 21.

This week's firm price trend was aided by a report Spain had negotiated with Argentine for 7,350,000 bushels of wheat, 1,000,000 bushels of oats, and 6,500,000 bushels of barley. The sale was transacted on a barter basis.

Advices from Europe said 3,460,000 acres of French wheat fields were destroyed by frosts last month, although resowing was expected to eliminate part tof this loss. Reports from Russia indicated extensive damage to crops due to alternate thawing and freezing, while Rumanian wheat fields were said to be in need of rain in many sections.

Market Review

TORONTO, March 4 (CP).—The stock market's upward slant was maintained in today's abbreviated session, all index groups closing slightly higher except the golds. Gains and losses about balanced in the yellow metal list. Volume was under a quarter million shares.

Strength in the industrial section was especially noticeable in the steel and food groups, Canada Packers firmed about 2½ and fractional gains were boarded by Consolidated Bakeries, Fanny Farmer and Carnation Prfd. The English electric stocks advanced 1½ to 3 points, the "A" issues going to a new high. National Steel Car, Steel of Canada and Page-Hersey stepped up fractions.

Implements, utilities and liquor stocks posted more gains than losses and the senior oils and papers were a bit heavy.

ST. JOSEPH, Que., March 4. — (CP).—The black-feathered "sugar bird" stopped of fat St. Joseph today and residents in this Beauce county district came up with a time-honored prediction—the maple sap will start running about two weeks from now.

One of the province's leading syrup-producing areas, Beauce long has regarded the migratory bird as a sure herbinger of the maple season.

A week ago yesterday, the Feast of St. Matthias, was dark and dreary —another sign, say Beauce residents of an early spring and good syrup flow

Biblical Thoughts For the Shut-Ins

By Rev. E. R. James, Toronto

THE SECRET OF CHRIST'S VICTORY

The devil said unto Jesus: If thou be the Son of God command that this stone be made bread.—St. Luke 4.

It is an inspiring thought that we have here Our Lord's autobiography. During those wonderful days when the Twelve "were with Him" He told them this story of His temptations in the wilderness. So you will read these word swith deeper interest as you remember your eyes are failing upon the very words of the Christ Himself. In a sense you are "standing on holy ground."

This temptation centres upon His Sonship. "If Thou be the Son of God?" When did Me become conscious of His Divine Sonship? We find Him in the Temple when twelve years of age astonished at the dullness of understanding of those dearest to Him: "Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?" We get a glimpse of His growing consciousness of His divine origin. Then follow the eighteen silent years in Nazareth. He has time to read the Old Testament Scriptures and ponder upon their meaning. Slowly, gradually the thought is taking root that He has a mysterious mission to fulfill.

The Baptist's mission deepens that consciousness. He is baptised in Jordan. Then the Holy Spirit in all His fulness descends upon Him never to leave. To John the Baptist is given the sign of the dove. Both John and the multitude hear a sound. They do not know what it means. The Father speaks to the Son. "Thou art my beloved Son." The great sentence of the second Psalm might have been in His mind as He enters the water: "Thou are my Son, this day have I begotten Thee"—Psalms 2:7. At that moment He becomes conscious of His great mission.

Is it surprising that with such a thought filling His soul that He departs into the wilderness? He must think it all out. He must determine upon the principles of His ministry. "The Spirit driveth Him into the wilderness". The urge is overwhelming and He cannot but obey. He is the obedient Son. "Lo, I come to do Thy will, O my God".

He is absorbed with His mission and the high ideal of the Kingdom of God. He feels no hunger or thirst. He is alone among the wild beasts. He is alone with the Father. Then comes the natural reaction. He is truly Man. He has undergone an tremendous emotional strain. Now He is hungry, fearfully so. It is the Devil's opportunity to approach with the awful, agonizing question:—"Are you sure you are the Son of God? You must be certain before you go before the people. There must be no doubt in your mind as to your Divine Sonship. Satisfy your hunger by turning this stone into bread".

Brilliant minds have struggled to interpret this temptation. Some say it was a temptation to materialism. Bread is a necessity. Happiness and prosperity are the highest necessities of mankind. The Devil offered Him a vision of universal prosperity. Truly on one occasion He fed the multitude. But His great work was not to feed the bodies of men. Material prosperity does not mean spiritual developement. We have only to think of he days before the present financial crash.

Others claim that it was a temptation to relieve pain. Pain to this generation is the greatest evil, because of the nervous strain of life. A painless Gospel makes a great appeal to multitudes.

But the real purpose of the temptation was to cast a doubt on the Father's goodness; to break the Lord's confidence in the Father. His Apostles during those years of fellowship recognized and knew that He stood apart fror all men because of His deep and unbroken confidence in the Father. He put His whole trust and confidence in the Father. When He said "My Father" there was a deep tenderness and emotion in His voice. It was Satan's supreme aim to make a breech between the Son and the Father.

Ponder upon Our Lord's answer. "Man shall not live by bread alone but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God". Man has two sides to his being. His physical nature needs bread. "Your heavenly Father knows ye have need of these things". His spiritual nature, his soul, needs spiritual bread. God's Word is that spiritual bread. Christ as a Son must trust the Father for that spiritual bread. He puts His supreme trust and confidence in the Father. "Though He slay me yet will I put my trust in Him". This is the test of our Christian faith. Many people believe that their faith in Christ spells immunity from trouble and sickness. They are prone to doubt the Father's goodness.

THUS SAITH THE LORD GOD; IN QUIETNESS AND CONFIDENCE SHALL BE YOUR STRENGTH.

Great Power Is Awaiting Pope Pius XII

Eugenio Pacelli, Pius XII., former Papal Secretary of State, the man upon whom falls the white mantle of the papacy, becomes, in some respects, the most powerful person in the world.

His worldly empire embraces only the 108 acres and the 1,000 citizens of the Vatican. But his spiritual empire knows no bounds. Nearly one in every five persons accepts his spiritual leadership. That's half of Christendom.

Many more are interested in what he says and does—are influenced to some extent by what he teaches. Thousands of publications—and the radio — carry his messages to the ends of the world.

Many nations are called Catholic —those of Latin America, for instance, and Italy, Spain, Portugal and Belgium. Three are said to be 100 per cent. Catholic—the tiny states of Andorra and San Marino, and, of course, the Vatican state.

Catholic sources estimate the world's Catholic population as upwards of 375,000,000. Some 22,000,000 live in the United States, about 4,500,000 in Canada; 136,000,000 in the Americas as a whole; 210,000,000 in Europe; 19,000,000 in Asia; 8,000,000 in Africa.

In one sense, missionaries are the ambassadors of that empire—in all remote places of the world they carry on the church's work.

Pope's Diplomats.

But the Pope has ambassadors in the more worldly sense, too—60 diplomatic representatives to as many nations. Some, like those to Canada, the United States, and Great Britain, are called Apostolic Delegates. They are usually accorded diplomatic courtesies. Thirty-seven nations send ambassadors or ministers to the Vatican.

Recognizing the Pope as a sovereign, Great Britain in 1933 instructed the Fleet that he is entitled to a sovereign's salute of 21 guns.

The Pope's great responsibilities are shared by a sort of cabinet—the 12 Sacred Congregations, which are standing committees. He is the head of the church's judicial system. His little nation has its own coinage and postage stamps.

In addition to the armies of clergymen, agents for the propagation of the Catholic Faith in all parts of the earth, there are thousands of educational, fraternal, social and recreational groups throughout the world. In some countries there is also a political expression in Catholic parties.

And the hub of all this world-wide whirl of activity is one man—His Holiness the Bishop of Rome, Supreme Pontiff of the Universal Church.

The Dual Gospel—2.

It will be seen that most of the books of the Old Testament are written in connection with the Gospel of the Kingdom. Deuteronomy, Joshua, Judges, I and II, I and II Kings, Ezra, Nehemiah, and the Major and the Minor Prophets are written concerning the government and history of the people. Exodus, Leviticus, Job, the Psalms, Ecclesiastes, the Song of Solomon, are written from the standpoint of the Gospel of Salvation. Yet each group contains elements of spiritual life and power. Indeed, the Kingdom literature of the Bible is as full of the Spirit, Presence and Power of God as in the ecclesiastical literature. Let us not for a moment accept the idea that while the one is essentially spiritual the other is not; the two phases are both manifestations of Divine activity.

The High Priest and the Aaronic order of Priests carried forward the services of the ecclesia. From the first, the Levitical order of priests assisted by the national council, and later after the establishment of the House of David, the King, carried forward the services of the Kingdom.

All this is generally accepted as to the Old Testament teaching. But from the time of the third generation of Christian teachers the Kingdom phase of the Gospel was dropped, and it was and is very generally assumed that whereas the Old Testament carried a double-tracked Gospel, the New Testament carried forward only a single-tracked Gospel, namely, the Gospel of Salvation for the individual.

Much might be written regarding this phenomenon of the history of Christian doctrine, but we cannot take space to go into that further than to indicate that the Gospel of the Kingdom of God in the earth, and the fact that the Caesars were under obligation to accept their throne as the servants of God, was not popular in the Roman world, and therefore was dropped. This aspect of the Gospel of the Kingdom stood forth in the trial of Jesus. It was the main factor urged by the Sanhedrim before Pilate that the doctrines of Jesus, and the claims of Jesus, constituted treason to Caesar. It stands out in the teachings of the Apostle Paul wherein he urges obedience to the "Powers that be" of the Roman Empire, clearly stating that it had its power from God.

In Britain it has been otherwise, and except for such intervals as this through which we are now passing, wherein, because of fallacy, the British Church looks to the Latin as to the original Church, and to Latin literature as the classic upon which English literature is based, the Gospel of the Kingdom of God has always been accepted and has always had free course in Britain.

PETER DELIVERED FROM PRISON.

(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for March 12 is Acts 12:5-17, the Golden Text being Acts 12:5, "Prayer was made without ceasing of the church unto God for him.")

TODAY WE talk about the power of faith, and we have two very interesting stories to illustrate our tale—just as Jesus made His talks clear by stories that are called parables.

The first one continues our lessons about Peter and how by his preachings and teachings he converted very many to the new religion of Jesus. But there were also many who were not only unconverted, but who were made very angry and antagonistic by His teaching, and sought to do him harm.

The King, Herod, listened to these enemies of Peter's, and threw him into prison. He left him to languish in prison, well guarded, until after the feast of the Passover, when he intended to turn him over to the people, who would kill him.

It was the last night of the Passover and Peter was asleep in prison. All his friends and the Christians everywhere were praying for him. "Prayer was made without ceasing of the church unto God for him," the Bible says in our Golden Text. Suddenly a light shone in the prison and it awoke Peter. An angel was standing at his side. The angel smote him and raised him up, saying, "Arise up quickly." And the chains that bound him fell off. And the angel said, "Gird thyself and bind on thy sandals."

He did, and then the angel said, "Cast thy garments about thee and follow me." He led Peter to the iron gate. It opened before them without them having touched it, and they went out into the street. Peter though he was dreaming and that it was all a vision, but the angel was gone and he was free, so he went to the house of some friends. They were within still praying that he might be spared to them. He knocked at the door, and when a maid named Rhoda came to the door, she was so surprised to see him that she rushed joyfully to tell the others. They would not believe that it really was Peter, but thought it must be his spirit, but he convinced them that it was indeed he, in the flesh. He told them to go to others and tell of his deliverance, and then he went away to continue his work.

The other story is taken from the Old Testament, in Daniel, and it is about Daniel, who was a very clever man and a prophet. He was very frank and told the kings the meaning of their dreams and visions, whether it was pleasant or whether it meant disaster to them because they had been wicked. He foretold Nebuchadnezzar's fall. He was the king who went mad, you remember, and ate grass, like an ox.

Belshazzar was the king who followed Nebuchadnezzar, and he made a great feast and brought the golden vessels that belonged to the temple and drank wine out of them, he and his household and friends. While they were carousing a hand appeared on the wall and wrote some mysterious words None of the wise men of the court could interpret them, and at last Daniel was called in, and he told what they meant. So the king honored him and made him one of his rulers, but this king died and Darius was king in his place.

Darius, too, honored Daniel, but there were men in the court who hated him and sought to destroy him. They got the king to sign a decree that anyone in the kingdom who asked a petition of anyone or any power save the king should be cast into the lion's den. Then they told the king that every day Daniel prayer to God, and so they said he must be destroyed because he did not keep the law.

The king was very sorry he had been tricked into signing the petition, but he couldn't very well go back on his oath, so he had Daniel thrown into the den of lions and he closed the opening of the den with a great stone and sealed it with his own seal. But all that night he couldn't sleep and his heart was very heavy. Very early the next morning he went to the den and called, hoping against hope that something had saved Daniel from the hungry beasts.

To his great surprise and joy Daniel answered and told the king that he was unharmed. "My God," he said, "hath shut the lions' mouths, that they have not hurt me." The king was glad and commanded that they should take Daniel out of the den. Then he had the wicked men who had plotted against Daniel to be thrown to the lions, they and their wives and children—and the lions killed them all.

At any rate, faith that they would be saved preserved both these faithful servants of the Lord, and it will do much for us if we trust that we will be helped and work toward that end.

Palestine The Home Of Three Religions

The address in St. Andrew's Church on next Sunday night will deal with Palestine—The Home of Three Religions.

The present chaotic conditions in Palestine have a peculiar interest for religious people. The three great monotheistic and international religions were born in the Near East. Man's solitude in the desert areas has led him to think of religion in terms of unity rather than diversity. To the north and south of Palestine were idolatrous nations which imposed their civilization upon Palestine, but never succeeded in planting their polytheistic worship in that land.

Every Christian person should take an intelligent interest in the conflicts in Palestine. We owe more to that little strip of country between the Mediterranean and the desert than we can ever repay.

This land has played a stirring part in the former history of mankind, and is destined to figure in its future history as well.

Some questions arise, and an effort will be made to deal with them: 1. What is Zionism? Was it meant to be merely a refuge for Jews, or the home of a new spirit, whereby the Jew might make his contribution to the progres sof the world?

2. Would Britain be justified in withdrawing from Palestine at the present juncture in its affairs?

3. Is there a contradiction between Balfour's Zionism and the promises made by T. E. Lawrenec to the Arabs?

4. Has the influx of the Jews marked any improvement in economic and social conditions of Palestine?

Cathedral Musings

By force of habit we associate our civilization with our religion, but what they have in common with each other is more apparent than real, for it is very questionable whether the western mentality can fully enter into and appreciate the finer points of an Eastern religion. It is a noteworthy fact that all the great religions of the world have had their origin in the East, Christianity being no exception. There would seem to be a fundamental difference between the Eastern mind and the Western. The Asiatic is more introspective, more inclined towards subordinating his life and conduct to his beliefs, while the Westerner does exactly the reverse and subordinates his religion to his own ends by being what he terms "practical." The Easterner has for thousands of years concentrated on the spiritual side of life and largely ignored the practical aspect, while from the dawn of western civilization, a mere couple of thousand years, the Westerner, in his painful emergence from savagery, has had perforce to concentrate on the practical to the almost total exclusion of the spiritual. It is, perhaps, because of this great difference of racial heritage and outlook that we have largely failed in understanding the Christ Incarnate, or of co-ordinating the pure and very simple teachings of Jesus with our modes of life. Amid the present ferment of humanity there are signs of an awakening of understanding, and it is well that this should be so, for otherwise our materialism would, in the end, destroy us. But a spiritual renaissance is not without its birth-pangs. It may well be that we may have to painfully retrace our steps and seek that "middle way" in which the world and the things of this world are not despised as being foreign to the spirit, nor the things of the spirit dismissed with a hypocritical lip-service and relegated to the limbo of the impractical and visionary, but in which the two are co-ordinated and linked together for the glory of God and the happiness and peace of His children.

Peter Preaches to Gentiles — Scripture—Acts 10:1-48. — By Alfred J. Buescher

Cornelius, the centurion sees in a vision an angel who tells him to send men to Joppa and call Simon Peter, and Peter will tell him what he must do.

A vision also appears to Peter and a spirit tells him that three men are seeking him, and that he shall go with them, for they are sent of God.

Peter goes to Cornelius' house, and incurs the censure of some of the Jewish disciples, who think he should not eat with such as are not of the Jewish race.

But Peter defends himself and reveals that he has baptized Cornelius and the Holy Ghost has descended upon him. (GOLDEN TEXT—Isaiah 45:22.)

"Prison Sunday"

"Prison Sunday" may at first glance seem to be an odd name, but that is what the Salvation Army is observing across Canada, and we are certain enough the Army folk have earned the right for such observance. It is not as though prison work was being emphasized for this particular day only because the Salvation Army is at it every day in the year. How many times one reads in reports of court cases of some person being released or given over to the care of the Salvation Army we do not know, but the occasions are many indeed. When one gets into trouble it is not a case of seeking the Army for help, because the Army has some person and some agency waiting and offering that help.

The Salvation Army has not changed its ways a great deal nor has it compromised its mission. It believes that conversion is the one remedy for human regeneration and it has not come to the point where it offers any substitute. We hope it never will.

The Army seeks people in its citadel, seeks for them on the streets and asks no questions regarding respectability or pedigree. It seeks the man in jail just the same as the man who is not in jail. So when the Army folk desire to mark "Prison Sunday" they are not launching out into anything new. They are on familiar ground.

Entertaining a Wolf

Our correspondent at Tweed furnishes a good enough report about what happened to a wolf. Joseph Wickens, a West Huntingdon farmer, and George Prest were walking to work in the bush, when they noticed this strange animal which looked like a wild dog. It did not run away but started coming toward them, by which time Farmer Wickens recalled that he had a gun at home and departed to secure its company and its services.

Meanwhile Mr. Prest stayed where he was and the wolf advanced to within a few feet before Mr. Wickens had returned and placed the artillery in position for action.

Much has been said and written about wolves. Jim Curran, D.G.M. (the letters mean Deputy Game Warden), who publishes the Sault Star, is convinced the wolf will tackle no person. But we have had trappers in this office with wolf pelts and they are not at all certain, and for that reason they prefer to do the tackling and do it first.

Mr. Prest had an experience for which the average individual would not care. He stood there as though he were going to be the first to demonstrate that a wolf would or would not come and take a bite out of him or jump on him with the idea of taking several bites. It is something which will be handed down in family history, and doubtless several generations hence the story will be told. At the moment we could readily enough write down a fairly long list of things which would be more comfortable, entertaining and altogether more pleasant than entertaining a wolf while the other gentleman went to the house to bring along a gun.

Give Them a Chance

There was a $3,000 fire in Hensall, in Huron county, and the despatches, by way of identifying Hensall's location, said it was 35 miles north of London. Perhaps that is a good enough way of stating the case, but it gives other little places no chance of ever getting their names in the papers.

Hensall is on a straight line with Zurich on the way over to St. Joseph on Lake Huron. Zurich is where they make large and well-seasoned sausages and St. Joseph is the place where they were once going to build a great city—but didn't. Hensall is only about a concession or so down the road from Kippen, and Kippen in turn is just a short distance from Brucefield. Sarepta and Dashwood are not far off and even Kirkton is many miles closer to Hensall than is London, and Kirkton is the home of Hon. J. G. Gardiner, Minister of Agriculture, and Drysdale, Hill's Green and Blake are quite close by.

When there is anything like a big fire going on we like to see some of the lesser places get a chance at publicity instead of always picking on some large city 35 or more miles away to give a general idea of direction.

When a Man Is Drunk

John Ungurian operated a restaurant in Sudbury, and a girl of 18 years, Alice Kroitor, came to work as a waitress. Ungurian became infatuated with the girl, and finally went in a taxi to her rooming house where he shot her. He has been tried and convicted and is to be hanged early in May.

During the trial counsel for the accused claimed Ungurian was drunk at the time, and when in that condition had no idea of what he was doing. His daughter, a girl of 15, gave evidence of the same variety, and undoubtedly the hope was to get the verdict stepped down to manslaughter.

Mr. Justice Roach in delivering his charge to the jury, dealt with the intoxication plea, concluding with this statement: "Nevertheless, in British law, and through British justice, drunkenness in itself is never an excuse for crime, otherwise anarchy would prevail."

When a man gets drunk it is a condition which he brings upon himself and for that condition he alone is responsible. We admit there is room for argument on that point, but it has been established a good many times in courts of law. Mr. Justice Roach put his finger unerringly on what would happen if there were a general departure from that belief, and if it were always considered that a drunken man did not know what he was doing. We would then be in a state of anarchy, and anarchy is thus defined: "Want of government, a state of society in which there is no law or supreme power; general confusion; lawless disorder; a disorganized state of affairs; chaos; rebellion, riot, insubordination."

An Obstacle In The Way

Hon. W. D. Herridge has already served notice that he intends to start another party in Canada, and will shortly begin making addresses explaining what it is he has in mind. When he launched his new idea Mr. Herridge had things to say about the old parties in Canada, saying he believed that parliament was no longer free to serve the public and that the old parties were going to unite to form a Fascist government.

Arthur Slaght, K.C., the Liberal member from Parry Sound, was on his feet as soon as the time arrived for a member to get on his feet next day in parliament. He did not think Mr. Herridge the right person to have anything to say about parliament or about patronage. Mr. Herridge had joined the Conservative party in 1930, but according to Mr. Slaght "he was a fast worker, and had been there but a few months when he received what is perhaps the greatest plum in the gift of Canada." That was being named as Canadian representative in Washington where salary and allowances in four and a-half years amounted to $125,000.

Of course, Mr. Slaght was angry when he spoke; he was out to make an attack and he stood out in the centre of the field and pointed his finger at the man at whom he was shooting.

The Examiner has not much confidence that Mr. Herridge will succeed with his new party; we have seen a number of them come and about the same number go, and there is nothing to indicate that the one over which Mr. Herridge is brooding will have within it greater powers of years or numerical strength than the others, most of which go in the column headed "infantile mortality."

An attack on such a movement by a member of parliament is not always an injurious thing for a new party; there are circumstances when it might actually assist. We do not believe this is one of them. Mr. Slaght said something which will need a great deal of explaining before it is rubbed out. Mr. Herridge received the Washington post when a good many other Conservatives wanted it, and were probably more entitled to it and that appointment does come under the heading of political patronage. The Civil Service people have nothing to do with it, and the merit system did not land Mr. Herridge in the Washington position. So right at the outset there is that obstacle in the way of the Herridge party and we regard it as formidable.

A City's Responsibility

Toronto has a serious enough problem on its hands because its present sewage disposal plant is not adequate to meet the demands made upon it. The result is the waters of the lake are being polluted. It is estimated that $15,000,000 will have to be spent to put the matter right, and Toronto does not want to spend that amount of money; it prefers to have the provincial or federal government put up a good portion of it, although Toronto itself has created the problem.

Hon. Eric Cross, Minister of Municipal Affairs, says the province will not contribute one red cent, and that answer is so final that Toronto must look elsewhere. Mayor Day has a rather ingenious sort of argument when he starts looking in the direction of Ottawa. He finds there is a treaty between Canada and United States by which the Federal government had agreed to assume its share of the task of keeping international waters pure. Discharge of inadequately treated sewage into the waters of Lake Ontario is creating the very problem mentioned in the international treaty, therefore Ottawa should provide the remedy and not the people of Toronto.

We believe it is a fact that the Federal government did grant some assistance to Winnipeg at one time, but it would not be good policy if every municipality which happens to be situated on international waters were to feel at liberty to ask the Dominion government to put its sewage disposal plant in order. It would mean doing for certain municipalities a service which many other places have to attend to for themselves. And pay their own bills.

The larger a city grows the more acute becomes the problem of sewage disposal. It is at best rather an unnatural thing for hundreds of thousands of people to be huddled together in one community, and as this growing process continues so does the responsibility of such a community to itself and to the rest of the country. Unfortunately we have not yet developed the ideal and perfect system for sewage disposal. It is difficult to think of any city in our province which has not had complaints from residents along streams outside the city into which treated discharge has been dumped. At best we do not seem to have reached the point of purity.

We believe that sort of a responsibility is the property of the municipality because the municipality has created it, and a municipality has no business making a nuisance of itself by neglecting its plain duty. For a good many years Toronto has had an ambitious and well-directed program of industrial development. It is always reaching out for more factories and for more people. It has at the same time been adding continually to its sewage disposal problem and now has openly confessed it is inadequate to such an extent that it is called an international menace to be set right by Ottawa. We believe Ottawa should take the child and place it back on the doorstep of Toronto's city hall. That is where it belongs.

NOTE AND COMMENT

When the King visits our country he will have to quit counting in pounds, shillings and pence.

There will be no free list for civic officials or any one else at the World's Fair in New York. And worse luck there will be no knot holes in the fence.

Hancock is in Michigan, 100 miles west of Sault Ste. Marie and the average winter snowfall there is 172 inches. It may be a dandy spot but we're not moving.

The Barrie Examiner has grown weary of so many special weeks for the promotion of this and that, that the editor rises to suggest the inauguration of one which we would label "Give-Us-a-Rest-Week."

One house in Ottawa has been rented for the week during which Their Majesties will be in the capital, and the price is $500. It makes us feel better to know we are living in the same country as a man who has $500.

Hon. H. H. Stevens stated at Ottawa that crime was organized and a regular racket in Toronto, and Mayor Day has written asking for the particulars. Our belief is that it is easier to make a general statement than to get down to facts and details.

If one desires some good old-fashioned news then our Bancroft correspondent furnished it when he told of a team of horses bolting when one of them was being fitted with a new collar, after which they landed through the window of a furniture store.

A man in Toronto who had been robbed of his money admits he does not know what to do, but the first thing which entered his mind by way of suggestion was "Maybe we'll have to go on relief." It might be worth asking what he would have done had be faced a similar situation before relief became an accepted custom.

When winter sports are going on in Huntsville Mayor Harmon Rice was much to the front. There was a picture published of the Mayor being rather enthusiastically kissed by a couple of young ladies who were queens of something or other. At other times Harmon Rice sits in the office of the Huntsville Forester, which he publishes when his son is not attending to it. We never could understand why the publisher of a paper wanted to be mayor, but we begin to see the light now.

HANDICAPPED

(By A.R.K.)

¶ A little lad was born I know, and that was just two weeks ago he's growing so they say; he's disinfected and he's scrubbed, he's powdered daily and he's rubbed, and gaining every day.

¶ He has so many things to wear, of boots I think a dozen pair, a dozen jackets too; of bonnets he must have a score, of mittens can't stand any more, and everything is new.

¶ This little lad of sturdy frame, he doesn't even own a name, embarrassment that gives; I guess the reason I confess, the little lad seems to possess, too many relatives.

¶ He has grandfathers on both sides, with seven uncles too he rides, he's flooded out with kin; and they all very plainly say, they all are waiting for the day, they'll tie their name on him.

Lamplighter's Column

THIS WEEK just closing saw the month of March ushered in, and in honor of any Welshman who may read this column, we should remember that March 1st is Saint David's Day. All over the world Welshmen honored their patron Saint, and in many of their gatherings the leek was displayed as their national emblem. Welshmen are very proud of the leek, remembering that Shakespeare, in Henry the Fifth, referred to it as "a badge of honorable service."

The leek, if one has a nose at all, can make itself pretty conspicuous, so in many places a daffodil is used instead. The story of the leek is supplied by a legend handed down from the sixth century, dealing with the coming of the Saxons. The Britons were being driven back to that portion of the country now called Wales. In those days, when uniforms were unheard of, it was easy to make a mistake between friend and foe. So the Welsh troops introduced the first badge. There chanced to be leeks growing in a field through which they were passing just before a battle, so they picked them and stuck them into their caps. By this sign the Welsh could identify one another in the thick of fighting—or even in the dark, probably — and ever since then the leek has been prominent on the feast of Saint David, in memory. So, next time you go into the woods and step on a patch of wild leeks and smell their pungent odor, remember the Welsh and forgive the leek because of the service it once rendered.

Nature has given plants and flowers their varying odors with a purpose. A very pleasant scent is a protection to the plant, warning animals to keep away from it, making it a sort of forbidden fruit to them. We all remember the phrase "forbidden fruit" in connection with Eve in the Garden of Eden, but just what was the forbidden fruit? Most of us would say it was an apple. As a matter of fact, we are not told what kind of fruit the forbidden one was, but legend has it that it was the grape fruit. Anyway, the original discoverer of the fruit was told so by the natives. And what natives were they? Most people would say the grapefruit is native to Florida or California. But actually the grapefruit belongs to China, and did not reach this part of the country until the end of the 17th century, when Captain Shaddock, a sea captain brought back specimens with him.

For many years the fruit was called a Shaddock, after its introducer. Then as it began to have a wider market, growers cast about for a more attractive name. They found one in the way in which the fruit grows—in large, grape-like bunches. When it was rechristened it became increasingly popular, and ever since then it has had no difficulty in getting in the public eye!

MARCH 1ST, besides being Saint David's Day, is also Victoria Cross Day. In 1857 Queen Victoria instituted the decoration called after her—the most coveted of all British military decorations. Without regard for rank, the Victoria Cross is granted for conspicuous bravery in face of the enemy. It is a simple bronze cross, on a red ribbon if the holder is in the army, blue if from th Navy. The metal from which the bronze is made is still the bronze from captured cannons at Sebastopol, in the Crimea.

March, is as we all know, the first month of Spring—officially, that is. Even the weather doesn't seem to have the same respect for officials that we used to have. It seems as though lately the usual unusual weather has ben even more unusual than ever. We call this month March because the Romans named it Mars, after their God of War. In spite of being hardy people, the Romans were not particularly fond of cold weather, and as far as possible they stayed home during the winter. However, when the first fine days came along, and the sun began to warm things up, and they felt their blood circulating more freely, they used to stretch themselves and say "It looks like a fine day, let's go and start a war somewhere." And they usually did, and that was why the month was dedicated to the God of War, and why we still call it March.

In spite of the weather, you, of course, have a good fire going in the furance to keep the house comfortable and warm. Here's an odd thought to go with it. If furances had been in general use five hundred years ago, clergymen would not have been dressed the way you see them in church nowadays. That seems odd, doesn't it, but it is so. The ordinary warm coat of the middle ages was called a pellicim, a fur robe. The great stone churches of those times were never heated, and so barnlike and cold were they that the clergy found themselves compelled to wear this fur coat during the services. This did not look very clerical, so a white garment was designed to go over it, known as the "super-pellicium". This word soon became shortened down to surplice, and in the reign of Edward the Sixth an act of Parliament ruled that ministers of the Church of England must wear a surplice when conducting divine service—and they still do.

And so we live, unconsciously, in the shadow of our forefathers. Some day we too shall pass on to our reward. We are forced to wonder to what extent our lives shall influence those who follow us. The influence of our ancestors, their effect on us today, seems to lie only in those little unconscious customs which have lived after them. Maybe we too will act on our descendents equally remotely. Then surely the thought to hold is the simple one of present good. Rather than wait for posterity to recognize us, which it probably will not do, pass on the immediate kind word or tolerant thought, and make our influence felt on those around us today. Let posterity look after itself—it always has!

Letters To The Editor

Correspondents Discuss Various Topics

COME ON OVER

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—This is for the "New Comer." I read your letter in the Examiner and I here answer it.

I was a stranger in this city eight years ago so I know just what you are talking about.

I lived in the church in our village but here it is different. I went and all I got here was "How do you do." No one ever asked me to dinner in their home or to go for a car ride and meet some of their Christian friends. Well I did the best I could. I went to church and in eight years our minister has been to see me once, so I am now just drifting around, going with the wind, so if you want my address I will leave it with the Examiner.

Call and get it and bring your husband and yourself and I'll make you welcome and get you a good dinner in the small town fashion.

WAR AND INJUSTICE

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—That was a terrible mental picture that Margaret Dreyfus presented to us in The Examiner of Feb. 27th of the Little Spanish refugee children. The only bright spot was the man whose steps were directed there by Providence and whose heart God had touched and whose purse was immediately opened to give aid. Oh these little flowerlets of Heaven; trampled underfoot of man, of whom the Saviour said — their guardian angels do always behold the face of my Father.

Let us look for a moment at what John Ruskin once said about war—as he laid the blame at us women's door. He said— "There is not a war nor an injustice, but you women are answerable for it, not in that you have provoked, but in that you have not hindered. Men by their nature are prone to fight; they will fight for any cause or none. Men can bear the sight of it, but you should not be able to bear it. Men may tread it down without sympathy, in their own struggle; but men are feeble in sympathy and contracted in hope; it is only you who can feel the depth of pain, I conceive the way of its healing".

So said John Ruskin and much more, and I for one will not say he was mistaken but rather God forgive us that we have been so helpless, so powerless as to permit such a state of affairs as we have, but we must be good women to have this power. Oh how the world needs good women; more than clever ones, more than athletic ones.

Why do not our religious leaders rise "en masse" and condemn the practice of bombing civilians. Is it because they are hirelings and care not for humanity, or are they broken off as branches of the "Vine". These are hard things to write, but more terrible if true.

Mr. R. B. Bennet was about right when he said—"The church has failed," and like him I have no hope for great masses getting converted overnight for regeneration is a slow process, I have hope only in individuals here and there whom God has quickened into action. Let each one who feels deeply say—"Lord what will thou have me to do."

STABILIZED CURRENCY

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—You were quite right in pointing out the great difficulty of stabilizing the purchasing power of the dollar to an inquirer. However some progress has been made in this direction. When Great Britian on the recommendation of the MacMillan Commission went off the gold standard and attempted a managed currency this was one of the main objectives. As a matter of fact they held commodity prices within a range of ten per cent. for over two years. Political unrest in Europe has made the task very hard but fluctuations are not nearly so violent as they probably would have been under the old system.

The United States in doing the same thing and now Canada with her new national bank is following the same lines. Exchange which is a very complicated problem is also used to assist in this cause. If your correspondent wants to study the matter further I would recommend that he read "Stabilizing the Dollar" by Irving Fisher. This book is now obsolete but it still gives a good resume of the subject and leads to an easier understanding of later books. The report of the MacMillan Commission, which costs very little, is a liberal education in economics in itself. There is also a society for the stabilization of the purchasing power of money, with headquarters in New York. This society is composed of the most eminent economists and public men. It is committed to no special scheme but examines and studies them all. Membership in this society costs only a few dollars and entitles the member to the bulletins and reports of the society.

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

(From the Authorized Version)

Thus saith the Lord, the Holy One of Israel, and his Maker, Ask me of things to come concerning my sons, and concerning the work of my hands command ye me. I have made the earth, and created man upon it, . . . I have raised him up in righteousness, and I will direct all his ways.—Isa. xlv; 11, 12, 13.

Serve the Lord with gladness: come before his presence with singing. Know ye that the Lord he is God: it is he that hath made us, and not we ourselves; we are his people, and the sheep of his pasture. Enter into his gates with thanksgiving, and into his courts with praise: be thankful unto him, and bless his name.—Ps. c, 2-4.

THE PATTERN THEY SET.

The human race will never go the way of the dodo and the kiwi if it hews in stability to the pattern set in the married life of Mr. and Mrs. F. Kirkham of Saltcoats, Saskatchewan. Mr. and Mrs. Kirkham have just observed the 68th anniversary of their marriage and among messages that descended upon them in felicitous recognition of this remarkable occasion were greetings from Their Majesties the King and Queen, far away across the Atlantic, and from Prime Minister Mackenzie King at Ottawa and Premier Patterson of Saskatchewan. Premier King in a telegram said that "the long companionship you have shared is in itself a benediction on each of your lives" — a delightful tribute.

Heads of state do well in taking note of so arresting a marriage record as that of Mr. and Mrs. Kirkham at Saltcoats. Age and eternal companionship through the years may teach much of beauty and proclaim much of character.—Regina Leader-Post.

DETOUR OF PATRONAGE.

If a candidate is defeated in an election, but if his party is in power, then the defeated candidate controls the patronage. That is the usual rule in Canadian politics. It works out in strange ways at times.

In Nanaimo, B. C., an Independent candidate was elected. The defeated Liberal candidate still hopes to get into the House of Commons.

Early in 1938 the M. P. for Nanaimo asked Hon. J. C. Elliott to have mail-boxes placed in two places in the town of Duncan. But the boxes were not ordered.

But shortly before Mr. Elliott gave up the portfolio, the boxes were placed on the advice of the defeated candidate of the Liberals. In other words, eight months after the Independent M. P. had asked for the boxes, they were ordered on the advice of the defeated candidate.

That all may seem peculiar, but it's the way patronage goes. The defeated candidate was his party's representative in the constituency and each party likes to nurse along the voters in an effort to get them to mark their ballots in the desired way when another election comes.—(W. L. Clark, in Windsor Star)

Man On Eastern Back Concessions And The Prairie Farmer Begin To Stir Commons Action

By Boss Munro
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

OTTAWA, Mar. 4 — (CP). — The well-being of the Prairie farmer the foothills rancher, and the man on the Eastern back concessions grips the interest of Parliament, against a background of conflict over the Government's proposed new wheat policy and the principle of the guaranteed price.

With the fixed wheat price to Western farmers of 80 cents a bushel for No. 1 Northern at Fort William costing the Federal treasury an estimated $48,000,000 this crop year, the wheat problem reaches into every home in the land and even Eastern urban constituency members are concerned over the question.

Details of the Government's new farm program are still a close Cabinet secret, but many rural members believe it will be of far-reaching proportions and break entirely new ground in agriculture legislation.

Speculation revolves about the possible scope of the scheme—whether it will embrace dairymen, live stock raisers, Eastern grain growers, and possibly, as an adjunct, the fishermen, as well as the Western people for whom it naturally will be primarily designed.

Hope for Modification.

There is a growing impression that Mr. Gardiner's proposal to abolish the guaranteed price next crop year, substitute an acreage bonus, and give assistance to producers' co-operatives might be somewhat modified before the legislation is presented to the Commons.

The Western Wheat Committe, led by Premier Bracken of Manitoba, challenged this plan in a submission to the Cabinet on Wednesday and advocated the continuance of the 80-cent guaranteed price for the next crop year and retention of the Wheat Board, which would be dissolved ultimately under the Gardiner plan.

But the minister condemns fixed prices for farm products as a permanent policy and it appears to be his conviction that they must be done away with and an entirely new form of government farm aid devised. In drafting the wheat legislation, cognizance is being taken that the principle adopted might be applied to marketing of other natural products.

Underlying the new farm program is the question of state paternalism and the necessity to determine how far the government will go in regulation and assistance to a basic industry.

Government Boards

By three new boards, the administration plans this session to increase the broadening scope of the government service.

From industrial and business life and from the civil service ranks nearly a dozen prominent Canadians will be chosen to make up the personnel of the defence purchasing board, the national film board and the penitentiaries board.

The government already is considering possible candidates for positions on these boards, particularly the defence purchasing board which will handle all munition contracts of more than $5,000. The film board will review and report on government film activity and discharge other work assigned to it. The penitentiaries commission bill, defeated in the senate last session, was given first reading in the commons Thursday.

Ottawa Sidelights

Ottawa's vast downtown plaza, surrounding the national war memorial, is in a semi-complete state of construction and subject of frequent jibes. Hon. W. D. Herridge referred to it in his new democracy speech as "the symbol of confusion." A local newspaper columnist terms it "Hell's Half Acre . . . "

The external affairs department's policy of discouraging marriage of young third secretaries in the diplomatic corps is causing capital heartthrobs in this city which rates about four women to every man . . .

Under The Peace Tower

When the public accounts committee inquiries into the Bren gun and shell contracts get under way it will be a field day for the lawyers. In the 50-member committee there are almost a score who follow the legal profession. The committee's work likely will extend over several months and rival the radio and banking and commerce committee inquiries in public interest . . .

The MacDonald and McDonald clans have the largest representation in parliament with seven members named "Mac" or "Mc." The Maclens and McLeans are next with four and the Mackenzie-McKenzies third with three . . . John R. MacNichol (Con. Toronto-Davenport) is parliament's authority on Scottish clans and Highland history . . .

Influenza played havor with parliament and the government service this week. About a quarter of the House membership was under the weather. Many a speaker's eloquence in debate was marred by a cough or a wheeze . . .

At a luncheon Hon. Dr. R. J. Manion and Mrs. Manion gave for the Conservative members of the Commons and the parliamentary press gallery, Dr. Manion said he asked a prominent western Liberal newsman to say grace. The staunch Grit replied: "I'll have to decline doctor. I'd rather not have the Lord know I was here" . . .

The dry humor and slow speech of R. J Deachman, the Liberal member for Huron North from Wingham, has won him the nickname "Will Rogers of Parliament Hill" . . .

During dull debates, members sitting in the Commons pursue a variety of diversions. There are half a dozen ardent doodlers and even Justice Minister Lapointe and Resources Minister Crerar have been seen drawing weird figures and designs on their desk pads . . .

Reorganize Band In Campbellford

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, March 4.—Once again the home town will burst forth with music. With the old home week being the principal theme of street corner conversation the former members of Campbellford's once proud band decided to get together and do something about it. An old home week celebration would be a rather dull affair without some music. So with this in mind a meeting was held in the local armouries at which Major George Free presided. Nearly forty turned out to fill the band room in a manner reminiscent of the days when the Northumberland Regiment Band was at its best. Three years ago the local organization then known as the Midland Regiment Band began the downhill path when the town treasury began its retrenchment program by slicing the annual grant from the budget. In the intervening years citizens derived their sole musical entertainment from the bugle band, an organization which was fostered and trained by the ceaseless and untiring efforts of Walter Lowe. The newly formed organization will be under the guidance of Harold Kitney who accepted the position of bandmaster at the meeting.

DEATH AT THE MANOR

By M. E. CORNE

CHAPTER FORTY-FOUR

DOWN THE flights of stairs and through the kitchen we dashed pell-mell. I think Hawkins and Mrs. Greely, whom we passed in the pantry, thought we had gone stark, raving mad. Mac, however, did not stop to explain. He grabbed the housekeeper by the hand and pulled her after us. The poor woman's feet flew over the ground and she moaned and groaned, but had no choice but to follow.

"Now!" said Mac, when we had reached the trash barrel. "When was this last emptied, Mrs. Greely?"

She gasped for breath. "A week ago. It is emptied every Thursday."

"Then it hasn't been emptied since Mrs. Witherspoon's death?"

"No. The man will pick it up some time this afternoon."

"Good!" He loosened her hand and began pulling great wads of waste matter from the barrel. With extraordinary patience he sorted through the unsightly mess. Then, as this method proved slow and tedious, he caught hold of the bottom and rolled the barrel over and over until the contents were scattered in a heap upon the ground.

And in the end the search was for nothing! There was no cyanide in the barrel, nor, according to scent, distinctly almondless, had there ever been. It was a depressed detective who began stuffing the trash back into its container.

Bored, I turned away, when a shout from Mac shot me a foot into the air. He was holding something in his hand, and staring at it. I moved closer. The something was a glove, a man's leather glove. It was a new glove, fleece lined.

"Dear me!" Mrs. Greely frowned. "However did that get into the trash? That's Mr. Horace's glove!"

"It is, eh?" Mac turned it over and over. "Turn the barrel again, Phil! I want to find the mate to this!"

But there was no mate in the barrel.

"Is this all of the waste in the house?" Mac inquired of the housekeeper.

"The baskets are emptied each morning," she informed him, making it plain that she considered his behavior outlandish.

"Do you empty them yourself?"

"Indeed not! The maids do that work. I inspect the rooms after they have been cleaned!"

"I see. And each bedroom has a fireplace, has it not?"

"Yes."

"So the stuff might have been destroyed!"

I inquired: "Wouldn't it have smelled if it had been burned?"

"Smelled? Oh—the cyanide! Yes, it would have smelled, and a glove would make ashes. Our murderer wouldn't have dared to take such a chance."

I asked: "What's the glove got to do with the murder?"

"I don't know, Elsie. Maybe nothing. But I mean to find out." He stuffed the glove into his pocket. "If my theory is correct—well, time will tell!"

"What makes you so sure there's any of the poison left? Mightn't the murderer have used all of it?"

He shook his head. "It stands to reason the stuff is around somewhere. Didmore says it takes only a pinch to do the work in those airtight driers. You can't buy a pinch, so there must be some left. And I have to find it before—" he stopped dead. But I knew what he was going to say: before another murder was committed!

"Have you tried to find out where it orginally came from?" I went on, determined to take advantage of his mood to discover a few of the things he had been keeping to himself.

"Naturally, Elsie. I've been to every prescription and poison dispensary in town. I've been in touch with the firm in Cincinnati where Mr. Horace buys his poisons. The answer is always the same. However," he brightened slightly, "Ellis is in Columbus this minute getting a line on drug stores and such over there. I've a hunch the murderer did his shopping out of town. In Columbus his purchase probably wouldn't be remembered."

"But," Phil reminded him, "He'd have to sign a register."

"Which," added Phil discouragingly, "you do not have."

"Don't worry about that! Ellis will check up on any and all purchasers of cyanide; but there won't be many, perhaps none at all."

"Ahem"— Mrs. Greely cleared her throat — "ahem!"

"Well?" asked Mac.

"Really, Mr. McIntyre!" bridled the housekeeper, "I can't stand here all day! I have my work to do!"

"Go along! Go along!"

"Well!" She withered him with a glance. She flounced primly into the house.

"I'm off to town, darling," said Phil, and kissed me resoundingly upon the mouth. "Back later." And he set me down smartly, pinched my ear, and went whistling along the drive. Mac followed me into the house, and I left him below the stairs and went directly to my room. It lacked ten minutes until lunch time.

I washed my hands and face and sat down at the dressing table to renew my makeup. First the foundation cream, then the powder—but—darn! My powder box was empty! A few fine grains spilled on to my swansdown puff.

"The devil!" I exclaimed to myself. "Now wouldn't you know I'd run out of powder way out here in the country!" I would have to borrow a box from the salon. I stomped through the connecting door.

There were several kinds of face powder stacked box upon box on the shelf in the second ante-room. I sorted through the pile until I found my proper shade, and hurried back to my room. I was upset, for I have my own particular brand of powder, and I unscrewed the top of the red and silver box, dipped my puff inside and dabbed it to my nose. And then—then I sneezed!

With tears streaming down my cheek I tore madly down the corridor clutching in my left hand the powder box and waving aloft my right.

"Mac! Mac!" I shouted.

"I've found it! I've found it!" I cried over and over. "I've found it!"

"Found what, in Heaven's name?" Mac bounded up the stairs three at a time, and at the landing we collided head-on. The impact flung me heavily against the banister. I clung to the rail for dear life, coughing and choking in an effort to get my breath.

For Sunday, March 5

Sunday's horoscope holds testimonies of the dawn of another day of surprising developments of a most unpredictable character. There may be sudden upheavals or visitations coming with swift force and holding devastating sway. The swoop might concern an unexpected inheritance or some other financial or romantic windfall, which should not be endangered by extravagance or any kind of excess. Strange adventures and experiences await.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of very starting and devastating experiences, with an adventure of sweeping precipitancy. This might be such a windfall as an inheritance or a prize, impelling to rather extraordinary behavior or commotion. But it would be wise to quell all urges to indulgences, excesses or reckless expenditures.

A child born on this day may be original, inventive, scientifically-inclined, extravagant, expansive and indulgent. It may attain surprising position by its audacity, ideas and romantic adventures.

For Monday, March 6

Monday's astrological forecast is for a rather exciting day, with much turmoil, confusion, turbulence and cross-purposes. This may be due to an ill temper, strife or litigation. Use restraint, be alert to schemes and treachery, and there may be much personal happiness or social activity. Be guarded with tongue and pen.

Those whose birthday it is may be confronted by a year calling for much calmness, self-control and discretion, since rash, tempestuous and impulsive conduct may lead to defeat, strife and litigation. Be guarded with speech and vigilant as to fraud, schemes, collusion and misrepresentation. Much private pleasure and social, emotional or artistic gratification are probable.

A child born on this day may be talented, artistic and social popular, although impulsive, reckless, energetic and passionate.

The annual financial statement of the electric department of the Peterborough Utilities commission which is published elsewhere in this edition of the Examiner shows a profit of $14,646.17 on the year's operations. This is about the same as in the previous year.

Revenue from domestic consumers increased by 5 per cent over 1937 due to a corresponding increase in the use of current. The average consumer used 182 kilowatt-hours per month as compared with 170 in 1937. The average cost per kilowatt-hour was 1.2 cents.

Appreciate Good Lighting

Revenue from commercial lighting consumers also increased 5 per cent, showing tht the merchants of the city appreciate the value of good lighting.

Lighting from power supplied to local industries was practically the same as the year before. In spite of the los of the 200 horsepower load of the Auburn plant of the Dominion Woollens and Worsteds company the average monthly demand of this class of consumer increased about 1,000 horsepower. However, the consumption of kilowatt-hours did not increase in proportion showing that the industries did not work as long hours as in 1937.

Expenditures on capital account amounted to $50,000.00. The major item was the installation of an additional large 3,000 Kva transformer and switching in the sub-station, costing $14,000.00. There are now four of these units and this gives an ample capacity to meet future needs. Another major expenditure was the installation of 217 flat rate water hearters costing $11,0000.00.

Extensive rebuilding of the distribution system in the centre of the city was completed. This will give added capacity to meet the increasing demands for power in the stores on George street and vicinity.

The total amount paid for power purchased from the H.E.P.C. was $227,750.55, an increase of $4,600.00 over 1937. This amount includes a rebate from the Ontario Commission of $7,459.42, making the wholesale cost of power $25.20 per horsepower per year, based on an average monthly peak of 9,037 horsepower. Last year the average peak was 8,419 horsepower and the cost, $26.50 per horsepower.

At the request of the Retail Merchants' association, colored lights were installed at the principal street corners at Christmas ,continuing the practice of previous years.

Floodlights were placed to illuminate the outdoor skating rink at Jackson Park, as well as for the numerous smaller rinks throughout the city.

Total interruptions to service were experienced on three occasions for a total of 26 minutes. There were caused by bad storms on the transmission lines of the Ontario Commission.

The Commission continued to build extensions for the H.E.P.C. in rural Peterborough and a total of 49 miles was constructed. This work was due on the usual cost-plus basis.

By MAX TRELL

KNARF, the shadow-boy, and Hanid, his sister, did a very good deed. They made Mary-Ann, the little rag-doll, very happy. I'll tell you what they did.

Last night, after the children went upstairs to sleep, the two shadows glided out of the darkened rooms, slid down the bannister (shadows almost always slide instead of walk), and went into the playroom.

There, sitting in a corner, they found their friend, Mary-Ann. She had a smile on her face. But it was just a painted smile. Underneath it she wasn't happy at all.

Feels So Lonely.

"I feel so lonely sitting here in this corner all by myself," she sighed. "If only I had something to do. If only I could take care of someone. Then I wouldn't feel so lonely."

"To take care of someone?" Hanid repeated.

"You see," Mary-Ann explained, "when the children play with me in the daytime they pretend I'm a little baby and they're taking care of me. It makes them very happy. I wish I could pretend someone was my little baby. Then I could take care of someone, too. I wouldn't be at all lonely sitting here in this corner, waiting for the morning to come."

Get An Idea.

Knarf and Hanid started thinking. For quite a long while they didn't say a word. Hanid sat with her legs drawn up and her chin on her knees. Knarf just walked up and down, up and down, with his hands deep in his pockets. Then all at once they both looked at each other.

"I've just thought of the very thing!" Hanid exclaimed.

"So have I!" cried Knarf.

With that they both hurried down the hall, past the kitchen into the little room near the back door where the bag with the clothespins hung on a nail. Knarf reached in and pulled out one of the clothespins.

"A baby" she crief joyfully.

Her Plan, Too.

"Yes — that's just what I was thinking of!" said Hanid.

Then they ran with the clothespin into another room where they found mother's sewing-basket. They took out a piece of bright cloth and two pins and in a moment the clothespin began looking like a tiny baby with a baby's dress. Then they made it a cap with another piece of cloth and two pieces of thread. And they made it eyes and a nose and a mouth with a pencil. Then they brought it in to Mary-Ann.

"A baby!" she cried joyfully. "A baby to take care of, just like the children take care of me!"

And from that moment on she was never lonely again.

British Railroaders Refused Pay Boost

LONDON, March .—(CP Cable). —A claim for wage increases affecting 600,000 British railway men and involving a sum in excess of £7,000,000 ($32,000,000) was rejected today by the staff national tribunal. The decision is not mandatory.

Ruling on the employees' demands, the chief of which was a minimum weekly rate of 50 shillings, the tribunal said depressed railway earnings caused them to reach their decision. The tribunal added a hint that rather than increases employees might soon be confronted with cuts from the railways, which are now carrying out a "square deal" campaign for the removal of what they claim are restrictive regulations.

Already the engineers' and firemen's branch of the big national untion of railwaymen has announced the tribunal's report is not acceptable and that they and other branches are meeting soon to decide their next step. A union leader told the Daily Telegraph that "a strike on a large scale now must be contemplated" adding the unions might also decide not to recognize in future the tribunal, which has been the final board of conciliation.

The tribunal, however, granted two concessions. Employees will share in a £100,000 scheme for Sunday rates. Secondly a spread-over system of working hours was aproved.

We Noticed

...Many new notes in the twittering bird chorus one hears coming from tree tops and hedges these days when the sun's rays are warmest—much neck-craning, however, has failed to reveal the identity of the new arrivals—for new arrivals they must surely be—brave little forerunners of spring.

...Not every person realizes the tragedies and near tragedies among birds at this most difficult time of the year. The snow has lost its crust and will no longer bear the crumbs thrown out to the birds and they are lost in little pools of water. Melting snow and rain spoil much food. Suet fastened to the limb of a tree is most likely to keep fairly safe and out of harm's way.

...It is particularly at this time of year that helpless little birds starve because they cannot find sufficient food to live on. So if you are a friend of the birds, just keep a kindly eye on them and see that food is placed where they can find it.

SPRING COLOR HARMONY

White gloves have the majority vote for afternoon costumes. It's reported that Paris hasn't enough to go around.

By PRUNELLA WOOD

You've no idea how pretty you can be until you combine pastels and either dark prints or solid tones. Paris is topping such dresses as this one with plain garden variety pink or blue coats, and adding the pastel hat in felt, maline or straw. Flowers and veils complete the charming luncheon, tea or cocktail picture.

The confetti shower pattern in the crepe model sketched is pink, likewise the wide glace pink kid girdle in the process of being looped.

DOROTHY DIX

The World Is 'Modern' Enough Now That Girls, With All Due Propriety, Can Ask a Man His Matrimonial Intentions—They Owe It To Themselves To Know.

DEAR MISS DIX — I am very much in love with a man who has been coming to see me regularly for several years and who seems to enjoy being with me, but I do not know how he feels toward me. He has never mentioned love or marriage. Sometimes I think he loves me, because I see a yearning look in his eyes, but I am not certain. Shall I tell him that I love him?—PEGGY.

ANSWER:

In the past one instantly would have answered this question by saying to a girl: Be coy. Play indifferent. Run away from a man if you want him to pursue you. Men crave the peach that hangs highest on the tree, not the one that is so overripe it is ready to fall into their mouths.

That advice still holds good in many cases. There are yet men who get a kick out of the love chase, who want to marry instead of being married and who are spurred into action in courtship by being flouted. Their ideal is Lady Disdain instead of the girl who will fill a blind date and whom they can pick up and put down as they please. But, alas! it is only too sadly true that in these unromantic days the ardent Romeos who are willing to risk their necks climbing to a lady's window for a kiss are very scarce. The Weary Willies who let the girls do all the petting are very plentiful.

Besides this, woman's status in marriage, as in all else, has changed. In the past when a husband had to support his wife it was, of course, manners to wait until she was asked before burdening a man with her board bill and shopping ticket. But now, when a competent business woman can not only provide her own bread and butter, but feed her husband on cakes and ale, there is no reason on earth why she shouldn't put the matrimonial proposition up to a man if she wants him for a husband.

Of course, there are those who favor a girl hiding her love and letting it gnaw upon her damask cheek. They contend that when a man knows that he has won a womans love he loses interest in her. That the girls who have many dates are not those who keep the telephone hot and the postman overworked, but the maidens who are hard to get. Furthermore, that there are no such indifferent husbands as those who are virtually dragged to the altar by the hair of their heads.

But others, with equal logic, point out that we just naturally love those who love us, that nothing attracts a man to a girl so irresistibly as seeing her eyes light up at his approach and that nothing convinces him so surely that a woman is of high intelligence, great discrimination and unusual taste as for her to set her affections on him and consider him superior to any other man in the world.

Observation backs up this latter point of view, for there are hundreds of men who marry women that they didn't have the slightest intention or desire of marrying simply because the lovelorn ladies wept upon their breasts and sobbed out that they would die if they didn't get them.

And the final argument in favor of a woman telling a man that she loves him and asking him how about it is that it gets out of her system and clarifies the situation. If he responds to her affection and has only been too dumb to mention it, well and good. If he doesn't care for her and tells her flatly so, also well and good. She knows where she stands and does not need to go on pursuing a hopeless love quest.

DEAR DOROTHY DIX — When my husband comes home from his office of an evening sometimes he grunts by way of greeting. Sometimes he says nothing at all. He opens his paper and reads until I set before him a dainty dinner that I have prepared. When that is over —and the meal is eaten in silence— he repairs to the living-room, settles in a big easy chair to finish his paper. Then he dozes off to sleep and snores until time to go to bed. After being alone all day I feel the need of some companionship, but when I start chatting with him he tells me to shut up, that he is not interested, and says that after a man is out at business all day all he wants is a clean, neat home, good cooking and perfect peace and quiet. Just what can be done to correct this attitude?—THE MUTE ONE

ANSWER:

It is easier for the leopard to change his spots than it is for a middle-aged husband to alter his habits. I don't think that there is much that you can do that will be effective in turning a grouch into an entertaining companion. But there is a lot that you can do to better the situation for yourself and keep yourself from becoming one of the peevish, fretful, neurotic wrecks into which so many unhappy wives degenerate.

You will go to pieces as sure as shooting if you continue to live as you are doing, shut up alone all day in a house, doing domestic work which gives you too much time to think about yourself and your grievances, with nothing interesting or new or exciting ever happening and with a husband who regards you as nothing but a part of the household machinery.

The remedy for you is to make a life for yourself. Join clubs that meet in the afternoon. Learn how to play bridge. Go to the movies. Step out one or two evenings a week with a woman friend. Of course, this will make your husband as mad as fury, but you can tell him that as long as you havent any companionship at home you are compelled to seek it abroad. If that doesn't jolt him into trying to do something to make marriage tolerable for you nothing will.

But your letter—and I get many like it—makes one wonder that so few women instead of so many get divorces. When one sees the vast number of husbands who seem to think that just being married to them is joy and entertainment enough for any woman, and who never do anything to make their wives happy, one marvels that so many women have the strength and courage to endure them.

To spend forty or fifty years working, striving, pinching pennies to make a husband comfortable and help him to get on in the world and have one who never rewards one with a kind word or even a bit of conversation takes the stuff of which martyrs are made.

DEAR MISS DIX—Is a child better off in a home with real parents or with foster parents?—X.

ANSWER:

Depends on the parents. A child should be better off with its own parents, but just bearing children doesn't give men and women the mother or father heart, and many children would be better off with kind foster parents than they are with their own.

Sophisticated Little Girl

By PRUNELLA WOOD

Combining the peasant and "little girl" influences, we present one of spring's leading silhouettes for daytime, as recently modeled in Manhattan's Park Lane hotel.

This modernized dirndl gets credit for the name from the shirring at the waistline and the front skirt fulness; the back is neatly flat. Oddly enough, white sailcloth collar and cuffs, banded in peasant embroidery, trim the firm, rough crepe. Obviously, you should pick up the bright needle-stitches with lipstick, perhaps Prince Matchabelli's new "Fuchsia-Tulip," which does lovely things for your complexion.

Fashions

Here's a perfect spring dress with figure-hugging basque bodice and swirling skirt. And this bright rayon print crepe is just as smart for now as it is for spring. It gives a fresh spring-like air to your wintry wardrobe....and answers all your "dates" on your social calendar for luncheons, bridge and tea-dancing. It's also suitable for southern or for cruise wear. You'll enjoy making it and will marvel at the short time it actually takes to run it up on the sewing machine....the price so pleasingly low. Pastel woollens, linen, cottons, etc., are other fascinating mediums for its development.

Style No. 3329 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20 years, 30, 32, 34, 36 and 38-inches bust. Size 16 requires 3 yards of 39-inch material.

Yellows, warm shades of pink and muted reds, are best for rooms facing north? Clear Blue, off-white and fuschia with grey, suit south aspects. Three colors are better than two, but contrasts are more effective when restrained. Keep darker tones at the base of the scheme and lighter ones higher up.

Uncooked meat should be removed from its wrapping and placed on a plate or enamelled pan before storing in the refrigerator. Wipe with a damp cloth, if necessary, but do not wash. Cooked meat should be wrapped in wax paper to keep it from drying out. A good temperature for meat storage is between 40 and 50 degrees.

Debate Is Enjoyed By Fairmount Y.P.A.

FAIRMOUNT, March 4—The debate, "Resolved that travelling does more to develop a person than reading," was held on Wednesday evening at the YP.U.

As Mrs. H. M. S. McBain was unable to be present Miss Jean Hanbidge, the citizen convener, opened the meting with a hymn Morley Allen gave the scripture reading followed by prayer by Mr. G. H. Hooton. Stanley Allin gave a reading.

The affirmative was ably upheld by Allin Downes and Roger Hanbidge, who gave several distinct points on the advantage or travelling. Starting with the discovery of the world by Columbus, followed by the exploration of the different countries, the team continued, to Paul and the missionary tours of a later date as far as Macedona and Rome showing Christianity would not have spread as rapidly in the last century in Africa, China, India and Japan.

Travelling is inexpensive if taken the right way. The Toll brothers, university students travelled round the world for $25 apiece. The Hon. Mitchell Hepburn visited Australia recently to try and get a solution to remedy the economic conditions in Ontario. The debaters concluded by referring to the King and Queen planning on their visit to Canada in the spring.

The negative, ably upheld by Miss Betty Allin and Helen Earle who referred to Lincoln in educating himself by reading, arising to one of the best presidents of U.S.; also university graduates passing with highest honors not in travelling but by reading.

Even the people at the present time can't afford to travel but can take much pleasure out of reading in their leisure hours in their home. Even invalids can take the advantage of education.

Then a person today isn't safe travelling on highways or railways on account of accidents and deaths which are up in the thousands each year. So with splendid books, magazines and papers there is no need of travelling in this age.

Mr. G. H. Hooton and F. R. McIndoo were judges and gave the decision in favor of the affirmative side by a close margin. Mrs. C. W. Seyomur congratulated the speakers. Mr. Seymour was time keeper. A social time was spent at the close by a few games put on by Morley Allin.

Ragged Nerves Ruin Happiness

And yet with a little understanding those nerves could be made a source of vitality, charm.

A high-strung, nervous temperament needs release, variety. After a hard day at the office, fun to join a tap-dancing class or a badminton club, banish worry and care in healthful, absorbing exercise!

Eating leisurely meals, instead of snatching food while on edge, would cure that "nervous indigestion." A proper diet of minerals, vitamins and carbo-hydrates gives pep to cope with daily problems, improves the disposition.

Surprising how you conquer that tense feeling, how easily you overcome insomnia when you know how to relax. Stretch out flat and relax groups of muscles—first just the fingers, then the whole arm, the toes, then legs. Gradually go limp all over.

With healthy nerves, what a rosy glorious world is yours! In our 32-page booklet a famous physician tells how to overcome nerves, discusses the psychological reasons for nerves, possible physical causes such as bad teeth, tonsils, Diet and body care.

Send 15c in coins or stamps for your copy of OVERCOMING "NERVES" AND EVERY-DAY HEALTH PROBLEMS to Examiner, Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

Hastings Auxiliary Complete a Quilt

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HASTINGS, March 4.—The devotional and monthly meeting of St. George's Woman's Auxiliary was held on Thursday afternoon, at the home of Miss D. Plant. Rev. William Stocks led in the devotions, which included Litany and prayers.

Following the reports and correspondence a long report of the Toronto Board meeting as sent by the reporter, Mrs. Johnston of Humberside, was read by the secretary.

In request to a letter from the diocesan president, it was decided that a contribution be donated towards the personal gift for Miss Violet Summerhayes, who has just completed 25 years' service as the Toronto diocesan secretary for the Woman's Auxiliary. The gift to mark the occasion will be presented at the annual diocesan meeting.

The rector requested the members to remember the mid-week Lenten services to be held each Wednesday at 8 p.m.

A congregational get-together will be sponsored by the W.A. to be held after Easter.

Following the meeting a quilt was quilted and refreshments served by the hostess.

THREE OFFICERS ILL

The three principal officers of the Peterborough Masonic Lodge, the Master, Senior Warden and Junior Warden, were all absent through illness at the regular meeting of the lodge on Friday night. Their places were taken by past masters of the lodge.

GREETINGS FROM PRINCE ALBERT.

Members of the Kiwanis Club were made more conscious of Canada's new and speedy air mail service at their luncheon meeting on Friday when Secretary J. C. McKone read greetings from the Prince Albert Club to Peterborough Kiwanians, greetings that were contained in a letter that had left that far Western city only 24 hours before arrival in Peterborough. "Let's drop in for lunch some afternoon," cracked one member. Postal authorities said later that the service is even more speedy from Peterborough West. A letter leaving here at 4 in the afternoon would be in Prince Albert at 9.35 the following morning. The delay travelling East occurs after the letter reaches Toronto and has to wait for a train to Peterborough.

ROADS BREAKING UP.

A spell of mild weather is breaking up most of the side roads in the county at the present time, and in Otonabee, where the snowplow has been active all winter, the road surface is practically bare, although snow is piled high at the sides where the plow has been pushing it for months.

AN EXPENSIVE VISIT.

A young Toronto man found a visit to a local dance hall Friday night rather an expensive proposition. Constable Bruce Menzies of North Monaghan found him asleep in a car and this morning he pleaded guilty before Magistrate Langley in police court to a drunk charge and was fined $10 and $6.50 costs or ten days in jail.

DIRECTORS OF FAIR.

Peterborough County exhibitors will be prominent in the Quinte district seed fair to be held on March 15, 16, and 17 at Napanee, for which entries close on March 11. Directors for Peterborough County are W. W. Dawson, A. Huston, Ralph Drummond, W. G. Waterman, Howard Quinn, Gordon Hancock, and C. E. Moore. Gordon Hancock is honorary president of the fair.

FIRST TAGS SOLD.

The announcement that 1939 dog tags are on sale at the police station brought immediate results and three tags were issued Friday evening, the first a short time after the Examiner appeared on the street. Tag No. 1 was bought by Herbert Payne. For years the first tag was sold to J. H. Vernor of the Western Clock Company, but his well known dog friend has departed for the canine paradise.

COUNCIL TO MEET

The regular meeting of the City Council will be held on Monday night. There wil lalso be a special meeting of the council later in the month for the purpose of appointing an assistant assessor. At that meeting the report of the property committee, deferred because of the illness of Chairman Ald. Herb. McCannan will be presented.

GET HOT BREAKFASTS

Transients coming from Brockville report that the knights of the road do well in that town. After sleeping at the police station there are served with a hot breakfast provided by the Salvation Army. There is a little catch in it, however, the transients say, because the men are required usually to do a bit of snow shovelling around the city buildings in return for the shelter and meal.

HEADACHE LAST LONG TIME.

It is not often that a morning-after headache lasts as long as it has for a transient who appeared before Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., this morning. Last May, the man was charged in court here with being drunk and was granted an adjournment. When the day set for trial came around he was absent without leave and a warrant was issued for his arrest. Friday he fell into the hands of the police and this morning faced the old charge. At the outset he decided to plead not guilty but when he found the prosecution was not ready to go ahead and that he would be remanded to jail until Monday, he arrived at the conclusion that he might as well plead guilty and start his jail sentence at once. Magistrate Langley imposed a fine of $10 and costs, with the alternative of ten days in jail.

FOUR NEW POSTMEN ON

Employees of the Post Office off work because of flu still numbered 11 today and postal authorities believed the epidemic is checked. Next week, they believed, will see a decline in numbers stricken with the ailment. In the meantime all leaves have been cancelled and the relief staff is helping to fill vacancies. Four new postmen have been taken on and are struggling through unfamiliar routes. Householders in some sections of the city are receiving only one mail delivery a day so far, but this condition is soon to be relieved, authorities hope.

John Dawson Is Laid To Rest Ida Cemetery

MILLBRROK, March 4. — The community lost one of its outstanding citizens through the death of John Dawson, who passed away at his home just north of the village, after an extended period of ill health, in his eighty-fourth year.

The Dawson family, with its wide connection, has been intimately interminglied with the history of Cavan and Millbrook, over a long period of years. The late Mr. Dawson was born in Cavan, and was a son of William Dawson and Margaret Thexton, early settlers in the community; he was also the last surviving member of a family of ten children, those previously deceased being, eight sisters, Ann, Sarah, Margaret, Eelanor, Isabella, Agnes, Jane Sophia, and one brother, William Alfred.

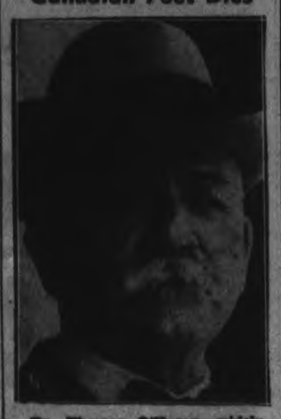
In his young manhood John Dawson was much interested in sport, actively participating in fishing and shooting, enjoying camp life, and being also a lacrosse player of no mean ability. Educated in the local Public school, Mr. Dawson later attended Albert College in Belleville. Fond of music, deceased was for some years an active member of the choir of St. Thomas' Anglican church, with which communion he had a life-long connection, serving for some years as Warden, and being faithful in attendance and support as long as health and strength permitted. In politics he was a staunch Conservative.

The immediate surviving relatives include the bereaved widow, formerly Mary J. Eakins, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Eakins, prominently early settlers of the community; three sons, Ronald, manager of the Bank of Toronto at Rossburn, Manitoba; Roy of Toronto, and George, with the James Richardson Company, grain merchants of Saskatoon, Sask.

Venerable Archdeacon William Simpson, B.A., had charge of the funeral which took place from his late residence on Wednesday at 2.30 p.m. to St. John's church, Ida, with interment in the family burial plot in the historic cemetery in which the church stands. The pall-bearers were: Bruce Eakins of Peterborough, ex-Warden W. T. Wood, H. A. Kerr, W. H. Coombe, J. E. Allen and L. H. Winslow; honorary bearers were H. B. Allen and George Fowler.

Among those from outside points who attended the funeral were Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Mulligan of Toronto, Mr. J. Keister of Cleveland, Ohio, Mrs. Henry Armstrong, of Toronto, and the immediate members of the deceased's family.

Canadian Poet Dies



Dr. Thomas O'Hagan, widely-known Canadian poet, author and scholar, died in Toronto after two years' illness, in his 84th year. A teacher by profession, Dr. O'Hagan was principal of some of the leading Roman Catholic separate schools throughout the dominion.

Seat Of Empire Not In Canada

"Canada's first line of defence lies in Britain and France" said Eric B. de Pendleton to the usually large and capacious audience in the Paragon Hall last night under the auspices of the Peterborough branch of the British-Israel-World Federation.

Speaking on Christ the King, the speaker showed how over 295 prophecies referring to our Lord had been fulfilled at the first advent. Forty men living through 15 centuries wrote over 200 prophecies about a man, his lineage, the date and place of birth, life and death. 300 years later the writings were translated in Greek. 250 years later a Man fulfilled every one of these prophecies. The writings are the Bible. The man is Jesus. They said He was God and is coming again as King.

In referring to a recent Toronto newspaper editorial relative to moving the throne to Canada, Mr. de Pendleton said this could not be as it was opposed to the whole tenor of scriptural prophecy. The throne is being held in trust "for the Lord God will give unto Him the throne of His Father David", and when it moves it will go to Jerusalem. Its destiny was not west but east the speaker said.

This kingdom was first set up at Sinaia in 1486 B.C. and 350 years later David was ordained king by Almighty with the right of perpetual succession until David's greater son should take it over. Our Lord when He comes does not bring a throne with Him but He comes to occupy a throne already in existence. No throne can exist apart from a kingdom.

Tremendous forces at the present time are plotting to overthrow the British throne, but they will ultimately be destroyed in order that Almighty God fay fulfill it's avowed plan and purpose.

Supper Club Hears Alderman Dutton

The importance of Community Service was brought out in an address by Alderman James Dutton to the Friday Night Club. "Ones citizenship must not be taken so lightly in this day," Mr. Dutton said. "We should inform ourselves of the doings of the day so we can express our opinions in a sensible way. We are failing to co-operate to our fullest extent to better our community," he said.

The speaker commented on the fact that great headway has been made in the control of contagious diseases. Splendid work is being done in stamping out tuberculosis, and if people co-operate great strides can be taken to improve the city's condition.

Touching on the housing plan, Mr. Dutton pointed out that money can be borrowed from banks to build and improve homes. In closing the speaker said, "we must prepare ourselves now for community work, and give a willing hand when necessary."

Another guest of the evening was Dr. Brace, National Councillor of the Y.M.C.A. World Service Department. Dr. Brace has spent about twenty-five years in China and commented briefly on present conditions there.

Lindsay Arsenal BeingRe-opened Cost $3,939,000

It was built by a Conservative Minister of Militia to help win a war election. It operated for five years, has been idle for sixteen.

Now a Liberal Government, nearing an election, is partially re-opening the plant at a substantial cost, and doing it, to quote a Government official, "as a token to the town of Lindsay that the Government is in earnest."

Total cost of the Lindsay Arsenal up to March, 1938, has been $3,939,000. It has produced less than 35,000,000 rounds of ammunition for small arms at a cost to the Government of approximately $114 per 1,000 rounds. Government records show the average price paid for such ammunition is about $50 a 1,000 rounds.

Estimate Low.

In 1916 Major-General Sir Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia in the Borden Government, represented Victoria-Haliburton riding, which included his home town of Lindsay. With an election certain the next year he recommended to Cabinet that a Dominion Arsenal be built at Lindsay and estimatd th cost at $276,000.

Purchase price of 10 0acres of land was estimated at $36,000.

Actual cost of the land was $39,000.

Actual cost of the whole arsenal was $1,768,319.

The plant was equipped to produce 80,000,000 to 90,000,000 rounds of ammunition a year. In 1917, the peak production year, its output was 11,000,000 rounds. In 1918 production fell to 9,000,000 rounds.

The end of the war in 1918 left every country with surplus ammunition. To prevent a sudden lay-off of labor in Lindsay, the arsenal was kept in operation until 1922. At that time the Valcartier Arsenal was able to produce all the small arms ammunition that Canada needed.

Department officials admit that the same thing is true to-day.

Expert military opinion is that production costs at Lindsay will always be higher than those at Valcartier, that the Lindsay Arsenal can never be operated on an economic basis.

Operating Costs Vary.

During its five years of activity, Lindsay production costs varied from $856,126 in 1919 to $206,816 in 1930 and $304,315 in 1922. In 1923 with the arsenal closed, the cost to the taxpayer was $20,669.

Repairs on the idle plant have since ranged from $2,000 to $5,000 a year. Staff salaries of $5,200 to $4,700 have been paid protectors of the Government property.

In 1936 repair bills were light and maintenance costs dropped to a low mark for the sixteen idle years of $6,289. In 1937 they were up again to $7,178 and in 1938 to $17,803.

In spite of repairs, depreciation on the buildings and machinery is estimated at more than $600,000, making no allowance for the drop in land values.

During its sixteen years of idleness the Lindsay Arsenal has been used as a storehouse for military equipment. Appropriately, the main portion of these stores has been 120,000 discarded Ross rifles and bayonets.

$50,000 to Re-equip.

The town of Lindsay has brought almost continuous pressure to bear on its Federal members to have the arsenal re-opened. Apparently this pressure has been successful. The Department of National Defence is spending about $50,000 this year to re-equip the plant for the manufacture of brass casings for small arm cartridges. The verdict of military experts that the Valcartier plant is all that is required is overridden.

Hon. Albert Matthews Will Be Asked To Open Peterboro's 1939 Exhibition

The Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, Hon. Albert Matthews, will be asked to open the Peterborough Exhibition this fall, it was decided at a meeting of the Exhibition Board's directors last night. President Tom Brown was instructed to invite His Excellency.

One member suggested in a spirit of levity that King George be asked to perform the function.

A requested increase of $101 for prize money in the flower division of the show was pared to $50 by the directors. The additional money will provide third prizes in some of the competitions.

The board decided to call for tenders for erection of two new barns, one for horses, the other for cattle. When cost has been ascertained the board will decide definitely whether the barns will be erected this year. The president was instructed to purchase a new spraying machine for painting. The board fence surrounding the grounds will also be painted again this year.

The Rambling REPORTERS

GETS HIM DOWN

This change of telephone numbers has proven too much for a member of the Examiner business staff. The other night he had occasion to call one of the executives so he telephoned to said executive's home. He was told to try No. 4641. The Examiner's new telephone number. He put in a call accordingly and it came in on another telephone in the business office a few feet away from where he was and another employee gravely informed him over the 'phone that the party he wanted was not in the office. Even then he did not realize that he had been calling the office in which he was working.—C.

George Evans Is Laid To Rest

The funeral service of George Evans, 302 Water Street, once member of the Peterborough City Council, was conducted from the Funeral Home of A. Comstock & Sons, 305 Water Street, on Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. Dr. E. W. Young of St. Andrew's United Church officiated, assisted by Rev. M. C. Parr of George Street United Church.

Mr. Evans died on Tuesday after a lengthy illness. A man who had been active in the spiritual, civic, and business life of this city, he was held in high esteem by numberless Peterborough citizens. In St. Andrew's Church he was Clerk of Session for many years until ill-health forced his retirement a year ago. He was an elder of the church until his death.

Dr. Young spoke of the integrity of Mr. Evans' life. He had an intense belief in goodness and right, and once he had determined that his course was right, nothing could prevent him from adopting it, Dr. Young said. "He had also a deep reverence and love for God. Many people value goodness, but have little place for God. Mr. Evans believed that religion lay at the root of morality. He was seldom absent from divine worship, either in the morning or evening. It was a joy to him to serve the church and to be a personal friend and helper to his minister."

Interment was at Little Lake Cemetery.

Making its first public appearance under its new leader, the Peterborough Symphony Orchestra, organized originally by Harry Prevey, and now under the direction of A. E. Paterson, scored a triumph in a varied program before a large and appreciative audience in the Collegiate Auditorium on Friday night. In the smoothness with which the organization met the exacting test of over a dozen numbers ranging from two classic overtures to a medley of Victor Herbert sons, there was ample evidence of what can be accomplished by a group of capable musicians, consistent practice and able direction. Well-balanced, strong in all departments, crisp in attack and smooth in execution, this little symphony ensemble of some thirty-two musicians is a valuable asset in the community's musical balance sheet and the delightful program given on this occasion is, it is to be hoped, only one in a series of such musical treats.

The conductor, Mr. Paterson, is a musician with ideas of his own and he has succeeded admirably in developing them through the medium of an orchestra responsive to the wishes of their leader and with the technical skill to get the effects at which he is aiming.

Even in the playing of the National Anthem, Mr. Paterson created an impression, because he chose to have "God Save the King" played in the hymn-like fashion favored by King George himself.

The orchestra program contained so many good things that it is difficult to single out any particular number. Probably Auber's stirring overture "Masaniello," an always popular selection, particularly because the favorite "Bright Shine the Stars" is featured and the brilliant "Barber of Seville" overture by Rossini, were particularly outstanding as a test of the orchestras ability and in both of these offerings the musicians and their conductor rose triumphantly to the occasion.

The always appreciated "The Swan" by Saint-Saens, was taken by Mr. Paterson more slowly than is usual, and the haunting beauty of the number was thereby enhanced. Another gem was Tschaikowsky's valse "The Sleeping Beauty," most effectively presented by the orchestra with Musician C. Crowley scoring heavily in a flute solo.

The striking Valse Triste by Sibelius, a number in which the Finnish composer has told in music the tragic story of a ghostly dance that grows wilder and wilder until a knock, signifies that death is at the threshold, was brilliantly played and on the same high plane was the orchestra's rendition of Beethoven's Turkish March, taken from the opera "The Ruins of Athens" and played at a running tempo that called attention to the fact that Turkish troops used to march always at the double.

In a much different vein were two comic opera selections. The first the ever-popular gypsy song from "Countess Maritza" followed by the Csardas from the same light opera. The tremelo effect by the strings and the bell solo contributed by Musician S. Smith, made this number one of the highlights of the night. A potpourri of Victor Herbert numbers including "I'm Falling In Love With Some One" and the irresistable waltz song "Kiss Me Again," was played with the proper dash and lightness and was a favorite with the audience.

Ketelby's delightful descriptive number "In a Persian Market," with its Oriental flavor and its snake charmer music, was effectively presented, and other orchestra offerings that pleased the audience were Haydn's minuet from "The Military Symphony" and the stirring French military march "The Pere de la Victoire" by Ganne, opening with a fanfare of trumpets and played with so much fire that the audience insisted upon the number being repeated.

Sharing in the triumph of the evening were the two well known local vocalists who assisted the orchestra, Mrs. Dorothy Sager Goldie, whose rich sweet voice, clearness of enunciation and ability to interpret the meaning of her songs, make her work always delightful contributed a two-song group, "Angels' Serenade" by Braga, in which a violin obligato was furnished by Mr. R. C. Searles, and "Arise Oh Sun", and in response to the applause, scored again in a spirited rendition of "Carmena." Mrs. Searles was a sympathetic accompanist.

George Coleman, always a favorite, was in excellent voice in his double number, the first the dollicking sea song "Rolling Down to Rio," in which the soloist caught the real spirit of the number, and "Birds at Twilight," in which he again registered effectively, having to repeat a verse of the second offering as an encore number. Mrs. Foster was at the piano for Mr. Coleman's part of the program.

P.C.I. CAGE TEAM COPS TWO VICTORIES OVER LINDSAYITES

Goodyears Win Series In 3 Straight

(By The Canadian Press)

TORONTO, March 4.—Champions of the Ontario Hockey Association, Toronto Goodyears remained the only unbeaten senior team in the east today but there loomed ahead of them the threat of one of the greatest teams ever developed in the north. Lake Shore Blue Devils of Kirkland Lake.

The Goodyears won the O.H.A. senior "A" crown last night with a clean-cut 3-0 victory over Oshawa, taking the best-of-five final series in three straight games. But even as the Goodyears won, Kirkland Lake was speeding to a 6-1 victory over Frood in Northern Ontario Hockey Association finals and adding to its already-loft reputation.

All Toronto's goals against the hard-trying Oshawans were scored in the second period. Hank Goldup got the first, Don Metz the second and Peanuts O'Flaherty the third. All are considered likely choices for promotion to professional ranks before long.

The winners needed a superb performance from Harry McQuesten to keep Oshawa from scoring. At the same time, though, in winning their second straight O.H.A. title they looked fit for the the Dominion championship chase.

Grosso Scores 4 Times

Don (Count) Grosso, former Sault Ste. Marie and Detroit player, led the Blue Devils to their convincing win right in Frood's home rink. Grosso scored four times on combination plays that demonstrated the power of the Lake Shore passing attack. Blink Bellinger and Stu Smith got the other goals for the visitors and Clarence Shillington scored for Frood.

W. A. Hewitt, secretary of the O.H.A. announced some time ago that if the senior "B" series did not end in line with the N.O.H.A. series and the senior "A", there would be no playoff between the senior "B" and N.O.H.A. champions. There appeared little likelihood today that the "B" winners would be given a chance in Allan Cup playdowns.

A four-team round-robin series for the "B" crown began last night when Niagara Falls defeated Chatham Maroons 4-2 at the Falls. The other teams involved are Waterloo and Peterborough.

Greenwood gave Niagara Falls a lead in the first period and Jack Dyte increased it to 2-0 in the second. Steak Morrison made the score 3-0 in the third before the Maroon power was turned on through a goal by Bob Wilson. Tony Pavone connected for the Falls again and Bobby Murrell of Chatham completed the scoring a minute from the finish..

The O.H.A. final round-robin series in senior "B" ranks open here on Monday at 8.30 o'clock in the Brock St. rink. Either Niagara Falls or Waterloo will be playing the Petes in this first contest, the series having started last night with the Big Roar boys pulling out a 4-2 nod over Chatham Maroons. It could not be learned this morning which club would be in Peterborough on Monday, but it is definite that one of these two teams will open on local ice

Each team of the four in this round-robin series meets each other in home-and-home games, which assures the Petes of three tilts here. Chatham, the Falls and Waterloo playing in Peterborough once each —and the locals meeting these three on foreign ice Regardless of which squad shows here Monday, fans can be sure of a real playoff battle with the classiest clubs in the province battling it out for a championship. It will likely mean a sellout crowd, with prices 50c and 75c for these final games.

Lindsay Midgets Beat Belleville 6-0

LINDSAY, March 4.—Lindsay Midgets smashed through Belleville Hi-Speeds and applied the whitewash for a 6 to 0 count in the first of home and home games in the Provincial "C" playdown here last night. The locals wil-cary their lead into the second game at Belleville Monday night. Despite the soft ice play was fast and pleased the crowd which filled every inch of space in the arena. Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

Well, the Petes won that regatta, all right. Like Indians in a canoe against kids in a rowboat. Finished many lengths ahead of the luckless Kingstons, taking a 12-1 smirk on the game and a mere 18-5 bulge on their O.H.A. senior "B" playdown round. So now it comes up the final round-robin serial, first game here Monday—and we'll see some real hockey again. A crowd of over 1,600 swarmed into the Brock last night, but all they saw was a one-sided shinny match, after the first frame—though folks here aren't kicking much as they love a winning team. And now they really believe that the Petes must have something this semester. Well, they have lots of speed, class and condition — and they're full of fight and ambish. Thy'll find lots of opposition henceforth, but they won't quit, we'll betcha.

* * * * * *

In fairness to the Kingstons, we must point out that they were lost on the soft ice. It wasn't bad in the first frame, but the mild evening and big crowd had the ice perspiring freely in the second and third heats. Kingston puckists have been used to hard artificial ice all winter and they couldn't get going at all. Tired right out early and didn't look anything like the squad that held the locals to a 6-4 score at home on Monday. They were disgusted with their showing here, but didn't do any roughing up at all. 'Twas a clean but very unexciting tussle throughout.

Petes Stepping Along

At the same time, the Petes were stepping along nicely, taking advantage of the heavy going and playing heads-up hockey. Would have won on any ice the way they were travelling this tilt. Goalie and defence didn't have too much to do, while both front lines worked hard and played a smart brand of hockey. Goals came so thick and fast near the finish that we could hardly keep track of 'em—and certainly Goalie Hewitt couldn't! Coach Frank Buckland even lost his worried look along about the end of the second stanza, the first time this season, too.

* * * * * *

First line of Eddie Starr, Honey Tompkins and Bun Kingdon fattened up their batting averages by pelting the old bootheel by Hewitt so often he looked gun-shy at the finish. A bit of golf shown, too, as the boys whammed the rubber down the fairway when it threatened to stick or submerge. Second line of Don Coughlin, Red Creighton and Doc Nichol also turned in a good performance on the firing line, with the defence doing yeoman work on the attack. Harding booted out some neat ones as Kingston tried a few dangerous ganging-up charges. None of the visitors showed much in this fray. Referee Houston tooted a lotta tunes on his tooter and his trousers shrunk two inches from the spray before the end! We might point out that there have been much better junior jousts seen here this season by far fewer fans, but the customers like the seniors.

It Seems Only Fair

Officials of the Peterborough Hockey Club have decided to boost admission prices for the round-robin final series to 50c and 75c. As they point out they haven't had a good financial season —the seniors have to carry the juniors — and have no surplus to date, over running expenses. And three extra long trips now face the club, one to Niagara Falls, one to Waterloo and one to Chatham. It would cost about $14 per man to travel by train to Chatham for a party of maybe 20, so that adds up to heavy sugar. And they state that their cut at no gate so far this season would cover the cost of one of these final trips — so the puck fans here can hardly kick at the increase, not when they're going to see the four best senior "B" clubs in Ontario battling it out for the title.

* * * * * *

At this writing it wasn't definite whether Niagara Falls Cataracts or Waterloo Tigers would be here Monday to meet the Petes, but it will be one of these teams. The Falls sent word they'd be here if Waterloo wasn't ordered to Peterborough on Monday, and no one seemed sure this morn which it would be. Well, both are first-rate clubs and it'll be a real battle, one that the fans should go for. Hope the weather tightens up o'er the week-end. Folks are hollering for ducats already, before 'tis known whether it's the Bengals or Big Roar huskies. Guess we'll have to wait till Monday to know the Petes' rivals for sure, and to get a line on the rest of the round-robin schedule.

Hoops And Whoops!

Two men's cage contests tonight at the "Y", Quakers playing Dominions at eight in a city loop fray, followed at nine by the Invictus Club of Parkdale 'gainst our St. Paul's. This is an O.C.B.A. intermediate "A" playdown game, and the Saints will need about a 10-point lead to tote back to Toronto next Saturday. The Invictus crew won out in a 15-man circuit this season and are said to be stronger than Brampton in '38 when St. Paul's beat 'em for the church championship of Ontario. Local lineup will start like this probably: Marsh and McIntyre on defence, McArthur at centre with Pulkinghorn and Thorburn forwards, spares being Sedgewick, Gemmell, Ward, McPherson and Crowe. Toronto players are tall and tricky, we hear. St. John's have an O.C.B.A. juvenile joust in Port Perry this eve.

Lindsay Midgets chucked a 6-0 bucket of whitewash over the Belleville junior "C" pucksters in their first playdown tilt on Scugog ice last p.m. and should have no trouble knocking the Quinte crew out of competition in the next number. The Midgets have class and ought to just about battle their way through to a provincial pennant this year—and the boys up there deserve one after so long a wait. Lindsay scribe says there were several inaccuracies in the Monarchs' side of the recent mixup with the Midgets in that defaulted playoff tussle, but he prefers to forget the whole matter—and that is probably the better way. Unfortunate, but no one was hurt, and no doubt Lindsay would have licked a full Monarchs' team, anyway.

Dese, dem and dose: Niagara Falls showed their class at home last night with a 4-2 win o'er Chatham Maroons in the first senior "B" round-robin game....Whitby took their intermediate "B" group honors with an 8-6 round score against Sutton....Lucky numbers on the programs at the Brock last eve were 13631 and 13107....Al Gratton wired good wishes to the Petes from Montreal before their game 'gainst Kingston here....Al Spencely has been on the job 26 puck seasons taking tickets in the Brock balcony, and he polices that section in most efficient manner....P.C.I. senior boys took an 83-23 chuckle in a school cage fray in Lindsay last gloaming, while P.C.I. senior gals pulled out a 38-21 win there....Falls' lineup includes: Mowers, Murray, Dyte, Grigor, Mason, Croucher, Pavone, Brenchley, Morrison, Greenwood and Allan....Waterloo gang is: Voll, Clair, Couch, Bauer, Vrooman, Grau, Hause, Smith, Kropp, Hinchberger, Krueger....Hectic hockey days ahead for the Petes and their followers for the next two weeks—and maybe a title, too....And all we want is a cold snap for one more week, that's all....Was a time when our puck and ball squads lost always to Kingston, but (altogethah now) "Them Days Are Gone Forevah!"

10 Best Rinks In Canada Meet Next Week

By LOUIS V. HUNTER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

TORONTO, March 4.—(CP)—Toronto will be the curling capital of Canada next week with the Dominion's 10 best rinks competing in the 12th annual renewal of the Macdonald's Brier competition for the national championship.

Rinks from each of the provinces and Northern Ontario will battle for the crown Manitoba almost has monopolized since the Brier first was held in 1928. Manitoba has held the trophy eight of the 11 times it has been up for competition.

Defend Cup For Manitoba

This year Ross Kennedy of Winnipeg will defend for his province the title won last year by the redoubtable rink led by Ab Gowanlock of Glenboro. Kennedy, who learned to curl when wooden blocks were the thing to use, will lead his rink against powerful quartets from Prince Edward Island, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Quebec, Ontario, Northern Ontario, Alberta, Saskatchewan and British Columbia.

It is the 41-year-old Kennedy's first try for the Brier and he will have to pit his skill against Brier veterans like C. W. Durant of the Halifax Mayflower club, who has been here three times, F. R. McLaine of Prince Edward Island, Bob Cream of Quebec, Bert Hall of Ontario and Royl David of British Columbia, making their second trip to the Brier. The other skips are being initiated into curling's "big-time" competition.

Alberta Has Been Winner Twice

Alberta has held the championship twice and Ontario once. None of the other provincial rinks outside of the fast-stepping rinks that come from Manitoba have been able to cop the title. Ontario, with a rink skipped by Gordon Campbell of Hamilton, won in 1935. Cliff Manahan's rink from Edmonton won it twice for Alberta.

The four-day round-robin series opens Monday at Toronto's palatial Granite Club Each rink plays the other quartets once and the winner of the most games is declared champion A tie necessitates a play-off.

Inside Sportin' Dope

by A. WISE CRACKER

Mister Sporting Editor:

Well, Mac, by the time this gets before the eyes of the customers, if any, Mister Buckland's Petes should be safely past the Kingston barrier and ready for the senior B playoff serious The Buckaroos went down to Kingston Mon. and outlasted the home lads to win by 2 goals and while the outlook this Friday p.m. as this is being wrote is for soft ice and anything can happen on that kinda going, still 2 markers is 2 markers and they're a lot when the other fellow has them so that in spite of conditions the lads should oughta ease themselves into the final dash for the silverware.

Monday nite, although the machine wobbled a bit at times, the boys on the whole played good hockey and when it come to the dash for the tape in the last period they had the foot to come on and win—and that's a trick of good hockey teams as well as good race horses.

This Here Round Robin

If they come through tonite and they aint no reason why they shouldn't they will find themselves in a round robin serious with 3 other teams and that means a lotta hockey before the championship title is finally give out. The only catch in the thing is they probably call it a round robin serious because it is played at the time the robins come round and that, neighbors, is a poor time for a berg what aint got no artificial ice. Unless the Petes has a whole lotta luck and the fans too some of the 3 home games that will be on the cards for here if the Buckaroos oust the K's will have to be shifted out of town and that won't be exactly in the nature of a brake. However all we kin do is to imitate the politicians and adopt a policy of watchful waiting or something.

The Kids Done Well

Since I last wrote the customers our Monarchs has folded up for the season. The kids give the chesty and fast-moving Lindsay Midgets quite a run for their money in the lst game of the group finals here but before the nite of the second game rolled around old Kid Flu was in there swinging and 5 of the Vitarelli-Clark gang was tucked under the blankets and inhaling aspirins and hot lemonade. The result was the Monarchs had to default and take a pickup team to Lindsay to fill the date. Naturally the result was a 1-sided win for the Scugogites.

Twas Queer Night

The pro loop has uncoverd some queer quirks this week, Mac, and 1 of the queerest nites was Thurs. when the 3 tall end teams all win over clubs higher up the ladder. The biggest surprise of all was the Black Hawks going right into New Yawk and trimming the stylist Rangers 3 to 1. The result of the nite's doings is that the last 3 teams looks to be in for a photo finish to see which 1 of the trio is going to hang up their uniforms first. Incidentally the way them Detroit Red Wings has been turning it on lately makes it look like they may be a prominent contender when it comes time to tangle for the Stanley mug. Mister Sid Howe and Mister Marty Barry has hit their old time stride and some of the yearlings is also going great guns so mark this down in your diaries now. Watch Detroit in the playoffs.

And with that gem of wisdom you and I is going to part company right here.

Sportfully yours,
A. WISE CRACKER.

Halifax Wolves Maritimes' Allan Cup Threat

By MIKE RYAN
Central Press Canadian Correspondent

HALIFAX, Mar. 4.—Hockey fever has again gripped the Maritimes.

Crowds streaming into rinks recall scenes not witnessed since the Big Four league wound up in 1936 after producing Allan cup championship teams three years in succession.

Nowhere is the present revival more pronounced than in Halifax. The old garrison city by the sea is again in the grip of Allan cup madness. So impressive have been the Halifax Wolves in winning the Eastern league that they are expected to go a long way on the Allan cup trail.

Back in 1935, last year of the Big Four, Halifax Wolverines climaxed a seven years' campaign by cruising through Montreal Royals and Port Arthur Bearcats to win the senior amateur championship of Canada. In the two preceding years the Wolverines were blocked by Moncton's Hawks who won the Allan cup two yea in succession.

Those were exhilarating, frenzied days for eastern hockey fans. Then came reaction. Wolves, in bitter conflict with the C. A. H. A., were arbitrarily ruled out of the Olympic games and in their place the hockey moguls sent a makeshift team that went down to ignominious defeat at Garmish-Partenkirchen. It was the first time in the history of the modern Olympic games that Canada had failed to win the hockey championship of the world.

By that time Wolverines had been dismembered. Less than a year after winning the Allan cup Halifax was left without a team of senior calibre.

In the next three years attempts to get together a winning combination failed dismally. This year Coach Jimmie Lortie of Montreal was imported to handle the team and his success has been amazing.

One of the bright spots of Coach Lortie's early season work came when the young, fast-skating Wolves made a sensational showing in an exhibition game against Trail Smoke Eaters. Allan cup champions.

Since then the squad has continued to improve and Halifax fans have been flocking to the games, confident that at last they have a team that will be an outstanding contender for the championship and perhaps this year bring the Allan cup back to Halifax.

Campbellford Wins

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, March 4.—The Oilers staged a preliminary warm-up bout when they met a group from Warkworth in an unscheduled tussel here on Thursday evening. The game which Manager Gerry West termed "merely a practice" was not advertised and a mere handful of spectators were on hand to see the locals hand out a 6-2 trouncing.

Two Vancouver Clubmates To Meet In Canadian Badminton Final

TORONTO, Mar. 4 — (C.). — The erstwhile sick man of Vancouver, long-limbed Dick Birch, got another and more important chance to-day to knock the props from beneath his fellow-townsman, John Samis, the Canadian badminton champion.

Birch and Samis, both members of Vancouver Badminton Club, came up to the finals in the Canadian championships last night with stirring straight sets victories over Ontario rivals.

Birch won the national title in 1937, then went down with pneumonia and wasn't able to defend last year.

Samis, gathering full stride with a terrific overhead smash and a calculating long-range game, gained Dick's crown at Quebec last year.

Came this year's Pacific Coast event and Samis and Birch strode through almost unruffled to the final. Birch's friends agreed then he had recovered his old game. But Slammin' Johnny amazed them with a decisive straight-sets triumph.

Recovered His Old Game.

Last night Birch again demonstrated he has recovered his old game when he stopped the Ontario champion, Rod Phelan of Toronto, 15-10, 17-14. There was the old poise and the old crafty manoeuvring that made him best two years ago. Yet there remained the shadow of that beating by Samis on the coast.

Samis swept through the semi-finals, just as easily, stopping young Ted Pollock of Kitchener, 15-10, 18-14, despite a second-game rally by the Western Ontario ace. Johnny had to fight off a slight leg injury in the second game, but it apparently didn't affect him afterward.

Women's Semi-Finals.

The women's singles semi-finals brought Marjorie Delaney, broad-shouldered Quebec star, into new prominence in a startling 5-11, 11-8, 12-11 win over Mrs. Guy Perodeau of Ottawa. Last year Mrs. Perodeau lost in the final to Mrs. W. R. Walton, Jr., of Toronto, who is seeking the all-England title this year.

Miss Taylor stepped by a 9-11, 11-7, 11-6 score over Anne Bolvin of Quebec.

With surprising ease, Jim and Paul Snyder of Waterloo, Ont., eliminated the Ontario champions, Colin Brown and Jack Nash of London, in men's doubles. The Snyder brothers won 15-7, 15-5, to land up aaginst Phelan and Jack Sibbald, winners in a terrific struggle over Tim Lownsbrough and Howland Smith of Toronto, 15-8, 10-15, 15-6.

One-Sided Tilt For Boys; And Girls Win

P.C.I. senior boys' and senior girls' basketball squads continued on their C.O.S.S.A. championship quests, in Lindsay last night, the Garnet and Gray girls nosing out L.C.I. girls, and the boys massacreing an outclassed Lindsay squad 83-23 in their final appearance prior to meeting Cobourg in the all-important triple-header next week

Although trailing 12-11 at the half Miss Brisbin's senior girls came back in the last period, out-scored L.C.I. 17-10 and won out in the closing minutes. Fast, close and thrilling throughout, the play was split evenly between the two squads, neither team having a commanding margin at any time.

First Half Fast.

The first half was fast, featured by hard but clean checking, saw both teams missing many chances to score, P.C.I. having a slight advantage offensively. After the half, P. C.I.'s passing attack and better shooting gave them a small margin in play and a big enough edge in scoring to earn the win. P.C.I. got 4 out of 8 three throws and Lindsay had 2 for 6. M. Juby, E. Saunders, R. Dalliday and D. Glover were best for P.C.I. and E. Hughes and L. Green stared for the losers. The teams:

P.C.I. (38)—E. Saunders (12), J. Ottewell, R. Dalliday (9), E. Craig, M. Juby (7), D. Glover, H. Beatty, L. Reed.

L.C.I. (21)—L. Green (2), G. McNeuin, H. Corley (1), E. Betts, E. Hughes (18), M. Warrian, J. Corley, R. Massales, H. Algar, G. Milburn.

Referee—L. Cornell, Lindsay.

Nothing To It.

Drifting through a sieve-like Lindsay defence and scoring at will, P.C.I.'s senior boys completely overshadowed the homesters. They opened their attack early, had a huge margin at the half and piled it up as the game wore on. After the opening minutes L. C. I. never threatened the visitors, having very little of the play and seemingly unable to slow the P.C.I.'s driving attack. Despite the heavy score, play was fast and hard all the way, both teams stressing attack rather than defense. Lindsay lost two players, Bryant and Bates, with four fouls, P.C.I. making 7 for 15 throws and the losers 5 for 11. All the P.C.I. players shared in the scoring, Cutting, Moorhead, Foster, Harle and Gillespie leading the scorers, with Reids and Bryant best for the losers. The teams:

P.C.I. (33—Centre Foster (15), forwards, Cutting (18), Taylor (4); guards, Gillespie (11), Johnston (4); subs, Moorhead (17), Harle (14), Ferguson.

Local Seniors Take 12-1 Triumph To Win O.H.A. Round, 18-5 And Advance Into Final Series

In a glorified shinny match on soft ice here last night, the Petes romped through Kingston for a 12-1 victory to win their O.H.A. senior "B" playdown round by an 18-5 score, the first game in Kingston ending 6-4 for the locals. A crowd of over 1,600 fans witnessed the one-sided struggle as the Petes easily qualified for the Ontario round-robin final series.

The ice became heavy late in the first period, and the visitors —accustomed to artificial ice— were bogged down as the speedy homesters went to town to pile up the count. The score was 2-0 in the first frame and 6-1 going into the third. The tired Kingston crew could do nothing in the final heat and the Petes pasted in six more soft ones.

It was a clean contest but slow and ragged a good part of the route with the puck sticking and rolling to interfere with passing plays. Mild weather and the crowd had the ice watery the last half of the tilt. The visitors looked like a badly beaten team after the first period and the Petes were clicking in top form, showing more speed and finish inside the rival defence zone.

Starr Shines

Eddie Starr sparked the victors along with a fine display of offensive hockey, figuring in on five goals. His line-mates, Kingdon and Tompkins, were also dangerous on the attack, the latter being in on four counters. Creighton, Nichol and Coughlin on the second front wall worked hard and had a big hand in the one-sided win, while the home defence and goalie —though not overly busy—worked well. Gordon and Gow were about the best of the Kingston forwards, but none of them could get clicking in the heavy going, and the goalie had little protection most of the evening.

Early in the initial inning, Gray rapped the rubber by Hewitt on Kingdon's pass in close. Play was fairly fast and quite even till Gow got the gate for slashing, with the Petes pressing hard till he returned. Both goalies stopped some nice ones as play moved up and down, with the Petes denting the twine for another as Creighton took Nichol's pass at defence and blasted it home, making the round score 3-4. Hewitt thefted Starr of one and, when Tompkins got the air for slashing, the visitors tried hard but in vain to tally.

Gets Ragged

Play was slower and more ragged on heavy ice in the second, with the Petes having a good margin on the attack. Starr's shot hopped Hewitt's stick for an easy one early and Coughlin came close. Kingston began ganging up and keeping Goalie Harding on the hop for a few minutes but the Petes threatened on breakaways. Hewitt pulled two fine saves and then Starr rapped home another as the goalie cleared to him after blocking Kingdon's drive. Scrutton made the home netter jump, and then Coughlin raced in close to bang home Crowe's pass. Starr scored again on an angle shot from Tompkins. The latter and Hagen were waved off for roughing it and Crowe followed for boarding. Crawford whipped the puck past Harding on a nice shot just before the bell ended the frame with the game score 6-1.

The ice was watery in the third and shinny prevailed with the Petes dominating play, though Kingston kept trying and pressed a few times on power plays. Kingdon tallied in close on Starr's assist and Tompkins got two in a row, Starr and Kingdon aiding. Harding blocked several tries by Kingston and, with Stoness off for tripping, the Petes pressed hotly in the sticky going. Nichol counted a nice one on Coughlin's pass and Creighton followed suit a few seconds later at point-blank range. Near the finish, Tompkins brought the disc out of a corner to rifle it into the losers' cage to make the count 12-1 at the gong.

The teams:

Kingston: Goal, Hewitt; defence, Roberts and Nicholson; centre, Gordon; wings, Gow and Scrutton; alternates, Hagen, Crawford, Boyd, Kosick and Stoness.

Petes: Goal, Harding; defence, Gray and Gardner; centre, Kingdon; wings, Starr and Tompkins; alternates, Weir, Crowe, Creighton, Coughlin and Nichol.

Hastings Ousted From E.P.L. Playoff Games

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HAVELOCK, Mar. 4. — The executive of the East Peterborough Rural Hockey League met last evening in the Norwood Council Chamber to make arrangements for the group playoffs. Winners of these two matches will meet in a sudden death game on Saturday, March 11, to decide the E.P.R.L. champs for 1938-39.

The annual tournament for the Tedford Cup will be held on Saturday, March 18, if the ice is still available at the Norwood Arena, where all the above scheduled playoff games are scheduled to take place.

Fifty Cures Fail, Still Paralitic Fights On, Faith In Science

WINDSOR, Ont., March 4.—(CP)—Roger Carr, 34, of Detroit, laughed today at the creeping paralysis that for nearly six years has been breaking down his motor nerves in relentless progression. "I'm going to beat this thing, I know I shall," Carr said.

He grinned. His face was clear and unafraid. No hint of terror marked his bearing, although he knew that in six years more than 50 different treatment techniques used on him had failed to check the advance of multiple sclerosis in his body.

"Doctors tell me my case is incurable. Cures just haven't been found yet. I'm offering to let scientists use my body for experiments. Already, because of this, we know 50 methods of treatment that won't work, so we are that far along the way to a cure."

Carr's confidence has not been could still drive a car and now he coul dstill drive a car and now he can't walk unaided. He is conducting a one-man crusade against the disease by gathering as much information as possible and offering his body for experiments.

Carr, visiting Windsor, said he had discovered 320 cases in North America including two in Canada, one a girl at Kitchener, another a Vancouver case. The Kitchener girl, he said, wrote him a tear-stained note of comfort.

Carr said John Bollinger, who baffled Denver psychiatrists with his compelling urge to walk backards, might be a possible victim of multiple sclerosis in an early stage.

Carr, a former athlete, suffered the disease after he donated 11 pints of blood in 20 weeks to patients in Detroit.

14 Hours Required To Clear Wreck

LINDSAY, March 4. — Abbie Crimmons faced Justice of the Peace Brown on the charge of the theft of a car, the property of R. J. Daw, town, in police court Friday. The case was adjourned until March 8. The car was stolen from a local service station on Monday night and was later found overturned in a ditch near Greenbank in a damaged condition.

John Brokenshire, of Fenelon township, was the victim of an accident on Wednesday. While crossing the yard at his home, he stumbled and fell breaking his leg above the ankle. This is the third time the limb has been broken.

The death is announced at Shreveport, Louisiana, of Joseph Connolly, a former resident of Lindsay. The deceased was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Connolly, of West Ops, and before moving to Shreveport was a resident of New Orleans. The remains will be interred at Oklahoma.

The C.N.R. auxiliary and crew worked for fourteen hours straight on Thursday clearing the wreck at Myrtle. The semi-weekly combination train and snowplough was derailed due to ice conditions. No person was injured and traffic between Port Perry and Whitby was reported clear today.

Fascism In West Seen As Menace

REGINA, March 4—(CP)—Warning against fascist control of Saskatchewan was made by two C.C.F. speakers in the legislature last night during debate on an amendment of non-confidence to the main budget motion.

T. Johnston (C.C.F.-Touchwood) and Joseph Burton (C.C.F.-Humboldt) warned the government of a growing sentiment in the province for fascism.

Mr. Burton predicted that unless the government brought about reform and better conditions "neither the C.C.F. nor the Liberals will form the next government of Saskatchewan."

"I may be unduly alarmed," he added, "but what I have seen in the country is something to give us all concern."

Mr. Johnston referred to a Fascist parade which he said took place in Raymore, Sask., at the time of the European crisis last September. This parade was unmolested, Mr. Johnston charged.

"The government has taken strong steps to curb Communism and Socialism but it ignored Fascism and other organizations which preach panaceas far and wide."

The C.C.F. non-confidence amendment was defeated 29 to 13 following two days of debate.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER
By SHEPARD BARCLAY
"The Authority on Authorities"

TOO GOOD A MATCH

SUPPORT OF YOUR trump suit by your partner is always desirable. And if you happen to have two suits of considerable length, it also is fine to find him with valuable fillers in the side suit. But when the suits are not overly long, it is generally best to have your side suit and his side suit non-fitting, as that affords a chance to discard your losers on his suit or his on yours. If side suits of moderate length happen to fit exactly, you can't discard any of the losers in the other suits. You have too good a match then.

With his very welcome holding, North bid 1-Heart here and South responded with 2-Clubs. After West called 2-Diamonds, North was ready for business, knowing that there was a club fit regardless of whether there was one in hearts or not. He showed this with the powerful call of the opponents' suit, 3-Diamonds. South thereupon showed his heart fit at 3-Hearts, then North his club fit at 4-Clubs, whereupon South bid 4-Hearts to let his partner know he had a really substantial fit.

By now North should have been warned that there was very slight likelihood he would find a place to get rid of his spade losers. He went on unheeding, however, and hopped to 6-Hearts. He lost two spade tricks and one diamond trick, being down two. Had his partner's side suit been spades, there might have been a better chance to get rid of some losers.

A bit of study will show that clubs would have been a better contract than hearts by one trick, as with that suit as trump, a spade loser could have been thrown on the heart suit. It is the old principle that a suit evenly divided between the two hands makes a better trump because the unbalanced side one will furnish one or more discards.

Monday's Problem

If West bids 1-Spade, North 2-Diamonds, East 2-No trump, West 3-Spades and East 3-No trump on this deal, why is a diamond lead more likely to be effective than a heart lead.

HALIFAX, March 4—(CP)—Periods of slack employment in the coldiery towns provide a special relief problem in Nove Scotia. In the last year summer employment fell below normal and aggravated the situation.

Charlottetown's unemployed provide Prince Edward Island's biggest relief issue. Three thousand names are oa the relief rolls of the capital city of the Island province.

In Nova Scotia almost all the towns distribute relief through contributions by Dominion and provincial governments. New Waterford and Dominion (Cape Breton) provide relief under a special public works program.

At Halifax, where slack employment on the waterfront has tended to increase the number on relief, "rotating" employment keeps an administrative and investigating staff on its toes. Relief authorities said some relief recipients obtain work for a few months and are then back on relief. Payrolls of a number of employers are available to the relief staff for purposes of keeping a check on the recipients.

As in Sydney and Glace Bay, relief recipients in Halifax have to undergo "work tests." In the capital city recipients have to work one day weekly as a proof of their willingness to accept employment. Last year the city valued their work at $32,000. In Sydney and Glace Bay, inability to work results in persons being placed on the poor rolls instead of being assisted through direct relief.

Single Homeless

Halifax authorities do not consider "drifters" a problem. But the number of single, homeless men maintained in hostels by the city is estimated at about 130, more than double the number a year ago. Slack employment in the lumber woods is blamed for this increase.

Relief officials of Halifax said one of the problems of relief administration had been conquered several years ago. In the early days of direct relief, families came to Halifax hoping to be maintained. Authorities got over this difficulty by providing relief only for those who have settled in the city for at least five years.

Though the number of unemployed in the capital city, at present estimated at slightly more than 5,300, is a 10 per cent increase over the corresponding period a year ago, relief figures for 1938 were below those for the preceding year. Cost of relief in Halifax in 1937 was estimated at slightly less than $277,000. Last year it was about $245,500.

Direct relief is provided through contributions from the city, provincial and Dominion governments, the city contributing 36 2-3 per cent, the province 33 1-3 and the dominion 30.

In Glace Bay the burden is carried about equally by the three contributors. In Sydney the province and city contribute 35 per cent each at present with the Dominion paying the remainder. Regulations provide no part time worker may receive relief but make assistance available for all "necessitous persons".

Situation in P.E.I.

In Prince Edward Island, the unemployed of Charlottetown, cared for through contributions of the city, provincial and Dominion governments, constitute one of the three classifications of relief recipients in the province. The others are the fishermen, provided for by Dominion and provincial governments, and unemployed throughout the province, cared for by the two governments and in some cases by the municipalities.

The city of Charlottetown distributed about $50,000 for relief last year. Of this amount the provincial government contributed $25,000. Recipients were given food, coal and firewood. Arthur Gormley, treasurer of the Laborers' Protective Union here, estimated cost of the food amounted to two cents a person per meal.

Several indirect relief projects were also carried out last year. In Charlottetown they were paid for jointly by the city and the two governments. They included civic beautification and grading on a new airport.

The approximately 800 fishermen on relief have been cared for by Dominion-provincial grants on a 50-50 basis. Hon. B. W. LePage, president of the Island's executive council, said the fisherman was given $9 worth of groceries a month and would receive compensation for gear lost in storms last fall.

Unemployed in the province, exclusive of Charlottetown and the fishermen, are estimated at 1,500. Last year $42,000 was spent on this group by Dominion and provincial governments. Recipients are allotted $3 monthly. In some cases relief is granted by the municipalities, as in Summerside, Alberton and Montague.

To show changes in prison population, the minister gave figures to show the total rose from 3,187 in 1930 to a high of 4,587 in 1933 to a low of 3,096 in 1936.

In 1929 the number of prisoners under 21 was 322. This increased to a high of 527 in 1932 and fell to 280 in 1936. It was 317 in 1937 and the minister had no later figures in this classification.

These figures, the minister said, did not bear out the claim made earlier this week by Hon. H. H. Stevens, Conservative - Kootenay East that prison populations were increasing because of economic conditions and that youthful crime was increasing at an alarming rate.

Grant MacNeil, CCF-Vancouver North, said the figures for provincial institutions should be presented to get a true picture of the crime problem. Mr. Lapointe said those institutions were not under jurisdiction of his department.

The minister said he hoped the new commission would branch out and make needed reforms. The Borstal system for reclamation of youthful convicts was recommended but these reforms would have to be brought about slowly and carefully.

When the commission was set up it would study the report of the royal commission on penitentiaries and report to the government as to carrying out of its recommendations.

To another questioner, the minister and extensions to Kingston penitentiary were under way and it might be unnecessary to transfer prisoners from that institution to others as had been done in the past.

All female convicts in Canada were congregated in the women's prison at Kingston and the fact there were only 31 inmates at the present time spoke well for the "weaker sex," Mr. Lapointe said.

He had been anxious to have this measure passed last session so that the new commission could give consideration to the royal commission's recommendations. He believed those recommendations should be handled by the new commission.

J. S. Woodsworth, C.C.F. leader, said he had been "earful" of the long delay in dealing with the recommendations of the royal commission. There were a number of recommendations dealing with other matters apart from management of penitentiaries. "What about the prevention of crime?" he asked.

"Prevention of crime is the responsibility of my honorable friend as well as my own," the minister replied. Prevention of crime was something that required co-operation of government departments and other bodies, and also might be influenced by the manner in which convicts were handled in penal institutions.

Government's Wheat Policy Subject Of Controversy

While Hon. James G. Gardiner, minister of agriculture, CENTRE, assured the House of Commons that the new wheat policy to be adopted by the dominion government will serve the dual purpose of creating better economic conditions in Canada and tightening the strings on the public purse, T. C. Douglas, Social Credit member, LEFT, charged that Canada had drifted from competitive capitalism to monopolistic capitalism and that great combines controlled the prices of farm machinery, oil, gasoline, radios and meat packing. Attacking the government's new wheat policy, M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. member, RIGHT, declared that upon the success of the western farmer depended the whole economy of the Dominion. The time would come, he declared, when the federal government would have to fix prices for primary products other than wheat.

No Preference For Any Canadian In Broadcasting Declares Head Of C.B.C. Before House Committee

OTTAWA, March 4.—(CP).— In radio broadcasting there should be no preference for any Canadian over his fellow Canadians, Leonard W. Brockington said to the House Radio Committee yesterday. If one man has a right to demand time on the air and 100 other men simultaneously make the same demand, who, asked Mr. Brockintgon, should be given the preference?

The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation's chairman went into the policy of the Corporation with regard to the dissemination of individual opinion, making specific reference to the controversy surrounding the complaints of George McCullagh, publisher of the Toronto Globe and Mail, who was denied network facilities for a series of broadcasts.

From what he knew of Mr. McCulaigh, Mr. Brockington said, he thought if the Toronto publisher would sit down with him and talk the question over the two would end up in agreement.

Mr. McCullagh might complain of the Corporation's inconsistencies. These were not denied, on occasion. He might complain of a certain absence of notice, which may have been inevitable. Mr. Brockington said he was prepared to admit that if inconvenience had been caused to Mr. McCullagh, that was regretable.

But these were minor things, when set beside the large principle involved.

"I submit that our attitude, and that of any reasonable man, is not divergent, but synonymous," Mr. Brockington said.

The Corporation's position was that freedom of discussion by all sides was the best way to present controversial material and that was what the Board had tried to do.

For the Poorer Class.

"We would like specially to see a greater opportunity for self-expression given to those classes who can never get to be either owners or controllers of newspapers," Mr. Brockington said.

Surely, he declared, there should be no preference for wealth. Freedom of speech was not just the sale of space at $50 a minute.

"If that were so," said Mr. Brockington, "then free air would soon degenerate to just a sign outside a filling station."

If time on the air were placed under the domination of wealth, it would be possible for wealth to buy up all the available time. Didn't the committee think the country was getting too much propaganda on the air, too much speech and too many voices? In the last Ontario Provincial election the situation produced the most lamentable condition he had ever experienced on the air. For three weeks the "raucous voices" of politicians had drowned out all the cultural and entertainment features.

"It is the eye of the plain and common man which sees most clearly through the encircling gloom of these sophistries," Mr. Brockington said. "He knows when the essential freedoms are at stake, because he has had to struggle hard enough for what freedom he enjoys."

It had been said that "power is permanent, but liberty is transient," said Mr. Brockington. He asked the committee to present to themselves the question, in the light of possible future developments, where they would want that power to remain. Did they want it to be vested in private interests, to be placed "under the blatancy of advertising, or the cupidity of wealth?" he asked.

Did they they it to go to the government of the day or did they prefer that it should be left to the just administration of citizens who had been charged by parliament with that responsibility? There were three paths the corporation could pursue, and of these the one that had been chosen was the most difficult, but it was also the most courageous.

Too Many Rules.

Mr. Brockington read the regulations of the corporation. Were they too numerous, too complicated, impractical or onerous? he asked. The general policy relating to network broadcasting had been laid down by the parliamentary committee in May, 1936.

Vested with powers similar to those enjoyed by the British Broadcasting Corporation, the C.B.C. had been given, additionally, exclusive control over the character of all programs, political and otherwise, broadcast by private stations, and over all wire line networks used for carrying broadcast programs.

The legislation forbade private stations from forming part of a network, except with the corporation's permission; and regulations controlling networks were in the hands of the C.B.C. The corporation, it was clear, was established by parliament as the network authority, Mr. Brockington said.

"For some time past the board has been obliged to take cognizance of the increasing number of non-C.B.C. comemrcial hook-ups, especially in the Quebec and Ontario regions," said Mr. Brockington. Although permission for such hook-ups must be obtained from the C.B.C. commercial hook-ups, especi- Gladstone Murray), in the absence of a clearly defined policy, was not logically in a position to refuse permissions, which, however, were never granted for more than a period of 13 weeks.

The development was such, however, as to make possible the growth of a vested interest impairing the position of the corporation, contrary to the intention of parliament.

A National Authority

"As a result of full consideration and discussion by the board, the main lines of network policy have now been determined. The C.B.C. was established as the national network authority, and intends to maintain that position. It has been decided that, in order to ensure effective co-ordination of network broadcasting, to maintain program standards, and to provide the listener with contrasted alternative programs and improved listening facilities, all networks shall, in future, be arranged by and through the corporation. This control shall apply also to network programs originating in the United States.

"This policy will not involve any material increase of commercialism. Neither will it mean a restriction of the legitimate enterprise of private stations. It does mean the establishment and maintenance, in the listeners' interest, of uniformly high standards of network entertainment."

Mr. Brockington said he made no distinction between the trusteeship of the C.B.C. and that of the private stations. Both occupied the same domain. That common trusteeship vested them with the obligation not to surrender to riches, not to suppress the free expression of public opinion.

control currency and credit. "What of that promise," he asked.

"The present financial system is responsible for the poverty, want and suffering that abounds in this country. The richer we get in real wealth the poorer we get financially. Is it that prosperity cannot be obtained except by debt?

"We are no better than the slave traders of old. We have sold unborn generations into financial bondage."

Mr. Dunning said he had no reluctance to "meet head-on" the Social Credit party's proposal of inflation to the extent of about $600,000,000. John Blackmore, Social Credit leader, was at once on his feet denying his group had ever advocated inflation.

"We want to say to the people of Canada and the people of the world whether we want to embark on crude and uncontrolled inflation or whether we will maintain that measure of scientific control which has been made possible by creation of the Bank of Canada and by the various statutes of this country dealing with control of currency and credit," Mr. Dunning said.

All Nonsense.

The idea that money could be issued, then withdrawn and destroyed without hurting anyone was "all nonsense," the Minister said. "The last man who held that bill and paid it into the bank would be entitled to one dollar's worth of value for it. There is no escape from that."

"The social credit proposal has "uncontrolled inflation of the crudest possible variety," Mr. Dunning declared. "It would ruin the credit of this Dominion, would bring misery and suffering particularly to the poorest people, and would give opportunities for speculators to make and lose fortunes.

"It would bring about precisely what has happened all through history whenever this kind of thing has been tried, whether by kings of old or in more recent years in some of the countries of Europe."

Mr. Blackmore said there could be no inflation until there was more money on the marekt than sufficient to buy all the goods and services available without a rise in prices. It made no difference how the money was created.

It had been claimed that from 1930 to 1933 "the banking fraternity in Canada withdrew from circulation said. "But according to most honorable gentlemen, if the Government were to undertake to put $100,000,000 of that huge amount back into circulation it would be crude, uncontrolled inflation."

Disputes Figures.

"There never was $32,000,000 withdrawn from circulation," Mr. Dunning interrupted. "There never has been that much money in circulation." Mr. Blackmore agreed it was credit he was referring to, but it had the same effect as if it had been dollars. During private members' hour the bill sponsored by Charles Parent (Lib. Quebec West and South) was passed. It gives legislative authority to the Quebec Railway, Light and Power Company to operate motor buses in Quebec City and district.

Labor Minister Rogers gave the House information concerning the youth training appropriation, and said upwards of $150,000 of the fund allotted to Ontario for the fiscal year 1938-39 is unexpended.

Hon. Earl Lawson (Con. York South) charged that Ontario was "sabotaging" the youth training project.

Britain Shaping Trade Mission To Invade Spain

LONDON, March 4 — (AP). — Great Britain is expected to despatch a trade mission shortly to Nationalist Spain in an attempt to recapture commercial and political advantages now enjoyed by Italy and Germany.

Now that Britain and France have recognized the Nationalist regime as the legal government, both hope for an early end to the resistance offered by the Spanish Republicans under Premier Juan Negrin.

Nationalist General Franco needs reconstruction funds and Britain and France may supply it.

The principal problem for restoration of commercial relations is for British merchants to get their money out of Spain. It is estimated £5,000,000 (about $25,000,000) was owed to Britain at the outbreak of the war.

Britain expects the Nationalists to take over those obligations or arrange some sort of barter agreement to pay off in Spanish products.

Must Loosen Licenses.

If the Nationalists agree to relax their strict import licensing system and loosen foreign currencies, British industries could provide coal, iron, textiles, machinery, railway rolling stock, and other manufactured goods to the new Spain.

Prime Minister Chamberlain's appeasement program now has been swerved considerably to trade channels in an effort to attain the goal of general European settlement.

R. S. Hudson, secretary of the Overseas Trade Department, who is leaving soon for a series of trade talks in Berlin, Moscow and other Baltic capitals, declared last night:

"We are reverting to our old position of influence which we ought never to have abandoned."

The British hailed France's selection yesterday of 82-year-old Marshal Henri Philippe Petain as Ambassador to Nationalist Spain. The latest name mentioned in speculation over Britain's envoy to Burgos was that of Sir Maurice Peterson, Ambassador to Iran.

Canadian Deal Gives Welshmen Work

CARDIFF, Wales, March 4 (CP Cable)—A wave of optimism has seized the depression-wrecked areas of South Wales following the return from Canada and the United States of Sir William Firth, chairman and managing director of Richard Thomas and Company, with a £5,000,000 ($25,500,00) tinplate contract in his dispatch case.

Thousands of Welsh tinplate workers will benefit from the huge order, closed in Canada with the American Can Company in face of strong competition from United States interests. Coal, transportation and auxiliary industries in Wales will also benefit.

"This was plainly an empire market worthy of being tapped by the home country," Sir William said. "I have completed agreements providing for South Wales to supply 5,000,000 boxes, or 25,000 tons, of tinplate in the next five years."

Sir William said he had been able to satisfy the buyers as to the quality of the British product and he was particularly encouraged by the terms of the agreement, which provided for deliveries on a long-range basis. Spreading the orders over five years, he said, will enable the industry to gather momentum gradually instead of by a sudden spurt, which might result in an unwholesome reaction later.

Chess Master, 24, Retiring In Disgust Over Federation's Management

By H. M. Peters
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

NEW YORK, March 4. — (CP). — Reuben Fine, 24-year-old chess master, has decided to retire temporarily from international chess to devote himself to a teaching career, he said to-day.

Co-winner of the recent A.V.R.O. chess master's tournament in the Netherlands, Fine is working for his Master's degree in preparation for teaching his chosen subject, mathematics.

In an interview, the young New Yorker of Russian descent found much that was unsatisfactory with the game as at present conducted internationally.

He is among the group of chess experts that disagrees with the policies and practices of the International Chess Federation (F.I.D.E.). "The Tammany Hall of Chess" Fine called the Federation.

He said he agreed with the world champion, Dr. Alexander Alekhine of Paris, who does not acknowledge its authority although playing in its tournaments in which the titleholder naturally is the biggest gate attraction.

Fine, whose chess brought him world recognition, and also a wife—he met Mrs. Fine in the Netherlands while taking part in a tournament, and married her in 1937—intends to confine his serious playing to perhaps one or two tournaments a year in the United States.

In Chaotic State.

He said the Chess Federation is in a confused and chaotic state, and not sufficiently interested in the professional group which includes almost all the recognized masters.

Fine saw no prospect of a world title match in the near future. The logical challenger, young Pal Keres of Estonia, had told him he did not intend to challenge until late in 1940, as he is continuing his studies. Fine—who incidentally pronounces his name to rhyme with line, not with lean—has no intention of challenging for the present.

He believed the match the chess world has awaited since 1928, a return match between Dr. Alekhine and Jose Capablanca, the Cuban expert, will never take place.

Dr. Alekhine and Capablanca are so antagonistic they resent even being in the same room together; the titleholder flatly refuses to play in Cuba because of the climate. In 1937 when a match between them was almots agreed upon for South America, arrangements bogged down over the proportion of the gate money.

Nazi Press Quiet On Pope Selected

BERLIN, March 4—(AP). — The German press accepted mostly without comment the election of Eugenio Cardinal Pacelli as Pope and sources close to the German foreign office indicated today German policy for the present would be one of conciliation blended with a "wait-and-see" attitude.

While in days immediately following the death of Pope Pius XI some sections of the press spoke critically of the Cardinal as opposed to Nazism, today's morning papers confined themselves largely to details of the election.

COLLINGWOOD, Ont., March 6 (CP).—Widespread search was under way today for three men who escaped from a police trap amidst a fusillade of revolver shots after committing a series of burglaries in four Simcoe County towns. One of the men was thought to have been wounded.

The robbers' trail began at Thornton, 11 miles south of Barrie, early Sunday, where a service station was broken into and a quantity of gasoline stolen. A short time later another station was robbed of $2 and gasoline at Barrie. Four service stations were robbed in Elmvale.

Police in Collingwood, informed of the robbers' progress in a stolen automobile, lay in wait for the bandit car five miles east of here. A police car was placed across the road but the driver of the stolen car piled into the police vehicle. The impact threw the stolen machine off the road and its three occupants fled.

Nine shots were fired after the fleeing men and Constable Norman Sheehy said he believed one was hit. "One man dropped to the ground after the third shot but scrambled up again," he reported. "He might have been hit."

Another robbery was committed in Collingwood shortly before dawn and it was thought the men had managed to leave the district. Tracks indicated they had made their way through the bush to the main highway and then into Collingwood, where another automobile was stolen and a quantity of gasoline taken from a garage.

Aberhart Lauds Herridge's New Democracy

CALGARY, March 6—(CP)—Premier Aberhart of Alberta was on record today as endorsing Hon. W. D. Herridge's New Democracy movement but emphasizing Social Crediters have made no definite arrangements to join the young party.

Mr. Aberhart told the Calgary Prophetic Bible Institute yesterday that "Personally I wish him every success, and if he goes on as he has, I shall want to find myself under the banner of the greatest movement that has been started in Canada for a century."

Alberta's premier, who founded the Social Credit movement in Alberta in 1935 and saw it sweep the province that year, declared he was "more than delighted that this movement is starting in Ontario and Quebec."

Although Mr. Herridge "has not thus far advocated methods fully approved by Social Crediters, surely that will not prevent all progressive people of whatever stripe or color from getting together in this great movement, the new democracy," Mr. Aberhart said.

West Will Follow

"Western Canadians will follow with alacrity and enthusiasm an honest attempt to remedy the present unbearable situation," the premier said.

Regarding Social Credit support for the New Democracy movement, Mr. Aberhart said:

"I am told that it has been circulated in the east that we have made definite arrangements to join up with Mr. Herridge in his New Democracy program.

"May I repeat once again that no such arrangements had been made with Mr. Herridge nor with anyone connected with his movement. I hope I have sufficient intelligence to wait to hear his principles propounded before declaring myself in any way."

Blizzard Whips Over Dufferin

ORANGEVILLE, Ont., March 6—(CP).—Two motor accidents, result of a blizzard which swept over Dufferin county, occurred here today.

Cars and trucks were forced to travel slowly in the fact of one of the worst storms in this district this season. Traffic hazards were increased by the slippery highways, but all roads were open to traffic at noon today.

Hydro power communications were disrupted for a time here this morning by the storm.

O. N. Scott, Toronto, and Robert Noble, Durham, escaped injury when motor cars they were driving collided five miles west of here last night. Two trucks collided head on north of Orangeville today but neither driver was injured.

8 Belfast Lads Sent To Jail For Six Months

BELFAST, March 6.—(CP-Havas).—Four youths and four boys of from 13 to 15 years were convicted here to-day of possessing documents relating to two illegal organizations, the Irish Republican Army and Fianna Na Eireann.

The four older lads each was sentenced to six months in prison. They are John Kelly, Cornelius Fox, Francis Walsh and Edward Greenan. Three of the boys were ordered to serve one month in prison. The fourth was given benefit of the Probation Offenders' Act, without the conviction being recorded.

Police witnesses said they raided Kelly's home Feb. 8 and found the eight accused in a back room upstairs. On the floor of the room were a number of documents containing details of parades, drills and uniforms.

One of the documents, it was stated, contained the sentence: "Strength in our arms and in our hearts and truth on our lips. A police witness said this was the motto of the Irish Republican Army.

In passing sentence Magistrate W. F. Moody said: "The facts reveal there is an organizataion, thoroughly equipped, behind the boys, making use of four children, moulding characters and directing them into paths which lead them to the place where they are to-day. That organization is cowardly enough to let these children in for the punishment which the law prescribes."

Germany Short Of Labor Suddenly Decides Work Better For Jews Than Aryan Relief

Berlin, March 6. (A. P.)..

A SHORTAGE of Workers in Germany was brought about by an order which recommends the employment of Jews in public and private businesses and reverses a long line of earlier decrees curtailing the business, professional and public life of Jews.

Dr. Friedrich Syrup, president of the unemployed insurance board and member of the labor department, issued the order "with the special approval of Field Marshall Hermann Goering as chief executive of the four-year- (economic) plan."

"The state is not interested in letting the working capacity of able-bodied unemployed Jews lie idle and leave them to be supported by charity," the statement read. "It is therefore recommended to give such jews employment, thereby freeing German citizens ("Aryans") for undertaking urgent work for the state. Jews may be employed in public and private businesses, building construction, land improvement, etcetera."

Public Aroused As Never Before On Relief Issue, Governments Must Act, Says Trenton Mayor

TRENTON, Ont., March 6.—(C. P.). — Mayor H. R. Cory, president of the Ontario Mayors' Association, said in a statement today public opinion on the question of relief "is aroused as never before" and that the Provincial and Dominon Governments should realize the "seriousness of the plight of the municipalities."

The Association seeks to have the 40-40-20 per cent. division of relief costs as between the Dominion, the Provinces and the Municipalities made effective as from January 1, instead of on April 1 as scheduled under the Federal Government plan of relief assistance announced in the House of Commons this session.

Mayor Cory's statement:

In February the Ontario Mayors' Association through its president and secretary laid before the Minister of Labor at Ottawa (Hon. Norman Rogers) facts in connection with the large increase of relief recipients in the Province and the serious situation in which the Municipalities were placed on account of this increase.

In order that municipalities might be assisted to carry their percentage of costs without an increase in tax rates the request was made that the 40-40-20 rate which becomes effective April 1 for the fiscal year should be made effective as from January 1 for the calendar year.

Mr. Rogers Sympathizes.

In a letter dated March 3, Mr. Rogers, after setting forth the various ways in which the Federal Government have and are contributing to unemployment, states:

"While sympathizing with the views expressed on behalf of the Ontario Mayors, I regret to inform you that the Government cannot meet the wishes of the Mayors' Association in respect to making the dollar-for-dollar contribution retroactive in regard to the months of January, February and March of this year."

With all due respect to Mr. Rogers, the members of the Ontario Mayors' Association who are in direct contact with and represent the voting power of the Province are not asking for sympathy from the Government but instead are asking for action on behalf of the people whom they represent.

Public opinion is aroused as never before and it is time the elected representatives of the people awoke to the fact the electors are asking them to do something to impress on the Governments of the day the seriousness of the plight of the municipalities.

Tired Of Ottawa Delay Ontario Drafts Plan For Royal Tour

PROVINCIAL Secretary Harry Nixon said today the Ontario Committee arranging plans for the visit of the King and Queen to Toronto May 22 could wait no longer on approval of tentative plans by the Federal Government committee.

The Ontario committee, of which Mr. Nixon is chairman, will proceed to may the detailed schedule of the local visit "just as though Ottawa had approved," he said.

The Toronto procession route is likely to be changed to eliminate a stretch along Eastern Avenue, described as being among the city's unbeautiful areas.

Couple Arrested In Fight For Two Boys

MONTREAL, Mar. 6 — (CP). — John Drummond Code and his wife were remanded until to-morrow when they appeared in court to-day on a charge of abducting the woman's two sons by her first marriage to Dr. Henry Ward Williams of Rochester, N.Y., whose petition to gain custody of the boys is before the courts.

Code, an accountant of the neighboring town of Mount Royal, and his wife were remanded to the cells pending argument to-morrow over application for bail.

The couple were araigned shortly after the woman was returned with the two boys, Henry and James, reputed to be worth a fortune, from Windsor, Ont., where the mother was taken into custody yesterday on a warrant charging her with abduction.

The 35-year-old Mrs. Code was detained by police at Windsor while her husband, three years her senior, was arrested by police here. Mrs. Code and her two children, Henry and James, who were with her at the time, were due to arrive in Montreal to-day in custody of Quebec officers.

James Crankshaw, counsel with J Phillipe Brais for Mrs. Code's former husband, Dr. Henry Ward Williams of Rochester, N.Y., said last night the warrants for the arrest of the Codes were sworn out by the second Mrs. Williams. Mrs. Code at present is defendant in a suit before Mr. Justice Noel Decary, hearing an application by Dr. Williams for custody of the two boys. Mrs. Williams has been a witness for her husband in the suit here.

Feared Moving Boys.

The warrants were sworn out Saturday after Blais and Crankshaw expressed belief that Mrs. Code had tried to remove the children from jurisdiction of the Montreal court where Dr. Williams' application is pending.

Mrs. Code was divorced from Dr. Williams, a brain surgeon, in Florida in 1935 and the court awarded her custody of the two children. However, the next year Dr. Williams obtained a New York State divorce and the court there decreed he was to have the children.

He instituted suit here a month ago, claiming the children were being held illegally in Canada. The Codes lived in the suburban town of Mount Royal. Claude J. Prevost, counsel for Code, denied last night any attempt was made to withdraw the children from jurisdiction of Montreal courts.

Prevost said last night some settlement might be reached in the custody fight to-day, but would not say anything as to conditions.

(The United States December 15 made a credit of $25,000,000 available to China.)

French Officer Shot At Dawn For Spy's Role

TOULON, France, March 6.—(AP).—For having sold naval secrets to a foreign power, a 25-year-old French naval officer died at dawn to-day before a firing squad composed of volunteers from the fleet.

Ensign Marc Aubert, who had confessed his treason, died with his head high. His last words were: "I know how to die like a sailor."

The death volley crashed out before the redoubts of Fort Malbosquet. As Aubert's body sagged against the cords binding him to the execution post, the master at arms, also a volunteer, stepped up and administered the coup de grace.

Aubert confessed he sold information about French fleetmovements and naval construction data to a foreign power, which was not

German-Jew Miller Writes Hamilton Mayor For Assistance

Hamilton, Ont., March 6 (C.P.)

ASSISTANCE of the Mayor of Hamilton in the establishment of himself and wife in Hamilton is requested in a letter received today by the Mayor's secretary from a German-Jew residing in Germany.

The writer, Adolf Plessner, a miller and dealer in corn and feedings, said: "Pardon a desperate German-Jew and his wife for addressing themselves to you as a benefactor to them." The writer explains that under present conditions in Germany, his means of a livelihood has been taken from him, and as a result, he and his wife hope to seek admittance to some other country to live.

Plan To Restore Caliphate Arouses East

JERUSALEM, March 6.—(AP).—British officials to-day see new cause for concern in a drive through the restless Near East to restore in favor of Egypt's young King Farouk the Moslem Caliphate for centuries held by the Ottoman Sultans.

In Egypt, Syria, Palestine, Arabia, and Iraq, Pan-Arabists and Pan-Islamists again are agitating for a commander of the Faithful.

The Caliph, title to the civil and religious head of a Moslem state, is supposed to be the direct lineal descendant of Mahomet, the Prophet.

Mahomet, born A.D. 570, created Islam as a great fighting religion. The entire Arabian Peninsula came under Moslem control, ad the Caliphs replaced the ancient rulers. For nearly 1,000 years they controlled Islam, but their power waned. The title was an appendage of the tOtoman reigning house from 1517 until 1924, then the late President Ataturk abolished the Turkish Caliphate.

To-day the Caliphate has been placed in the forefront of Moslem agitation. There is again a Moslem call for a "Sheikh of Islam, Defender of the Sword of Islam," a title which Premier Mussolini claimed for himself when he last visited Libya.

King Farouk is backed for the title by Sheikh El Mughrabi, powerful rector of Cairo's famous Al Azhar Univeristy. But more orthodox Moslems consider Farouk sacrificed the glories of Islam to encroaching European cutlure and would refuse him for that reason alone.

Several others could claim the crown, and all have many adherents.

Chief among them is Abdul Aziz Ibn Saud, master of unmandated Saudi-Arabia, including the holy cities of Mecca and Medina, and leader of the Wahabis. A Puritan king, Ibn Saud insists on literal acceptance of the Koran.

Emir Abdullah, ruler of Trans-Jordon, and member of the once powerful Hussein family which ruled Meca, is another possible claimant. Another is King Ghazi of Iraq, son of Abdullah's brother Feisal.

But the Hussein family's chances were reduced when Ibn Saud overthrew the dynasty.

As Caliph of Islam, the chosen leader would become "Pope" of the world's reputed 220,000,000 Moslems, his word absolute law. Th Caliph has power to call a "Jehad," or Holy War, against the infidel nations of the world.

Many Moslems consider they hold the key to power in the Mediterranean and the East.

LONDON, March 6.—(CP Cable)—The admiralty is watching the development of the Alberta oil fields, Lieut.-Colonel J. J. Llewellin, first civil lord of the admiralty, told the house of commons today.

Reply to a question by Sir Percy Hurd, Conservative, Colonel Llewellin said: "The admiralty naturally is very interested in the development of these empire oil fields and should oil fuel to the admiralty's specifications be produced and made accessible to tanker transport, they would certainly be willing to enter into negotiations with a view to purchasing supplies."

Answering another question by Sir Percy, Colonel Llewellin said the specifications at present "do not comply with our requirements."

Sir Henry Page-Croft, Conservative, asked the minister if the oil proved to be of the right standard and quality to "make urgent inquiries before this oilfield should fall into the hands of anyone connected with a country which may be a potential enemy."

Development of the Canadian oilfield is "primarily a matter for the Canadian government," Col. Llewellin responded. "We certainly are anxious for strategic reasons that it should be developed if it can produce such oil as we can burn but if it does not produce such oil, I am afraid it is no use."

The Postie Knew

KANSAS CITY, March 6—(AP).—That tradition "the mail must go through" has been preserved, but the task of delivering a letter to "the most beautiful girl in Kansas City, 4736 Summit street" gave one postman some mighty bad moments. The address is that of an apartment house. The postman did some tactful investigating, and asked to see Virginia Lee Barker. Perusal of the letter disclosed it had been delivered to the right party.

Madrid Military Governor Ousts Negrin Group In Quick, Bloodless Coup

PARIS, March 6 (AP).—Diplomatic reports from Madrid said today General Segismundo Casado, head of a new defence council in Republican Spain, had offered to sue for peace with the Spanish Nationalists provided Republican leaders were guaranteed safe conduct out of Spain and no Italian troops were permitted to enter Madrid.

These reports said 500 Republicans who feared reprisals by General Franco already had fled the Republican-held area by sea and air.

Diego Martinez Barrio, President of the Spanish Parliament, earlier had declared the seizure of power in Republican Spain "must lead to peace."

A Bloodless Coup.

MADRID, March 6.—(AP). — 'A defence council dedicated to an "honorable peace or a fight to the death," to-day replaced after a bloodless coup the regime of Premier Juan Negrin, who had held out for "resistance to the end" in the Spanish civil war.

(A dispatch from Hendaye, on the French-Spanish border, said the probable effect of the new administration on continuation of the conflict was not apparent immediately, but that frontier observers believed the new council favored surrender to the nationalists despite a proclamataion of further resistance).

General Segismundo Casado, the military governor of Madrid, seized power in a swift move. He broadcast that: "The die is cast. We shall all save ourselves or sink together. Our struggle will not end until independence is assured.'

Madrid was calm but somewhat bewildered by the rapidity of developments. A manifesto indicated Negrin had been prevented from leaving Spain. It was not known where he and his Ministers were.

General Casado early today telephoned General Jose Miaja, Republican commander of air, land and sea forces in Central Spain—the one fourth of continental Spain not yet conquered by Nationalist General Franco.

Miaja Backs Move

Afterwards Casado said: "We shall receive Miaja with embracing arms" and added that Miaja had told him he was joining the national defence movement and was starting immediately for Madrid, for some place in the central zone.

The revolt against Negrin began Saturday at Cartagena, the Republican naval base, when a group of officers and soldiers attempted to capture the city. The uprising, an announcement by the Negrin government said, was "promptly and completed quelled," with the fleet remaining loyal.

(Advices from Burgos, nationalist capital, said, however, that nationalist sympathizers gradually were taking over Cartagena.)

(Five plane loads of officers fleeing Cartagena landed in French Alberal, where French authorities arrested and disarmed them. The Spanish officers said only that revolt had broken out against Republican authorities and that the fleet had put out to sea for an unknown destination.)

General Casado told The Associated Press that the Cartagena revolt was not a Fascist one, but directly mainly against Negrin.

"Of course there were a few Fascist elements who took advantage of the situation," he said, "but it was exclusively against the Negrin government and a protest against certain dismissals and replacements ordered by Negrin. The revolt was quelled."

Confidence Gone.

A manifesto after the defence council took control scathingly referred to the Negrin cabinet as a 'handful of men in whom no one had confidence any longer,'" and declared Negrin had proved his inability to rule. It indicated that members of the government had

Viceroy Likely To Halt Gandhi's Fast

RAJKOT, India, March 6—(AP).—Possibility of intervention by the Viceroy in Mohandas K. Gandhi's dispute with the native ruler of Rajkot was strenthened today as Gandhi grew weaker on the fourth day of his "fast unto death."

The Viceroy, the Marquess of Linlithgow, broke a tour of the Rajputana states and hurried back to New Delhi after appeals from Gandhi's nationalist followers and nationalist-controlled provincial governments for pressure on behalf of administrative reforms in Rajkot.

Scores of protests against the adamant attitude of Thakore Saheb Shri Dharmendrasinhji, the native ruler, were telegraphed to Lord Linlithgow while a thousand peasants prayed outside the quarters where Gandhi was fasting.

It was Gandhi's sixth hunger strike and his physicians said "this time the fast will not last many days."

Gandhi, 69, and frail, lay on a cot on the veranda of a native dwelling, screened from the broiling sun and the eyes of those who gathered nearby to pray. He wore only a loin cloth.

Already he had lost two pounds, his legs were swollen, his pulse had quickened and his blood pressure had risen from 166 to 180—but still he joked with his intimates.

The 29-year-old Thakore Saheb, whom Gandhi calls "my son," showed no signs of giving in to the nationalist leader's demands that the people of Rajkot be given a greater voice in the government.

Gandhi's wife, Kasturibhai, was once again in Rajkot's jail with others arrested for participation in a civil disobedience campaign after Gandhi rejected the Thakore Saheb's offer of her freedom.

South Africa Piles Up 530

DURBAN, South Africa, March 6.—(CP Cable)—Replying to South Africa's mammoth total of 530 runs, England had obtained 35 for the loss of one wicket when rain brought an end to the third day's play of the final cricket test match between the two countries shortly before five o'clock today.

The Springbok's total was their highest in Anglo-South African tests, beating the 513 for eight wickets, declared, obtained at Cape Town in 1931.

Dudley Nourse and R. E. Grievson proved the South African stars of the morning play. The former made 103 runs and Grievson, in his first test innings hit up 75. Nourse took no chances and in six hours at the wickets hit only six fours.

In their efforts to tie up the series in the play-to-a-finish tussle, the South Africans, by stubborn defensive play, took exactly 13 hours to compile their record score.

Victory in the third test gave England a one-game lead as the teams started the fifth encounter last Friday. The other three contests ended in stalemates.

Michigan Friendly To Gamblers Says Pastor, Governor Sends State Police For Him

LANSING, Mich., Mar. 6 — (A. P.). — Governor Frank Fitzgerald despatched State Police to Battle Creek to-day to offer Rev. Amos Bogart "free transportation" to Lansing to appear before the Governor to explain an open letter charging the present state administration has been friendly with gamblers.

The Governor said he wanted Mr. Bogart brought before him "within two hours." At Battle Creek, Mr. Bogart, pastor of Upton Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, said he had no intention of going to Lansing until after he had seen his lawyer.

He said he would not ride to Lansing "with any State Policeman."

In a letter to the Governor on Friday, Mr. Bogart said a committee of other clergymen and business men had employed investigators who reported they found evidence to substantiate charges contained in his letter.

"I don't want to fight with a minister," the Governor said; "I merely want to find out what is behind this." He said he was sending State Police to "offer free transportation" and "take as little of Mr. Bogart's time as possible.

Young U.S. Flier Lost In Fog Hits Barn, Dies

PARKHILL, Ont., March 6—(CP)—Coroner Dr. A. R. Routledge of London awaited word from United States Army Air Corps officials today on whether they want an inquest into the death of Second Lieutenant N. A. Cowles.

A 23-year-old member of the Air Corps Reserve, stationed at Selfridge Field, Detroit, Cowles hurtled to his death Saturday night in a $40,000 Severesky plane that had wandered from its course in fog and darkness. The machine, bound from Boston to Selfridge, crashed into a stable on the farm of Jock Young near this village 30 miles north of London.

Apparently the pilot made no attempt to light flares or jump. His parachute apparatus was found strapped to his broken body, hurled 40 feet from the plane.

Two horses and a cow were killed when the stable was demolished. Baker said he had left the building to go to his house only five minutes before the crash.

The coroner empanelled an inquest jury and released the body to officers from Selfridge Field. Dr. Routledge said the decision regarding whether an inquest will be held will depend on the desires of the Air Corps.

Born in Canada.

Cowles' wife and child live at Mount Clements, Mich., and his parents in Tacoma, Wash. From a card listing Cowles' birthplace as "Canada," it was believed he might have come from the Canadian West.

District residents said they heard a plane flying low before the crash and one farmer said he heard the engine sputter, as if the machine were running out of gasoline. It was thought likely the pilot tried to pick up his course in the fog and darkness and, failing that, had tried to land blind when his gas supply started to run low.

Valuable instruments were scattered over field adjoining the stable by the impact. One gun-sight, plans for which are closely guarded, was picked up by a member of a detachment from the Royal Canadian Regiment, sent to stand guard over the wreckage.

Broken Ranger Reaches Port

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., March 6.—(CP Cable).—The Newfoundland sealing vessel Ranger, battered about by storm and ice floes during her 67-year life in the industry, rolled with the swell in St. John's harbor today, rescued from the stormy Atlantic after her SOS call flashed out across the air last Thursday morning.

The old, 354-ton Ranger, her canvas tattered and torn from battling the storm and her bowsprit smashed off where she collided with the British steamship Newfoundland, was towed into the bottle-necked haven of this port by the sealer Imogene. The Newfoundland changed her course to go the Ranger's rescue, and the two vessels collided.

The two sealers crept into St. John's yesterday from Trepassey Harbor, where they had sought haven first.

Captain John Badcock sent out a plea for immediate assistance last Thursday, declaring his Ranger was leaking badly and it was "impossible to keep afloat." The Newfoundland arrived alongside and was able to take 18 members of the Ranger's crew of 150 off the stricken vessel.

The Imogene put out from St. John's and arrived alongside the next day. After several unsuccessful attempts, a line was placed aboard the Ranger and she was towed to Trepassey Bay.

'Peg Group Wins In Manitoba Drama Finals

WINNIPEG, March 6.—(CP)—Thirteen was not unlucky for the Winnipeg New Theatre group directed by Mercer McLeod in the Manitoba regional final of the Dominion Drama Festival.

Headed by the brilliant young Frances Goffman and Gordon Burwash, the cast of 13 placed first in the awards of George Skillan, adjudicator from London, England, here Saturday night.

The New Theatre group, representing a workers' drama association of North Winnipeg, played Albert Maltz's "Rehearsal," a labor propaganda play, a striking drama-tragedy of the class movement.

Miss Goffman and Mr. Burwash also won the individual honors of the festival, taking the awards for best actress and actor.

Miss Goffman, said Mr. Skillan, had been "very, very good, indeed," and Mr. Burwash "admirable."

"Without a doubt, Rehearsal is the best play," he said. "I am not concerned with its politics or religion, simply with its staging and acting."

The group will represent Manitoba at the Dominion finals in London, Ont., next month.

The St. Augustine players of Brandon, directed by Rev. Bernard Davis, and the Young Men's Hebrew Association of Winnipeg, also directed by Mercer McLeod, tied for second place. $668 Surplus Reported In Hastings

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HASTINGS, March 6 — The auditors report on the town books for the year 1938 showed a surplus of $668.77 over the above current expenses for the year. it was revealed at the monthly meeting of town council here Friday night. Edward Humpage, chartered accountant of Peterborough, was auditor. On a motion of I. Bonds and W. McEachnie, the report was received and the clerk was instructed to have three dozen reports printed.

A communication from the Department of Highways notified the council that the by-law recently passed, regarding streets in the municipality becoming connecting links on the new provincial highway, could not be approved owing to the fact that the streets were not named. The letter suggested that a new by-law be drawn up and forwarded to the Department for approval.

Renew Liability Policy

J. L. Doherty interviewed the council regarding renewal of public liability and property damage insurance, on Hastings streets. Reeve Lewis Kelley indicated he did not favor renewal with the same company owing to the fact they had not satisfactorily adjusted a claim here last year. The case in question was where a resident had fallen on slippery streets and injured her wrist. The reeve alleged that an adjustor came to her home and told her that he thought she had a legitimate claim and later denied he had made any statement.

Mr. Doherty said he was sure the adjustor was at fault and not the company but since he represented more than one company it would be an easy matter to make a change. He assured the council as long as they took the necessary precautions, such as sanding the streets when they were icy, there would be little chance of any claims. Insurance was taken out with the Anglo-Scottish Insurance Company of Scotland at $100 premium and the clerk was instructed to write the other company explaining they had lost the premium through faulty adjustment.

Reeve Kelley took exception to an account placed before the council by the fire chief, Fred Dodd. The bill called for wages for two men who had attended a fire last month, but there was no mention a third party assisting. Mr. Dodd admitted there were three men present, but said he did not see the third man make any attempts to assist in extinguishing the fire. Reeve Kelley said, that as long as there was a third man present, he should at least have been asked if he expected pay. The account was shelved uftil proper settlement between all three men is arranged.

The matter of keeping the roadway, leading from the fire hall to the main road, clear of snow during the winter was discussed and the caretaker was instructed to shovel snow from immediately in front of the doors and the fire chief will be instructed to attend to the rest of the distance to the road.

Taxpayer Complains

An irate taxpayer interviewed the council and charged that the reeve had sent him a notice of arrears of taxes and that the auditor had been appointed to tend the town books by underhand methods. He alleged that the letter he received was in the reeves handwriting and added that the auditor had been appointed without knowledge of any of the taxpayers and that it had never been printed in minutes of the council. The taxpayer waved his fists until the reeve said, if he did not cool off, the police might have to be called to deal with him. Then the question arose, Did the auditor's appointment go through the books?—None of the council were sure. Mr. Baker, town clerk, said he thought the appointment was made by by-law in with several other local officers for the year. The council was adjourned for recess while the clerk donned his hat and coat and went down town to his office to find the by-law. He returned and assured the council that Mr. Humpage was included in with several local officers and had been appointed by by-law. In the meantime, the taxpayer had vacated the chambers, giving the door a hefty slam as he departed.

Reduce Poll Tax

On a motion of S. Stevenson and I. Bonds, a by-law was passed changing the amount of poll tax from $5 per head to $3 and cancelling all previous by-laws dealing with this matter.

On motion of S. Stevenson and W. McEachnie, the tax collector's time was extended to the next regular meeting, on the first Friday of each month, may be changed for the next meeting as it falls on Good Friday. Monday following this was set as a possible date but was left open for further discussion.

A second appeal from the Ontario Good Roads Association for membership was refused. Insurance on the town scales was renewed with Gerald Marryatt, local representative. On motion of C. Lynch and I. Bonds, the pay sheet was passed. Contract printing, at $135, for the year with the local printer, was approved by the council.

J. M. Baker revealed that a taxpayer had refused to pay a $5 balance on his taxes, claiming he was assessed too high. He had interviewed the council at court of revision last spring in an effort to have his assessment lowered but his appeal was refused. S. Stevenson suggested the balance could be collected by issuing an order on rent the taxpayer is collecting from his dwelling. The tax collector will ibe instructed to collect in this manner if the balance can not be collected through ordinary methods.

USE EMPIRE WOOD

Many kinds of wood from various parts of the British Empire were used for the interior decoration of a new airline headquarters in London.

Crows Took Wood To Make Nest Councillor Told

Hastings, March 6.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

WILLIAM McEACHNIE, chairman of the property committee on the council here, may have been the target for some unsophisticated remarks concerning the quality of wood the council have sold from their wood lot this winter, but he admits he was almost humiliated here Saturday when a seven-year-old boy reproached him with a witty remark. The seven-year-old's father had purchased some wood from the council, but it seems the fuel has been graded into two classes—body wood and limbs.

Mr. McEachnie met the little fellow on the street and was immediately struck by the sincerity with which he spoke.

"Yes, we have," replied his senior, "but it's out in the country. Your dad purchased some of our wood, didn't' he. Is there much left?"

"Well—," replied the boy, "we have a little left but the crows took most of it away to make nests for themselves. We bought limb wood."

Fire Destroys Madoc House

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MADOC, Mar. 6. — Damage amounting to $5.000 was done by a fire which destroyed a double brick house here earl ythis morning starting from a coal heated.

The house was occupied by William Roberts and by a family named Turner, the latter recently arriving from Stirling. Mr. Roberts lost all his property and most of Turner's furniture and possessions were destroyed.

William Roberts, Jr., was alone in his side of the house when the fire broke out, and he made his escape through a back window and over a roof. The Turners got out without difficulty.

The fire was noticed at 12.15 o'clock by John Bristol, who turned in the alarm. There was delay for some time in getting water to fight the fire.

Roosevelt Tiff With Court Seen Near End

WASHINGTON, March 6.—(AP).—A formal end to the conflict between President Roosevelt and the United States' Supreme Court was envisioned by political observers in the ceremonies with which Congress observed its 150th anniversary.

Chief Justice Hughes and then President Roosevelt, each explained to the House of Representatives Saturday his own conception of the ideas which lie at the base of democracy. When they had finished, many of those in the audience gained the impression that their viewpoints on that subject were much the same.

It was the first time the two men had spoken to the same audience since the memorable fight two years ago over the Supreme Court remodelling plan that shattered Democratic plans in Congress. It was one of the first speeches in which the Chief Justice has dealt with that subject since the President's bill was beaten and a virtual reorganization of the court attained through retirements and death.

Both men agreed that the ultimate in authority was the voice of the electorate.

The Chief Justice emphasized that that all three branches of the government were not masters, but servants, exercising their brief authority in the name of the people. He said the clutch of tradition was gone, that those things which in the past were looked upon as self evident truths now had to be proved, that they could not command respect simply because they were old.

In a similar vein, Mr. Roosevelt the present modes of communication and transportation left no citizen an excuse for sectionalism, for delay in the execution of the public business, or for failure to maintain a full understanding of the acceleration of the processes of civilization.

Rotarians Taken On World Tour

Members of the Peterborough Rotary Club travelled the seven seas and saw some of the most wonderful parts of the globe at their weekly luncheon at the Empress Hotel today when, through the magic instrumentality of a moving picture projector and the eloquent travelogue delivered by Eric F. Thompson, general agent of the Canadian Pacific Steamship services, they were carried on a world cruise on the palatial Empress of Britain.

Mr. Thompson, who was introduced by Rotarian T. G. M. Jamieson, began by stating that the Empress, flagship of the C.P.R. steamships, was the largest ship to traverse the globe. Through the medium of strikingly beautiful colored pictures Rotarians saw fascinating glimpses of Madeira, Gibraltar, Algiers, Naples, Cairo, Athens and other Mediterranean cities; then visited Bombay, Agra and other Indian centres; dropped in at Siam, paused at Singapore, Kong Kong, Manilla, the Dutch East Indies, Australia, New Zealand, the Fiji Islands, Honolulu, San Francisco, with its new bridge, the Panama canal and back to New York.

The projector was in charge of S. R. Baker and he was included in the vote of thanks which Rotarian Fred L. Roy moved to the speaker for his most enjoyable travelogue.

Receipts reported by Dominion Livestock Branch were: Cattle, 3,420; calves, 780; hogs, 1,680; sheep and lambs 1,530.

Butcher cows and bulls were steady but sales on steers and heifers were too few to establish the market trend. Butcher cows sold at $3.50 to $5.50, with canners and cutters selling at $2.50 to $3.25. Good butcher bulls brought $5 to $5.50. Small lots of butcher steers and heifers traded at $6 to $6.75, and a few fed calves sold at $7 to $8.60.

WINNIPEG GRAIN

WINNIPEG, Mar. 6 — (C.P.). — Weakness at Liverpool and lack of aggressive support brought small losses to Winnipeg wheat futures prices to-day. Final quotations were ⅜ to ½ cent lower, May at 62; July 62⅝ and October 63⅜.

Although overseas houses were credited with minor purchases, export sales of Canadian wheat were confined to a few loads worked from Vancouver.

Cash wheat trade brought out some support for the lower grades and a little domestic demand for durums. Pit-trade in the coarse grain centered in flax, which registered small gains.

We Noticed

If you like flower hats, you'll revel in the variety of be-flowered models already arriving in the shops Tiny hats buried in violets or carnations or primroses or cornflowers, are atop some of the smartest.

A hat with pink and wine colored carnations and flesh colored veiling, shown in a shop on lower George street, is a honey. Popular this spring, also, is the felt or straw-braid hat done on flowerpot lines, it stop filled with a mass of blossoms.

Enquiry Column

Conducted by Mrs. MARY MOORE

Question:—Taking advantage of your enquiry service I would like to ask the following:

1. My husband has often asked me to cook him a dish of noodles and I have not a recipe for noodles in any of the cook books I possess. So would you please let me have a recipe for preparing noodles.

2. In the new cook book I have lately purchased they often mention the use of "castor" sugar, —a new kind of sugar to me. Could you enlighten me on this term, and also what kind of sugar can be purchased locally to take its place. Thanking you, Mrs. W. A. S.

Answer: Thank you for your letter.

Noodles.

One egg, ½ teaspoon salt, flour. Beat egg slightly add salt, and enough flour to make a very stiff dough. Knead for at least five minutes. Then roll out on floured board as thinly as paper. Cover with towel and let stand 20 minutes. Then roll up like jelly roll and cut into strips not more then ¼-inch wide. Unroll these strips, hang them over a bar to dry. When dry enough (but not so brittle they break) drop into boiling salted water and boil 20 minutes. Drain and serve with butter or in soup or fry them (see below).

Fried Noodles.

Drain hot boiled noodles well. Heat ⅓ cup butter and 2 tablespoons lard together (or use half and half butter and lard), then add the needles and let fry slowly without stirring until golden crust forms on the bottom, then carefully turn over and let other side fry golden. Serve in hot vegetable dish (at which meal there would be no potatoes) —then are often garnished with fried bread crumbs and finely chopped parsley.

Castor sugar is the English cooks' name for fruit sugar—which is actually very finely sifted cane sugar. If you asked for berry sugar at your grocer's he would be giving you what your recipe requires.

Question: I usually have a riot on my hands about the second week in Lent because my family decides to rebel in toto against fried fish. Now I have to admit that that is the way I always serve it—and am appealing to you now to tell me other ways that are nice and tasty, but not very expensive. I always read the cookery page and have done so for a great many years without writing before. Thanking you for the help I know you will give me, Bridget.

Answer: Do not be too hard on yourself—there are many fish cooks in the same rut.

Last week we printed an article on fish that I hope you saw.

Trusting that you have I am giving you methods that were not touched on in it.

Baken Stuffed Whitefish.

Clean, stuff (see below) and tie fish. Rub with butter, dust with flour, salt and pepper. Lay on strips of bacon in pan (this is to flavor and to facilitate taking up when fish is done). Bake at 450 deg. fahr. for about 35 minutes—having upper oven turned on low—lower oven turned on "high." When ready to put on platter slip lifter under bacon which keeps the fish from breaking and carefully lift to hot platter. Garnish with wedges of lemon dipped in fine parsley.

Stuffing for Baked Fish: Fry a small onion chopped finely in two tablespoons butter. Add ¼ teaspoon salt, 1 cup dry crumbs, 1 tablespoon parsley, ¼ teaspoon celery and 1 finely chopped sweet pickle. Stuff loosely into fish or it will be heavy.

Spanish Codfish.

Pick over salt codfish and separate flakes; there should be 2-3 or 1 cup. Cover with lukewarm water, soak until soft and drain. Cut 4 medium sized potatoes which have been boiled into slices. Arrange alternate layers of potatoes and fish in buttered baking dish, sprinkle with salt and pepper and cover with one and one-half canned pimientoes cut in strips; repeat. Pour over 1 cup tomato juice and cover with buttered cracker crumbs and bake until crumbs are brown.

Shrimp Wiggle.

Remove the veins from canned or fresh shrimps. Melt 4 tablespoon butter, add 3 tablespoons flour and stir until blended, then add 1½ cups milk, and stir and until thick and the drained shrimps (about 1 cup and 1 cup drained canned peas. Heat through and serve on toast on in patty shells.

Fillets of Sale, Flounder or Bass.

Six small fillets (for 6 people), 2 onions or 6 mushrooms chopped finely, parsley, butter, 2 egg yolks, salt, pepper. Lay the fillets in a well buttered pan, and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Sprinkle the onions or mushrooms and the parsley over the fish, and dot the fish generously with butter. Bake at 425 deg. Fahr. about 15 minutes. When done place on hot platter. To pan add ½ cup hot water, juice of a whole lemon and the beaten yolks, stir until thick—if necessary strain. Serve over the fish.

Watch the cookery page during Lent for other substitutes for meat —see Cheese Custards elsewhere on page.

IF YOU FEEL SUNK
Read this and cheer up

Are you so blue that life is no longer worth living? Do you cry easily? Do you feel low, mean, depressed—just absolutely SUNK?

Then here's good news for you in case you need a good general system tonic—Just take famous Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Let its wholesome herbs and roots help Nature build up more physical resistance and tone up your system, so that it can more easily throw off the "blues" and give more energy to enjoy life.

MILLIONS of women have depended upon this Compound and have passed the word along to friends and neighbors, and to their children.

Why not take Pinkham's Compound and go "smiling thru"?

DOROTHY DIX

A POOR, harassed husband says: "I am in the worst jam of my life and am turning to you in the desperate hope that you may be able to help me solve my problem. My trouble is this:

"My wife has recently discovered that she is a genius and that heaven intended her to be a great writer. Even though she has never had a single story accepted by any editor, she spends all of her time at the typewriter pounding out another opus. Her household duties are neglected. I could stand that, but the trouble is she has invented a faultless hero who figures in all of her stories and she is trying to make me over to understudying him. She is always comparing me with this romantic being—to my disadvantage—and I simply can't stand it any longer.

"We have had a lot of happy years together and I would like, more than anything, for us to go on as before if only she would give up writing and expecting me to live up to her Dream Man. I make plenty of money, so there is no reason for her to slave at authorship when evidently she has no talent, or else she would get something in print. Is there anything I can do about it?"

Evidently your wife has fallen in love with the ideal she has created, the like of which never was on land or sea. But it is certainly tough on you to be expected to pinch-hit for this non-existent he-creature who possesses every charm and virtue.

A lot of women live in their imaginations. Because their husbands are not the tall, slim, dark, passionate-eyed, romantic Fairy Princes that they have conjured up, they fail to appreciate the good, honest, practical men to whom they are married and who work their fingers to the bones to give them ease and luxury in which to day dream. Generally these neurotic women take out their disappointment in not having got some one who was a combination of Clark Gable and Robert Taylor by sighing and complaining that they missed their affinities. That while they are ALL SOUL they are married to groveling earthlings who are ALL BUSINESS.

And they let it go at that. They don't try to make over their husbands to fit their fancies, but your wife is trying to make you realize her ideal, and I don't blame you for balking. Not many sensible business men would want to be transformed into a storybook hero—who are mainly asses, if you ask me.

The man who has a wife who thinks that she is a genius has a tough nut to crack. It has always seemed to me that there was only one way to do it. And that was to let her go and try it out. If she is a Katherine Cornell, or a Greta Garbo, or a Margaret Mitchel, grand. Few husbands would be willing to put out the divine fire with dishwater, or to stop a star in its flight. If she makes a great success and proves that her hunch about acting or painting or writing or singing was a real one, let her husband rejoice with her and be glad that she is doing the thing she was born to do.

But if, on the other hand, a wife's belief in her talents and that she has it in her to write a sixth best seller, or bring the Metropolitan Opera House to its feet with her voice, is a false alarm, then give her a chance also to try what she can do. And when she has tasted the bitterness of defeat and taken the measure of her ability, she will settle down to domesticity and be happy instead of going through life believing herself a suppressed genius.

So if I were a man who had a wife who believed herself a genius, I would give her a couple of hundred dollars and a ticket to New York and I'd say: "Go to it and try yourself out, but no more money from home. You have got to buck the game on your own. I am tired of hearing you mooning about blighted ambitions. You must put up or shut up. The talent scouts are always around looking for people who can deliver the goods. If you are such a wow as you think you are, you can sell what you write or get a job. So go to it."

And, believe me, such a remedy would cure all of the near-geniuses, and when they got good and hungry and lonesome they would come back home and resume being amateurs instead of trying to be professionals.

DEAR DOROTHY DIX—I am a young woman of 24 who is very unpopular with men, although I am good-looking, dress well and am fairly intelligent. But I suspect that my trouble is that I have a dull personality. I am by no means man-crazy, but I do hate to look forward to a life of loneliness and spinsterhood. Is there anything I can do about it?

WET BLANKET.

ANSWER:

If you are young and good-looking and dress well and are intelligent, why don't you use a few lobes of your brain in pepping yourself up so you won't have a dull personality? Why don't you learn some of the arts and wiles by which girls make themselves attractive to men? You see plenty of examples of how it is done all about you.

You are right in thinking that a dull personality is a terrible handicap to a woman. Men, and especially American men, expect women to amuse and entertain them. They expect women to be gay and bubbling over with laughter. They expect women to be excited and thrilled over everything that happens. They expect women to make the conversation, or to listen in an absorbed way when they care to talk. When they take a girl out they expect her to pay for the good times they give her by showing appreciation and acting as if the movie or the dance or whatever it was, was the treat of their lives.

That is the outline of the technique the popular girls use. Copycat them. When you go to a party, don't take a back seat among the wallflowers. Get into the midst of the liveliest group you see. Wear the smile that won't come off. Look as if you are enjoying yourself whether you are or not. Wear a dress that is so striking it will hit every boy in the eyes.

Give parties yourself and make the food a specialty. Men will always go where there are good things to eat. Don't wait to talk until you have a profound thought. Jabber. Men don't take girls out in order to improve their minds. Never criticize your host's taste when he takes you out.

DOROTHY DIX.

Chocolate is wasted by so much of it sticking to the bottom and sides of the container in which it is made? This can be prevented if the contained is thoroughly greased before the chocolate is put into it.

To avoid the necessity of washing the food grinder whenever a few broken nuts are required, they may be very satisfactorily broken by rolling firmly with the rolling pin?

Flavored Lipstick New Cosmetic Fad

In the cosmetic world more strides have been made, and now we have perfume with aromas that range from all the spices to the most exotic of floral scents. Powders fall right into line. Mascara smells sweetly or not at all. Lotions, bath salts, soap comes in all shades and perfumes imaginable. We wonder what more could there possibly be, and suddenly discover—flavored lipstick.

And now girls, what will your boy friend order of a summer evening when you drop in some place for a cooler—soda to you. Raspberry? Aha, there's your clue—indulge in lipstick flavored with raspberry. Simple, isn't it, and almost certain to make him forget the soda and concentrate on you.

The idea has possibilities. You can have your lipstick in season with different kinds of fruit. And all you have to do is find out what kind of fruits he likes and specialize! Of course there's one drawback, you may not like a kind that he does, but you'll just have to bear up if you're not going to be left on the shelf with the jarred fruit.

If he's taking you out to dinner, you'll have to find out ahead of time what's on the menu, because you couldnt have your lipstick flavor conflicting with the dessert. Then again you could have lemon flavored lip-rouge and enjoy your fish immensely.

This idea of flavorsome lipstick must be thoroughly thought out, however. One must not use it without having definitely looked into all the sides of the question and decided on a certain course of flavors. You might have a motto "a flavor for every occasion." If you're going to wear spicy flavored lipstick its best to wear spicy smelling flowers. Orange-flavor lipstick and orange blossoms — sounds like an idea, doesn't it?

We Had Many Profiteers

Every contract for munitions which is submitted for consideration of members of parliament is certain to cause several more addresses to be made on the general subject of war profiteering. Many times there has been reference to what took place during the last war, and profiteering seems to be the general theme. In the larger plants of the war shops a bullet costs less than a cent to manufacture and sells for three cents and apparently it is in the public mind that such business should cease.

Those who lived through the days of the last war and have occasion to remember what was taking place must be aware that money was plentiful. There were some great contracts going at that time and United States was keeping a number of factories busy here as well as our own orders.

How many people were making more money then than they did before or since we do not know but the number was great. There were hundreds of people who went to work in munition factories who had never before had mechanical experience, and after they became familiar with a few operations they began to make such money as they had not previously thought possible. Those were the days when the stores sold shirts of silk to the young men and $7 was a common enough price. There were times when there were no native potatoes in the land and the price was away up; in many communities it was necessary to wait until a shipment arrived from the Maritimes. In those days people stood in line and waited for an order which would permit them to purchase a quarter of a ton of coal, and they paid a stiff price for the fuel. For several years wheat was over the $2 mark and butter was at a price never since equalled.

There were merchants heavily stocked with lines the further manufacture of which was shut off by the war and they made money due to the rapidly advancing value of their holdings.

So if one wants a fair picture of the situation we believe it correct to say that the industrialists were not the only people who were making money. The thing ran through a very great section of the community, and we had many money-makers during the war years.

Snubbing a Great Singer

Marian Anderson, Negro contralto, is to be allowed to sing in the Central High School auditorium in Washington on Easter Sunday. The Board of Education has made that decision and it is a complete reversal of its former decision by which the Negro singer was barred. The Daughters of the American Revolution had denied Miss Anderson the right to use Constitution Hall, which is their property. Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt made it known about that time she had resigned from a nation-wide organization in a disagreement over policy, and although no organization was named it was generally believed it had been in connection with the Daughters of the American Revolution and their refusal to allow Marian Anderson to sing in their hall.

Perhaps these patriotic Daughters do not fully realize it, but they have not in their entire nation-wide organization a member possessed of a voice which can compare with Marion Anderson's. We would hesitate to suggest how the people of United States should regulate their color line because it is pretty much their own business and a problem with which they have to live, particularly in the South. But when they refuse to recognize such a gift as the voice of Marion Anderson then they are allowing regulations and prejudice to run riot with common sense.

He Ought To Succeed

A report from Chatham tells about Pat Taylor getting a snowplow off the C.P.R. tracks a split second before a westbound flyer raced over the spot. Those words about the westbound flyer racing over the spot are exactly as they appeared in the story. They seem to indicate a considerable amount of commotion and anxiety and that's the way such a story should run.

Along with a number of others we admit to having long entertained the hope of saving a train from being wrecked. There used to be a story in the school books of other days about a young chap who did that very thing, after which he got on well indeed. The boy in the story found a loose rail and flagged the oncoming train, and it pulled up just a few feet from the lad. When the passengers found what they had escaped they started taking a collection. There were more people riding on trains then than now and they probably had more money than the people of today, because the collection was a good one. A regular thumper. The conductor took the lad's name and address and not long after he went to work for the railroad and finally became the president. So that seemed to be the right way to step along after leaving school—go and find a loose rail and flag a train. But it has been as hard to find a loose rail as to state definitely the cause of a depression.

So we are interested in the case of Pat Taylor who got a big snow plow off the track before the C.P.R. flyer raced by. It does seem that a trick like that is almost as good as flagging a train on account of a loose rail; in fact it is slightly better because it did not seriously delay the service or alarm the passengers. So for a few days we will watch the Chatham news to see what progress Pat Taylor makes in the railroad business. If the story in the school books had any merit in it whatever Pat ought to start in the service soon and promotion should be rapid.

Wheat And a Binder

When Robert Fair, M.P. from Battle River riding in Alberta, spoke in the House of Commons recently he was not for the moment expounding the particular theories of the Social Credit party with which he is allied. He is a farmer and was speaking as one when he again tackled that old question of the relationship of prices of farm machinery to farm products. There have been a good many speeches delivered on the same text, nor only at Ottawa but in all parts of the country, and probably there will be many more.

We consider it is quite natural that a farmer should consider the price he has to pay for a binder in connection with the price he receives for his wheat or oats or any other crop he may cut with his binder. The binder and wheat seem to go together the same as bread and butter or ham and eggs. Mr. Fair had been collecting statistics for a long time because he showed that in 1919-20 there were 9.475 farmers who paid 3.77 of the total income tax of the country, while in 1936-37 there were but 921 contributing farmers and they paid but .21 per cent. of the total. In 1926 the average income of the western farmer was $2,143. Since the turning-point year of 1929 it had decreased; in 1937 it was $901, and in 1931 it had been as low as $571.

Whether Mr. Fair considered that the prices of farm machinery should rise and fall in step with the prices of wheat he did not say, nor have we seen that contention advanced. But Mr. Fair did claim there was entirely too much difference from year to year and it was always to the disadvantage of the farmer. Producing his figures showing the cost of an 8-foot binder in various years and the price of wheat, he has shown how many bushels of wheat would have to be handed over to secure a binder with which to cut the wheat. His table as taken from the pages of Official Parliamentary Debates—

1916	177	1.86	95
1917	204	2.02	101
1918	260	2.05	127
1919	270	1.98	136
1920	296	1.80	166
1921	339	1.10	308
1922	287	.91	315
1923	298	.88	339
1924	323	1.50	215
1925	298	1.32	226
1926	298	1.27	235
1927	298	1.27	235
1928	298	1.05	284
1929	298	1.05	284
1930	293	.45	651
1931	293	.41	715
1932	288	.35	823
1933	274	.49	560
1934	274	.62	442
1935	272	.65	418
1936	290	.75	386
1937	314	.81	388
1938	332	.40	830

If one desires something which shows wide variety then it is to be found in that table. In 1916 the farmer could have his new binder by delivering 95 bushels of wheat, while in 1938 it would have required delivery of 830 bushels. How Mr. Fair selected 40 cents as the price of 1938 wheat we do not know as the price was fixed at 80 cents delivered at Fort William and the year before the fixed price was higher than that.

If the farmer was receiving a good price for his wheat we do not suppose there would be so much said about the cost of implements. The wages of men making such machinery are greater than they were years ago; the price of steel is higher, and these things have been passed on to the farmer. He does not complain about other people making a better living, but he does complain because the price of what he has for sale has fallen so far behind that he cannot keep up with the race.

As It Was On The Tenth

Hon. P. M. Dewan drew attention to the need of more beauty out in the country, and already there has been a fair amount of stirring about. Something will be done. Mr. Dewan must be aware that there were such efforts made in other days, and in particular we think of the grounds around the school house on the Tenth Concession.

There was a natural beauty of location there. The ground sloped off on the east side until it ran down toward the creek about 100 yards off and the creek made its way under the road through a culvert. Our own belief now is that a country school should never be erected too close to a creek where suckers run in spring and where there's the kind of willow that can be used for making whistles. Swimming was fairly good there from the 24th of May on until the end of June, by which time the creek began its usual process of drying up for the summer.

Arbor Day was the time when rural beauty received its great push. They'd been planting trees around there for quite a number of years and each year saw three more added. Sometimes there'd be a teacher who was patriotic and she'd want maple trees, and then again there would be a teacher who believed in the stately elm and then elm trees would get the preference.

As we recall it those trees nearly all grew. It must have been the manner in which the planting was done. The trustees always came on Arbor Day, and they'd have a few remarks to make indoors in advance. There was one trustee who always had the teacher for a boarder because he lived near the school and as a rule he'd incorporate some kind remarks about her in his address.

But the real business of the day took place outside. The holes for the trees would be dug in advance, and then the actual planting would take place and the filling in of the earth and stomping it in place. When that had been done the scholars stood in a ring and sang songs, The Maple Leaf, The National Anthem and such. It was vigorous singing, musical beef cut in thick slices; it was devotion and animation in the raw and in good measure. Possibly after that was over it could be taken for granted that the new trees had been properly initiated into scholastic circles and could stand anything. We don't know from any scientific reasoning whether that is the right way to start off a tree or not, but do know that on the Tenth the trees which were greeted with lusty music always seemed to do remarkably well. Mr. Dewan ought to be told about that.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Gandhi has gone on another hunger strike. The world has had its full share of jokes about the man, but no person has yet doubted his utter sincerity.

Seventy-five prisoners in the Ontario Reformatory at Guelph have the flu, and we suppose they will be told to stay in until they are better.

Nelson Eddy is appearing in Toronto, and the Globe and Mail refers to him as "the most popular of all North American concertizers." One would have to be careful in using that word for fear of making it read concertinas.

Fire in a Brantford house is reported to have forced four persons to flee. After looking in our book on "What To Do In An Emergency" we have concluded the people in Brantford did exactly the right thing.

The Arabs claim a letter written by the British 24 years ago promised them the independence which they now claim. And that is not the first case coming to court where some of those old letters have been hard to explain.

Caledonia reports a groundhog digging through a four-foot snowbank to come out and see what was going on in the world. The groundhog may have more sense than is generally attributed to him, for this fellow went back again.

London, Ont., now has two ways of finding if people have been drinking. Officers can smell the breath and one unusually smart fellow gave evidence the other day that he could hear them drinking.

Germany registers all young German nationals of age in Canada, but has not sent any of them home for military service. But we cannot grow enthusiastic over the idea of having in our midst a number of people whose allegiance is centred elsewhere.

A hockey team from a place called Kingston came to Peterborough the other evening, and in official language that Kingston team was defeated 12-1. But when a team is defeated to that extent we believe it proper enough to say the visitors were walloped or licked or some such thing.

CHANGED

¶ When I was running short of kale, I feared they'd sink me in the jail, in there I'd take on chills; for things came tough for quite a spell, and I was faring none too well, and could not pay my bills.

¶ When I went to the grocer's store, it seemed quite different than before, the atmosphere was cold; the grocer mentioned like he should, that my account was none too good, a black sheep in his fold.

¶ The man who sells me tons of coal, said I was sinking in the hole, he had to pay his staff; he looked me firmly in the eye, and asked me if I couldn't try, and cut the bill in half.

¶ And when I walked upon the street, I grew great blisters on my feet, as creditors drew near; I'd walk around three blocks or more, by lanes and alleys reach my door, I must have acted queer.

¶ Then when I started out to work, I hopped along with nervous jerk, my gait was like a toad; I'd see some man two blocks ahead, and I'd begin to shake for dread, 'twas some one that I owed.

¶ But now that all my bills are paid, I walk forth bold and unafraid, and saunter forth at ease; I do not shiver when I see, a man who's coming straight for me—nor tremble at the knees.

Our Statesmen At Their Labor

(From Parliamentary Debates)

Mr. J. S. WOODSWORTH (Winnipeg North Centre): Mr. Speaker, I want to say just a few words. The Prime Minister (Mr. Mackenzie King) suggested I was about to rise in my place to accuse him of shutting off the debate. I want to suggest to the Prime Minister that he and the Liberals are just as responsible as anyone else for the prolongation of debate, even this one.

Mr. MANION: More.

Mr. WOODSWORTH: A few minutes before the Prime Minister spoke, one hon. member, a supporter of the government, in a cynical defence of patronage, said it was quite right that the government should favour their friends they were sure of having their friends. That gets us nowhere. I urge that while the government has its responsibility — and it is a heavy responsibility—under our system of responsible government every member of the house also has his own responsibility.

An hon. MEMBER: But some do not take it verly seriously.

Mr. WOODSWORTH: Maybe, but some of us our trying to take it seriously, and we do not propose to be laughed off simply because we are taking advantage of the opportunities provided by the house.

My colleague the hon. member for Vancouver North (Mr. MacNeil) was quite within his rights in bringing forward his motion today. The Prime Minister rather suggested that it was sprung without notice, but his motion was regularly placed, as it had to be, on the order paper on the 23rd of last month, and I have no doubt the Prime Minister has facilities for knowing what the business of the house will be, just as every member has. So I submit that the hon. member for Vancouver North is quite within his rights. Further, he was not sure what the attitude of the government would be until the government announced it.

Mr. DUNNING: He was told in the previous debate, and the minister stated repeatedly that he would table and refer every contract.

Mr. WOODSWORTH: It has been said generally that the contracts could be seen; but the fact is that we have not had the public accounts committee meeting in past years, and it was only because of the most vigorous expose we had of the Bren gun affair that we got action from the government.

Mr. DUNNING: No, no, it was volunteered.

Mr. WOODSWORTH: I am sincere.

Mr. VIEN: It is not a correct statement of fact.

Mr. WOODSWORTH: I am sorry if I am not correct.

Mr. VIEN: From the very beginning—

Mr. SPEAKER: Order. The hon. member for Winnipeg North Centre (Mr. Woodsworth) has the floor and cannot be interrupted except with his consent.

Mr. WOODSWORTH: My judgment is that had we not had the very serious challenge of the policy of the government by my colleague who introduced this motion today, I doubt very much whether this matter would have been referred to the public accounts committee.

Some hon. MEMBERS: Oh.

Mr. WOODSWORTH: That is my opinion.

Mr. VIEN: And that is a fact that we challenge.

Mr. WOODSWORTH: That is my opinion, and I am sincere in giving it.

Mr. DUNNING: You just don't believe what we said with respect to it.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: With regard to the hon. member's observation, the Minister of National Defence (Mr. Mackenzie) replied to the member who made the motion, and said at once that this contract and every contract could go to the committee.

Mr. WOODSWORTH: When?

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: To-day, in the debate.

Mr. WOODSWORTH: Yes, after the speech of my colleague.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: You say you got the committee only after long debate. The hon. member knew beforehand he could have his committee.

Mr. WOODSWORTH: I went back to the Bren gun just as an illustration.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: I say in regard to the Bren gun, that if my hon. friend looks at Hansard he will see that I stated, before there was any debate at all, that that motion would be accepted by the government.

Mr. REID: And that if the member would not proceed with it the government would.

Mr. WOODSWORTH: If we are going to go into the history of the matter, it will be recalled that my colleague spoke on the Bren gun in the debate on the address, and it was, I think, necessary that his indictment should have been made then or the subsequent developments might not have taken place.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: I think my hon. friend will find on the votes and proceedings of this house a motion by the Minister of National Defence himself to refer the Bren gun contract to the public accounts committee before the motion was even put and before any debate.

Mr. WOODSWORTH: After the hon. member for Vancouver North had made his statement.

Mr. MACKENZIE KING: No, no, before any statement.

Mr. WOODSWORTH: That is my position. As I understand the matter, it has taken all the force which we had to secure the action that the government has now taken.

Mr. DUNNING: Absurd.

Letters To The Editor

Correspondents Discuss Various Topics

IS CHAMBERLAIN A FLOP?

Editor Examiner:

Sir,— What's happening in the world these days? Many things no doubt. We read various articles and too often they pass from our minds when they should receive some thought and pondering. When we speak of nations with Christian leadership we usually refer to such as Great Britain, France, U.S. A. etc. Those of the anti-Christian set we call Germany, Italy and Japan in particular, and yet how far is the former removed from the latter?

When war broke out in Spain it was called a civil war and the same name has been applied ever since which is absolutely absurd. It was an invasion by Germany and Italy with Britain and her allies aiding the same side by preventing the Loyalist government purchasing arms and supplies abroad to defend themselves and their country, through the non-intervention agreement.

Now we all know that agreement has utterly failed and yet Mr. Chamberlain still holds to it. We can all see the danger to the life-line of the British Empire by letting the Fascist nations take hold of the Siberian Peninsula, yet he is quite willing to let it be. Does it not appear that capitalism takes first place, for in the course he adopted he lets democracy perish in another state and is risking the freedom of entering the Mediterranean Sea. I'm not an advocate of war, far from it, but those Spaniards were willing to fight our enemies if only given equipment. I have a true faith in democracy and want to see it survive but a much different type of legislators are necessary to save democracy. They must be persons serving the God of Creation and not the god of money. I would like to add this clipping from the Chicago Daily News:

"Meanwhile how has the neutrality Act worked? When Italy invaded Ethiopia, we put an arms embargo on both, though Ethiopia needed arms, and Italy did not. At the same time, we continued to sell to Italy the oil essential to its ships, tanks and war planes!

"When Franco rose against the Spanish republic, we again put on an embargo, though the republic desperately needed arms, and Franco got all he wanted from Germany and Italy. Indeed, at the same time, we continued to sell scrap iron to Germany and Italy, with which to replace the arms they gave Franco!

"We enforced these two embargoes, but when Japan invaded China we said it wasn't war and so put on no embargo, thinking thus to help China. Last summer, finding we were helping Japan instead, we ordered the sale of planes to Japan to stop, and we arranged to finance arms purchases by China. But at the same time we continued to sell to Japan the scrap iron, oil and automotive transport essential to its campaign in China!

"That is the record, and if any crazier system of neutrality could be devised, we are unable to think of it.

"Neutrality under freedom of the seas did tend to favor the belligerents with big navies. But neutrality under the Neutrality Act favors them even more. Indeed, it would be hard to invent a scheme which would put the weak more completely at the mercy of the strong.

DURHAM

RE: PETERBOROUGH CITY TRUST

Editor Examiner:—

Sir,—Mr. R. M. Glover's letter of the 1st. instant in the Examiner regarding the City Trust voices the opinion of the majority of the members of the Council as far as it goes, in saying that the ratepayers should not be called upon to pay to the City Trust its full demand yearly, when it has nearly $350,000.00 reserve in its hands. Mr. Glover does not put it exactly that way but it is quite apparent from the expressions made by the Alderman at a recent meeting of the Legal Committee, that it is their feeling.

The City Trust has received from the ratepayers of the City of Peterborough over $4,000,000 during the years 1928 to 1937 inclusive, and no credit has been given for the amount of monies in the hands of the City Trust not required for retirement of debentures and for interest and sinking funds.

New issues of Dominion and Provincial bonds may be purchased directly from the source of issue, but only brokers who apparently buy from the City Trust or sell to it are Dominion Securities, Wood, Gundy and Company and A. E. Ames and Company, and why other large brokerage houses are not allowed to compete has never been explained and none of these three companies will inform me as to what commissions have been paid upon the sales by the City Trust or purchases by the City Trust. I have written to each of these companies and they have refused to give me the information.

During the years 1932 to 1937 inclusive, the City Trust borrowed $418,000 from a Peterborough bank, and as trustees under the provisions of the Act creating the City Trust, it has no borrowing powers such as a municipality has under the Municipal Act.

The City Trust has made its demand again this year for $334,701.00 under the following provisions: The said Commissioners shall on or before the first day of February in each year, and oftener if necessary, submit to the council of the said city, a statement in writing showing the amount specially required (AFTER GIVING CREDIT FOR THE AMOUNTS AVAILABLE FOR THAT PURPOSE AS HEREIN PROVIDED) for payment of the interest and for the sinking funds or for the annual payments on all debentures of the said City Corporation then outstanding.

The City Trust in its bookkeeping set-up should show these particular debentures issued and the amount required for interest and sinking funds, and also be able to show upon each debenture issue, how much there was to be allocated to retire the debentures and pay the interest and sinking funds thereon. This proper system of bookkeeping would then show that certain debentures issued by the City Trust had been fully paid, and that there is a surplus of monies which were levied to retire these particular debentures in the hands of the City Trust and the whole amount of which is approximately $350,000.00, which is the money of the ratepayers. Without that set-up in bookkeeping it is impossible to ascertain what particular debentures have credits against their issue and retirement.

Under the act incorporating the City Trust, the Port Hope, Lindsay and Beaverton Railway mortgage is vested in the City Trust and the City Trust is directed by statute to collect the principal and interest of that mortgage and use it towards the payment of interest and sinking funds of general City debentures, other than local improvement debentures, waterworks debentures and public or separate school debentures. That amount has been paid into the City Trust and I have not yet been able to ascertain where that has been used in paying off general debentures of the City of Peterborough to lower the tax rate of the ratepayers of this City, and that is something which the City Trust should explain to the ratepayers of this City.

Alderman Glover's suggestion of a reduction of one mill on the dollar each year is not possible in that particular form as the law now stands, but the unscrambling of the surplus, allocating to each particular debenture account the proper proportions levied, would show exactly how much money remains in the surplus where debentures have been entirely paid off, and it would also show how much monies were standing in the City Trust's surplus for debentures yet unpaid.

It would appear to be a matter of bookkeeping to a very large extent.

WEIGHT OF HORSES.

—According to the Ontario Horse Breeder's Association, the ideal farm horse weighs 1,650 pounds, stands 16 1-2 hands, has a heart girth of 85 inches, with 32-inch front legs.

No doubt such an animal is a fine one, but to say that this is the ideal farm horse is something quite different. If all that farmers had to think of was the raising of prize horses, then such a steed would be acceptable. Unfortunately, or fortunately, farmers have to be practical.

There are some farmers, and good ones at that, who wouldn't have a horse weighing 1,650 pounds around the place. Others like to have one big team, for use at the heaviest work, but with smaller, handier animals for general purposes. There are many jobs around the average farm where lighter horses are preferable. The value of an equine is not necessarily in proportion to his size.—Windsor Star.

HOW WARS BEGIN.

It has not yet been decided by those in charge of details whether the special train carrying Their Majesties King George and Queen Elizabeth on their trip to Calgary May 26 next shall be routed via Carseland or Strathmore from Medicine Hat. We can see no reason for delay in decision. Strathmore by reason of its name will have in the heart of the Queen a lively and sympathetic interest and curiosity to know this little town in the Canadian West bearing the name of her illustrious father, the Earl of Strathmore. Why should this detail not be arranged for her? We have no quarrel with the towns along the other route, but assuredly they can offer no such inducement.—(Strathmore, Alta., Standard)

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

Now when Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judaea in the days of Herod the king, behold, there came wise men from the east to Jerusalem, saying, Where is he that is born King of the Jews? for we have seen his star in the east, and are come to worship him.

When Herod the king had heard these things, he was troubled, and all Jerusalem with him. . . Then Herod, when he had privily called the wise men, enquired of them diligently what time the star appeared. And he sent them to Bethlehem, and said, Go and search diligently for the young child; and when ye have found him, bring me word again, that I may come and worship him also. When they had heard the king, they departed; and, lo, the star, which they saw in the east, went before them, till it came and stood over where the young child was. (Matthew ii, 1-3, 7-9).

WOODSWORTH AND WAR.

Mr. Woodsworth is against war. Many persons have heard him say so. In fact he has been called a pacifist. For many years he was opposed to armaments in Canada. He condemned Great Britain for not disarming fast enough. But it now looks as if Mr. Woodsworth and his party would not mind fighting the dictator states. Presumably they would want guns and bombs to fight with.

Mr. Woodsworth wants to know where one church stands on war? That's fair enough. And where does Mr. Woodsworth stand on war? That's also a fair question.

The fact is that human beings are seldom, if ever, completely logical. Nearly all of us must have had experiences with peace-time pacifists who were ready to lick their weight in wild cats when the trouble started or once some particular spot had been touched by the enemy. The reason is that we are built that way.

IN RURAL ONTARIO.

The heart of rural Ontario beats warm. When the hour of trouble comes, kind neighbors are ready to help. When death visits the home, the neighbors still come flocking, as they did in pioneer days, to pay their last respects. The other day a large company of neighbors called at a home near St. Marys to welcome a family from the West who had located here. They had farmed very successfully in Saskatchewan, but a series of dry seasons necessitated their making a fresh start elsewhere. A district reporter tells how the people of the community flocked in during the evening to welcome the newcomers and to extend best wishes for the future. Earlier in the day a shower of fruit, vegetables and other good things had been delivered to make tangible the good wishes. We believe the newcomers will be right in thinking that it isn't a bad spot they have come to.—(St. Marys Journal-Argus)

A FOOLISH PRANK!

A defence counsel in a St. Catharines criminal case this week termed an $80,000 bond theft as a "foolish prank." Such mildness! If the culprit, who had admitted his guilt, had perpetrated a murder during the crime, the lawyer wou' probably have termed the incident "an unfortunate mishap," or indulgently closed his eyes with a soothing "tut-tut."

It is a shock to hear of a man, learned in the demands of justice, attempting to evade a severe penalty for his client, by scoffing at theft as a serious crime. We would almost guarantee that if the lawyer were the victim in the $80,000 theft, he would whistle a different tune than this "boys will be boys" number.

The degree of seriousness with which the magistrate viewed the "foolish prank" can be judged by the sentence of eight years imprisonment.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

Lakefield W.I. Has Treat On 'Birds' In Talk By Miss Florence Atwood

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, March 6.—"Birds show individuality. Every bird has its own peculiarities and its individual tastes," stated Miss Florence Atwood of Lakefield, member of the Federation of Ontario Naturalists, when she addressed the members of the Lakefield Branch of the Women's Institute, in the Council Chamber of the Memorial Hall here Wednesday afternoon. "Although birds of a kind have a certain number of characteristics the same, yet when you come to watch them closely you will find that all birds have their own peculiarities and individual tastes," she stated. "To show what I mean," she said, "A few years ago a robin built its nest on a beam in one of our sheds and it soon became so tame it would eat from my hand. When the young were hatched, they showed not the slightest fear. Next year, in the same shed, another robin built her nest, but tame her I could not, though I took far more trouble trying to do so. In fact before I could get near her she would fly off her nest uttering a distress call. The young showed the same fear.

Miss Atwood gave the following amazing illustration of a difference in taste among birds. "One summer two pair of barn swallows built their nests abainst a joist in our stable, only a few feet apart," she said. Both nests were lined with feathers in the usual manner, but one pair chose all yellow feathers, from the flock of Orpingtons in our own yard, and the others lined theirs with all grey feathers, from the Barred Rocks belonging to our neighbours.

Miss Atwood's subject was "Birds" and the interesting information she disclosed on the subject was gleaned from many years of observing birds in their natural haunts, Miss Atwood is a granddaughter of Mrs. Catherine Parr Traill, whose writings on nature study were possibly the inspiration for Miss Atwood's early interest in bird life.

"What I have learned is mostly from my own observation. I love to watch the birds and study their ways, and I get so much enjoyment from doing so that I feel I should like others to do the same.

"Anyone who really loves nature could never find living in the country dull. There is always so much to interest them," Miss Atwood stated.

"Birds may be studied from three points of view — the scientific, the economic and the sentimental. It is mostly from this last angle that I have been interested in them," Miss Atwood continued, "though to-day I would like to consider them briefly from the economic point of view also.

"The scientific study of bird-life includes their origin, structure and development, and their relation to other forms of life, past and present. This side I will not touch on at all.

"The economic value of birds lies principally in the number of insects, injurious to crops and fruit trees, which the birds destroy. They also are valuable for devouring weed seeds and as scavengers."

"No reliable estimate has ever been made (unless very recently) of the annual loss to the farmers of Ontario by the depredation of insects. In 1912, a report states, the loss to the agricultural interests of the United States from injurious insects, was upwards of $700,000,000. Our loss would be as large proportionately. Experience proves that birds are more efficient in keeping down insect pests than are all other agencies, both natural and artifical. Then many birds act as scavengers and keep down mice and other vermin, who do much damage. The birds, on account of their power of flight act as a more efficient check on an abnormal increase of any sort of vermin than any other force in nature.

Good Outweighs evil

Some birds do considerable harm to grain crops but the good they do outweighs the evil. The good that even the poor abused crow (whom I love) does, in killing immense quantities of cut-worms and wire-worms, overbalances the harm done to newly planted corn. All birds, even birds of prey, are friends of the farmer," Miss Atwood said. But the cow-bird is condemned because she lays her eggs in the nests of smaller birds like sparrows and warbles, and when the eggs are hatched, being so much larger than the sparrows, the cow-birds crowd the smaller fledglings out of the nest or cause them to starve. Then the cow-bird requires to be fed longer than other birds after leaving the nest. It follows its foster parents around demanding to be fed, and so prevents the foster parents from raising a second brood.

"Every class of bird has its particular work to do. The wood-pecker are specialized to enable them to feed on the borers that live in tree-trunks. (They have the longest tongues of all the birds. It is very pointed at the tip with little barbs on the tip. They can extend it four or five times its length. It is exactly like a spear. Incidentally, nighthawks and swallows have the smallest tongues.) Thrushes, meadow larks and blackbirds feed principally on insects that hide just beneath the surface of the ground. Warblers, orioles, cuckoos and many others gather their food from among the branches, their prey consisting chiefly of leaf-eating caterpillars and beetles. The flycatchers, from some point of observation, dart out and capture every winged insect that passes within their range, whilst swallows, nighthawks etc. are engaged clearing the air of the myraids of flies and midges which if not kept in check, would render life almost unendurable."

Try Some Observation

"Now for the third point of view," Miss Atwood continued. "As a matter of sentiment all lovers of nature are interested in birds. Their beauty of form and color, intelligence, sociablity, and musical powers arouse both our wonder and admiration."

"If you want to get to know birds, don't be content to just get the facts from books. Observe their habits, study their characters, try to understand them. Notice the individuality there is among them. There is as much individuality among birds as in human beings, though till we watch them we hardly realize the fact."

"I would like to suggest a few points that might help you when wishing to identify birds. First, notice the size as carefully as possible by comparing them in your mind with some familiar bird like the English sparrow or the robin. Then note how the birds are marked. Always take notice of the tail —whether round, straight or forked. Swallows, for example are much alike in colouring, shape and flight so that it is difficult to distinguish the varities. But you will notice that the barn swallow has a long forked tail, the eave swallow a short straight tail. Most swallows have a slightly forked tail. Also notice length of tail in comparison with the size of the bird. Notice whether the markings on wings are spots or bars, and note the length of the wings. Swallows are among those with the longest wings. Note the difference between the male and female, and the young. When the young leave the nests they are often quite different from the parents. For instance the robin, which belongs to the thrush family, looks exactly like a thrush when it first leaves the nest."

"With some species of birds it is difficult to tell the male and female apart. Swallows, chickadees and nuthatches, look very much alike whereas the male and female bobolink, red winged black bird and black throated warbler are very different in appearance. In some cases, the males shed their bright plumage after the young are fledged and become the same color as the female and the young birds."

"Notice also the time of arrival and of leaving: what kind of nest they build and where they build it: whether they use the same nest more than one season: how many eggs they lay and the color: and how they fly. I often tell a bird, when I am unable to get a good look at it, by its flight. Some have an undulating flight, like woodpeckers and flinches. Others give two or three flops and then sail. The bobolink, canary, swallow, killdeer, bluebird and many others sing on the wing. Among the birds that walk—and with what dignity!—are thrushes, cow-birds and oven-birds. The robin both hops and walks."

Cats, Squirrels Enemies

"I think that those who wish to encourage birds about, should not keep cats. They are the worst enemies of birds that nest near dwellings. The red squirrel ranks second.

"I remember, years ago, a robin had its nest in a tree outside my sister's window. One morning she was awakened by the robins making a terrific noise. She jumped out of bed and there was a red squirrel making his way along the limb to the nest. She tried to frighten it away by throwing her hair-brush, one slipper after another, her toothbrush, a cake of soap, pumice-stone —anything that was throwable. But all to no use. The squirrel hadn't any faith in her ability to aim straight and in spite of her efforts and those of the parent birds the squirrel got to the nests and ate the little robins before her eyes. Blackbirds and bluejays are bad too.—Bluejays because they are so beautiful and interesting in many ways, that people are apt to encourage them. In summer, bluejays rob other birds' nests, eat the eggs, kill the young birds and tear the nests to pieces—the last just from pure meanness. He is the only bird who provides for the future—he stores up nuts.

"If you wish to encourage birds, never take down old nests. Although few birds will use the same nests for more than one season, seeing a number of old ones about is a great attraction to them. They often pull old nests apart and use the material to build with.

Nature's Flying Jewel

"The humming-bird is among the most interesting, and as you al lhave flower gardens, you will all have visits from him. His food is partly nector from flowers but chiefly small insects like the tiny spider that does much harm to spinning webs over the pollen of flowers. Humming birds are of great use in the fertilization of flowers. When gathering the nectar, their heads and feathers get covered with pollen, which is carried from flower to flower. These birds are absolutely fearless and will attack a bird of any size if it comes to close to the nest.

"Humming-birds are quite curious and are attracted by bright colors. One will often come to flowers inside the window, especially if they are bright (such as geraniums) and will usually hover motionless for a moment, seeming to take a good look about the room. Many times as my sister or myself lay in the hammock with a red cushion as a pillow, they would come and hover about six inches above our faces. The humming-bird is the only bird that can fly backwards. He will dart forward then back so quickly that the eye can hardly follow him.

"It is pretty to see the young humming-birds learning to fly. They are very timid at first, and will just fly a short distance from one bough to another. Humming-birds only live three years, and they usually come back for three years to the same tree or to one quite close. About the end of September they leave for Central and South America. The humming-bird is the only bird known to be a hitch-hiker. It hides in the feathers of large birds—a favorite being the Canada Goose. Sometimes when migrating, a goose has been shot down, and as many as five or six humming birds would fly out. Sometimes, of course, they too are shot.

"To my mind, one of the most marvellous things in nature is the way birds return each spring to the same location.

Pet Chickadees

"I wonder if there is anyone here," Miss Atwood continued, "who wouldn't feel a thrill of pleasure if some cold morning, on going outside their their door, a flock of chickadees—say 8 or 9—were to come flutterring around them, some alighting on their hands and shoulders, perhaps one clinging to the underside of your hat, where you can feel their soft feathers brushing against your face, and still another clinging to your sweater pocket, trying to peck inside, hoping to find something good to eat. With a little patience you could have just this happen to you.

"Years ago I commenced feeding them on my bedroom window-sill which was high above the ground. I nailed a box about five inches by seven inches to the sill. In this I put suet. It wasn't long before I had several chickadees and a nuthatch. Before the end of the winter I had quite a flock—two kinds of woodpeckers, two nuthatches and many chickadees. The latter got so that they would tap on the window when there was no food out. They always came when they heard me open the window, and got so that they would play about my room and among the flowers on a stand. They would even fly through the house to get the suet from the box on my sister's window-sill. Always one or two pair stay all year, and they will hunt me up around the lawn if I am not in the garden when they come. This fall, about the hammock. I had five chickadees and two nuthatches," Miss Atwood said in conclusion.

CONSTIPATION DRAGS YOU DOWN

● Don't let common constipation rob you of life and vigor! When bowels don't work right, the trouble often lies in what you eat. You don't get "bulk". Such common foods as meat, bread, potatoes are consumed in the body. They fail to supply the bulky mass that helps a bowel movement. Crisp, crunchy ALL-BRAN helps in two ways: It contributes to the "bulk" you need; and it also is a rich source of Nature's intestinal tonic, Vitamin B_1. Eat ALL-BRAN every day, drink plenty of water, and see what a difference "regular" habits can make in your life.

Looking Back
On This Date

When the cable dispatches told us the other day that the conference in London concerning the Palestine problem the Arabs and the Jews were received by the British ministry in separate rooms of the foreign office, many of us regarded it as a strange way to commence a conference. But it has seemingly long been a practice in Whitehall to put one party to a conference in one room and the other in another, because when George E. Cartier and William McDougall went to London, to negotiate for the purchase of the Hudson's Bay territory, just that thing was done.

Writing to Sir John A. Macdonald, March 6, 1869, Sir George said: "Lord Granville had us in one room and the H.B. people in another. He made us certain proposals which he would get accepted by the company if we would agree to them."

Cartier and McDougall rejected the proposals as "absurd" and "impossible," and so the "conference" ended without the Canadians meeting the company official at all! A few days after Granville recalled Cartier to the colonial office and negotiations were resumed. Cartier insisting that he must meet the H.B. people face to face.

The Hudson Bay Co. had at first demanded one million pounds for the territory. Cartier beat them down to £300,000, with certain land reservations, a good bargain for the young Dominion.

Cartier on his return to Canada said he protested against the secret separate meetings and believed that it was only by his demand that the two parties met face to face that an agreement was reached at all. Not many Canadians nowadays give transactions. It is true that McDougall first protested the acquisition in parliament, but when the negotiations came it was Cartier who did the talking and set the price.

DEATH AT THE MANOR

By M. E. CORNE

CHAPTER FORTY-FIVE

"GOOD LORD!" Mac stuck his nose into the powder box that held the cyanide. "Where did this come from?"

"In the salon—second anteroom shelf—"

"The salon, eh?" He moistened his fingertip and touched it to the powder. "Genius, Elsie, genius!" he muttered, shaking his head. "How'd you happen to run onto it?"

I told him and nodded slowly: "Of course! The logical hiding place! And anyone might have put it there. Anyone!" He stuffed the box into his pocket and help me to my feet. "Keep this under your hat for the time being, girl!"

"All right, Mac."

"O.K., Hawkins, my lad!" Mac galloped down the stairs and slapped the astonished butler on the back. "Come on, Elsie!" We'll see what Ellis has to say for himself!"

In the library he closed the door and spoke slowly into the mouthpiece. I waited beside him—on pins and needles.

"Yes—yes—what? Are you positive? Well, I'll be a monkey's grandma!" He let the receiver fall noisily to the table. "Elsie," he said, and on his face there was an expression of mingled stupefaction and amazement, "Ellis says the cyanide was procured from that chain drug store on North High street, Columbus — and — and that the purchaser was — Mrs. Horace Witherspoon!"

"Mrs. Horace?" I repeated stupidly. "How can that be?"

"It could be, Elsie! It could be!" McIntyre's expression altered. It became stern, purposeful. "It fits! Oh, how beautifully it fits!"

"What fits?" He was speaking in riddles again.

"Then you know — who is the murderer?"

"Yes, I know." He sighed. "And I haven't enough evidence to convince a jury of two-year-olds."

"I began: "but how—"

"By golly!" He slapped his thighs. "We have one chance! One chance—"

"Do we?"

"We do!" He seemed to shake himself mentally. His eyes narrowed. I knew that he was speaking more to himself than to me, but I listened eagerly; "X will never in this world confess—unless—"

"Yes?" I leaned forward.

"Unless he is caught in the act!" he concluded, clipping his words to staccato time.

"The act?" I could only echo inanely.

"Oh!" I caught my breath in my throat.

"Don't be frightened." He smiled at me. "It won't be as bad as it sounds. I'm not going to let anyone else be harmed. When I say X must be trapped into committing a fourth crime, I mean that he must be given the incentive and the opportunity to do murder. Naturally, I shan't permit him to accomplish his purpose."

I questioned fearfully: "Then X is a man?"

"I'm using the pronoun collectively. He or she, as the case may be."

"How—how will you trap him?"

"I don't know yet!" He frowned thoughtfully. "I have an idea—"

Hawkins interrupted. He entered noiselessly. "Luncheon is served," he said reprovingly. "It is a quarter past the hour."

The inquest took place that afternoon. It was held in the Lawnville courthouse. I rode into town with Phil and Mac. The guests and members of the household preceded us in the family limousine. The servants brought up the rear in Miss Daphne's two-seater.

The streets and sidewalks in front of the courthouse were crowded with curiour onlookers who pushed and shoved and jostled themselves and us in an effort to catch sight of the principles in this town's most exciting and stirring event since the day Lige Titus, the town drunk, chased his wife down Main street with a butcher knife! Henceforth Lige Titus must forevermore take a back seat. Murder among the elite, among the very social Witherspoons, was a delectable morsel for the starved tongues of the town. The butcher, the baker, the candlestick maker were with us en masse. They craned and crammed their necks; they pushed and pulled; they followed us into the courtroom.

In the recounting of the affair, I have, I am well aware, omitted mention of the hordes of curious men and women who stormed the gates of the Manor day after day. This omission, intentional, perhaps will be forgiven, if the reader will consider the state of my mind during the days and nights of my stay at the Witherspoon estate. Murder is not a chummy affair, and I was concerned only with the preservation of my own skin and the apprehension and conviction of the criminal. I was as isolated from the town and its inhabitants as though I were cast upon some deserted island. Indeed, I had not set foot outside the grounds of the Manor since the Sunday evening following Mrs. Witherspoon's death, when Phil had driven me into town to the picture show.

Now the crowds, laughing, shouting, even jeering, frightened and annoyed me. Under Phil's protecting wing I ran into the courthouse and took my place on the bench reserved for witnesses.

The first half of the inquiry proved dull and uninteresting. Witnesses were called. The guests, the servants, the family and myself. Our stories were but a repetition of those which we had already related to the police. No reference was made to the arrest of Richard Witherspoon or to the loss of the emeralds. The absence of Miss Toots Lemoine was not commented upon. I had begun to think the whole business a vast waste of time, when the coroner cleared his throat importantly and summoned to the stand a total stranger to me. The man who shuffled forward was a huge, burly individual, with a bristling red mustache and no hair.

"Your name?" snapped Didmore.

"John Henry Herman."

"Occupation?"

"Electrican," stated the stranger, and a thrill of anticipation ran the length of my spine. The electrician!

"Will you please to tell the court in your own words the story of the two telephone calls received by you on the afternoon of the sixteenth, this month, and reputedly made by Mrs. Greely, housekeeper at the Manor."

The Stars Say . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Tuesday, March 7.

A day of rather peculiar incidents with much that is hidden or of subtle influence prevailing, is forecast. There may be a rigid or static condition to be broken up, either by main force or strategem, according to th eindividuals concerned. Elders may be influential. Strangers with novel slants may unite to bring about substantial benefits of enduring worth. Clever manipulation and solid co-operation may yield much stability.

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves involved in rather singular situations during the year, with congested conditions turned to substantial benefits through clever, tactful and strategic although novel experiments or management. Elders, superiors, and others have much influence, by means of which there may be a lasting token of confidence, as in trusts or bequests.

A child born on this day, although solid and serious, may incline to show and ostentation, and have streaks of temperament. However, it should succeed in important position despite all detriments. It might be in politics, the church or an educational institution.

By MAX TRELL

Jack lived in a box. That's why he was called Jack-in-the-Box. As a rule, the cover to his box was kept closed. But when any of the children came along and touched the little catch on the cover—whizz! up sprang Jack, throwing out his arms and shouting "Hello! Hello!"

Unfortunately, no one but Knarf and Hanid, the shadows, heard Jack say anything. The children didn't even know he could speak. They simply thought that when Jack sprang up out of his box and threw out his arms he was just trying to frighten them. They didn't know that he loved them, and that he threw out his arms to hug them, and that he was saying: "Hello! Hello!" He hoped that one day they would take him out of his box and hold him up and say what a jolly fellow he was, and perhaps take him out into the garden where he often heard them playing together. In all his life Jack had never been outside his crowded little box.

Knarf Did It.

One day as the children were closing down the cover of the box with Jack inside, Knarf slipped inside, too. The cover went snap. And then Jack noticed the shadow-boy.

"You shouldn't be in here," Jack said with a frown. "There isn't room enough for both of us."

"I know it," said Knarf. "But if you'll only jump out of the box the next time the cover comes up—why, there'll be plenty of room in here for me."

"You shouldn't be in here."

"Sure you can. Just you wait and see."

Do you know what Knarf went and did? He loosened the little string that help Jack tied to the bottom of the box and the next moment when the children touched the catch on the cover again—whizz-z-z! Jack sprang up and out—clear out!

He jumped so high that he almost hit the ceiling. But the children caught him and held him and said: "What a jolly fellow this Jack-in-the-box is!" And they took him out into the garden, just as he had always wished.

And Knarf felt so proud of what he had done that he went to a corner and stood on his head.

Black Spruce, A Native Of Quebec, Able To Thrive On Muskeg Norwood Contractor Reveals

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MARMORA, March 6. — Casha Boyd, local pulpwood contractor who has travelled hundreds of miles in long jaunts in connection with his work during the past twenty-two years, provided the Examiner with some interesting matter over the week-end. Furthest afield from his native village, he spent two months at two different falls in the Abitibi district of Northern Quebec, and it is concerning his observations in that sector that the following article is written.

He mentioned that the jobbers, mostly French-Canadian, take more pride in their pulpwood operations than the average Ontario jobber. This is seen in their preparation of the pulpwood, the cutting of bush and the construction of roads into the camps.

The wood used in the manufacture of pulp grows in the Northern Abitibi district under unfavorable conditions. Black spruce is the more plentiful of pulpwood. It is in constant demand as a raw material for the production of sulphite pulp for newsprint, rayon, and other material. It has the ability to grow and thrive in areas where, owing to moisture and unfavorable soil conditions, no other species of pulpwood trees could flourish. It is found across Canada in certain vast areas and muskeg that otherwise would be waste land.

Asked if there was much black spruce in Central Ontario, Mr. Boyd remarked that there was none to the best of his knowledge, and he added that old settlers whom he had questioned, replied that they had never been aware of any growing in this part of the province.

Black Spruce in Ontario.

"Do you think a reforestation program to include the planting of black spruce seedlings in Ontario might be tried with profit?" he was asked. He could not offer any opinion, but was inclined to the thought that given the right soil and other beneficial conditions, the black spruce might thrive in this province. He noticed while in Abitibi the black spruce reproduces either from seed or from branches of the trees encrusted with moss which take root and send up shoots which develop into trees.

Owing to improper drainage, some black spruce, though attaining to an age of approximately ninety years, only reach a growth of eight inches in diameter. The seasons in Abitibi are very short and backward, and this accounts for the sourness of the soil and the stunted growth of the trees. In several sections visited by Mr. Boyd in the region between La Laria and Taschereau in the province of Quebec and again southward to Noranda, he noticed with interest the extensive drainage systems carried out by the Government of the province whereby trees have taken on a new lease of life and assume better proportions under more rapid growth.

Mr. Boyd's greatest wonder was that black spruce could grow in such places as muskegs. The muskegs are dangerous for travelling purposes, and Mr. Boyd said it recalled to him his school days when lads of his acquaintance joined with him in walking across ponds on rubber ice, thereby taking great chances of being immersed. The muskegs really roll, he said, and gives the one who crosses them many strange feelings. In the dense forests the surface of the earth is flat for miles, suggesting that muskegs may have been at one time bodies of water such as small lakes.

To one of old Ontario who is visiting Abitibi for the first time, the black spruce is interesting. At first glance it may be mistaken for our own tamarack. Closer inspection shows the difference. The black spruce carries a very heavy coating of a stringy moss to be noticed as chiefly favoring the branches.

Reverting to the drainage system as carried out by the Quebec Government, he said, that results were most gratifying. The Government not only has well drained the improved roads with the digging of six-foot ditches both sides of the roads, but they have also financially helped settlers to drain their properties. In the digging of ditches almost two feet of peat has been found covering the clay deposits. Much remains to be done to perfect the Abitibi drainage system, and yet in the opinion of Mr. Boyd, where similar conditions exist in Ontario affecting the growth of pulpwood, the policy of the Quebec Government might be put into force with advantage.

General Agent

TORONTO, March 6. — Robert Niven, assistant district passenger agent, Canadian Pacific Railway, Toronto, since 1926, has been appointed general agent, passenger department, for the Ontario district of the company, with headquarters at Toronto.

Mr. Niven, who is very well known throughout Ontario, joined the C.P.R. on September 13, 1906, as clerk in paymaster's office at Montreal.

Former Pastor Preaches At Mark St.

There are too many jitterbugs in the world today, was the opinion expressed by Rev. Charles D. Daniel of Ingersoll, speaking at the tenth anniversary services at Mark Street United church yesterday. Too few people, he contended, are concerned with life as a serious affair.

Speaking at the morning service, he urged men to "recover the touch of eternity in their hearts." Man is not merely an animal of blood and bone, but carries in him a divine touch of eternity. Too many leaders in politics, literature, business, have lost that touch, are concerned only with material things, he said.

Writers have lost the touch of eternity along with painters, and the result has been that nothing is being produced today that will live until tomorrow, he claimed. He believed that salacious literature is on the up-swing, described a visit he had made to a bookshop in his own town during which he found only two "worthwhile" publications on shelves—listing them as Time and Scriberner's—amid "a pile of punk."

He pleaded for a sense of God in man, stating that man has in him the power to rise above his humble day to day tasks and prove that "he is more than common clay." To those who have found God, he said, comes peace, content, and all that ails those thousands of restless people is the fact that they do not realize God.

In treating life as a serious affair he said he was not urging a gloomy outlook. The optimist contributed more to man's welfare than the pessimist, he thought. But he warned against an all-absorbing interest in triviality.

He scored the inactivity of politicians in the face of unrest that he believed might well result in a serious threat by fascism. Politicians in this country, he charged, "are sitting idly by and watching us go to the dogs." They are "afraid to take a stand on any question," he claimed.

Meanwhile fascism is creeping into Canada, making inroads where it is least thought. Its disciples, and the disciples of all of Canada's other new "isms" are studying day and night, becoming versed in the principles in which they believe. He found it a pity that Christians did not study to the same extent, scored the tendency on the part of professed followers of Christ to disregard the teachings of Christianity. Too many people never study the Bible, do not know the fundamentals of their religion, he said. He believed that the only solution to the world's problems lay in the teaching of Christ, and deplored the fact that Christians seem prone to neglect to learn them thoroughly.

Rev. Mr. Daniel spoke at both morning and evening services, was welcomed on both occasions by congregations that packed the church. He was pastor at the church for five years prior to assuming charge at Trinity United church, Ingersoll.

At the morning service he expressed joy at being able to return to his former charge, and complimented Musical Director Harry Northrop, A.T.C.M., on the progress the choir had made, saying that their singing had been among the finest he had ever heard. He also complimented the soloist of the morning, E. A. Rowe, and Mrs. Dorothy Sager Goldie, evening soloist.

The present church was dedicated on Sunday, March 3, 1929, after its erection under leadership of Rev. A. E. Thornley, M.A., then pastor of the congregation. In 1931 Rev. Mr. Thornley was succeeded by Rev. Mr. Daniel, who served for the succeeding five years, to be followed by Rev. E. W. Rowland, present pastor. Mr. Rowland was absent from yesterday morning's service, taking the place of another pastor who was ill.

During the 10 years of worship in the present church building, the choir has been one of the most outstanding organizations. It supplies a fine service of music on Sundays and has also presented many concerts and operettas. In such fashion its members have been able to raise funds to purchase their own music. The organization receives no annual grant from the church board, but is self-supporting and has contributed liberally to other branches of the church including the organ fund, and current expenses.

"We cannot suffer several privileged individuals to prepare peacefully to flee and gai nexile abroad," the statement said.

Casado's contempt for the overthrown cabinet was such that he scarcely mentioned its members in his speech. He insisted the people "shall not surrender arms unless an assured peace based on independence and integrity of the county is possible."

He urged "Spaniards on the other side" to join the national defence council so as to eject "invaders"—foreign fighters.

"Spain wants peace," he cried. "It is up to you to help her secure it. If you offer us real peace, an inpendent peace, we shall be glad to meet you. Otherwise we shall fight on. The question is either peace or fight until death."

A previous announcement by the Negrin regime had said Negrim was taking control of the army into his own hands, but that Miaja was remaining as commander-in-chief.

Some people believed the sudden turn of events would mean peace negotiations or an early resumption of Franco's offensive. The Nationalist troops were reported concentrated near Vale Cia and Madrid.

OTTAWA, March 6 (CP)—Ottawa, singled out for special royal attention because it is Canada's capital, is making the most elaborate preparations in its history for the four-day visit of the King and Queen May 17-20.

Their Majesties will spend much more time in Ottawa than in any other city and civic officials have estimated there will be 250,000 visitors swelling the normal population of 126,000.

A triumphal six-mile tour through the city on Ottawa's beautiful driveway system, an imposing spectacle as the King unveils Canada's national war memorial, a garden party 5,000 persons will attend and an elaborate fireworks display from Parliament Hil lare included in the recently announced program for the visit.

Ottawans may see their King and Queen at least eight times while they are here. This does not include other glimpses they may get as the royal couple motor to limited functions such as a parliamentary dinner and a visit to the Senate and House of Commons.

Residents of the capital will be given an unrivalled opportunity to see the visitors shortly after their arrival when they drive from the southwestern boundary of the city through the capital to Rideau Hall, residence of the Governor-General, where they will stay while they are here.

400,000 Without Crowding

Officials in charge of arrangements believe that even if there are 400,000 persons lining the driveway there will be no crowding. The lawns of the driveway will provide excellent spots from which to see Their Majesties.

Thousands of children and war veterans are expected to pack the huge grandstand at Lansdowne Park which is on the route. Efforts are being made to have the royal couple driven around the half-mile oval track in the Park. It has not yet been decided whether they will use a newly renovated vice-regal coach and four or a motor car.

Memorial Unveiling.

The war memorial unveiling on May 18 will draw the attention of the nation as the most important official act His Majesty will perform during his stay in Canada. Possibly 200,000 will be drawn to the great central square on which the Dominion and the city have spent almost $1,000,000 in recent years.

There, rising majestically before a backdrop formed by the parliament buildings and the Laurentian Hills in the distance, is the memorial to those who laid down their lives for Canada.

Guardsmen in scarlet tunics holding banners 14 feet high will surround the memorial and, at the words of dedication from the King, will move aside to complete the unveiling. Arrangements to make the ceremony one of impressive beauty are going ahead rapidly.

The garden party at Rideau Hall on May 20 will be the most largely attended that has ever been held on the grounds of old Rideau Hall. Despite the fact 5,000 persons will be invited there will be thousands of disappointed who cannot obtain tickets.

At vice-regal garden parties the Governor-General and his wife greet each person attending. But the King and Queen will not have a reception line. They will greet a few persons by previous arrangement as they stroll about the lawns.

Complete Details.

Alan Lascelles, assistant secretary to the King, is in Ottawa going over final arrangements for the visit, ironing out details that could not be settled by cable or letter.

Such things as the seating arrangements for the state dinner, to be held at Rideau Hall May 17 and the parliamentary dinner at the Chateau Laurier May 18 are occupying attention of officials each day while others check final arrangements for visit of Their Majesties to other cities. Everything is done on a precise schedule which will determine the activities of the royal couple for each day they are in Canada.

And civic officials have their troubles. For instance, an enterprising circus manager has asked Ottawa officials whether they will give him a permit to bring his show to Ottawa during the royal stay. He is sure his circus would draw even in competition with the various colorful events associated with the royal visit. Civic authorities are thinking it over.

S. I. Puttenham Elected Head Of Men's Forum

A possibility that the Men's Forum may be broadened out next autumn into more of a community affair and that the meetings may be held in some other place than George Street United church, was suggested by Rev. M. C. Parr, Sunday afternoon, in presenting the report of the nominating committee at the final meeting of the forum for this winter.

So far as George Street was concerned, Mr. Parr said that the management was quite willing to have any subject discussed so long as it was apparent that the morale of the community might be improved in any way, but it was recognized that there were those who might feel that free discussion was hampered because the organization met in the church. Accordingly the nominating committee recommended the election of a slate of officers to take hold until next fall with the power to make the suggested changes if thought desirable.

The report which recommended the following list was adopted unanimously. Hon. President, Rev. M. C. Parr; past president, C. H. Elliott; president, S. I. Puttenham; vice-president, C. E. Coleman; secretary, R. J. Goring; treasurer, J. M. Beattie; organist, John Telford; executive, J. E. Smith, Mac Gordon, E. L. Sackville, Ross Davidson.

It is believed that at least 25 persons lost their lives in the disastrous fire, but the exact toll may never be known.

County Forest Impresses Land Surveyor

J. W. Pierce, O.L.S., is completing in his office a map of Peterborough County's reforestation area in Dummer and Belmont, with field notes from the survey he made of the property several months ago for the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests.

"I think the county has acquired a valuable property for reforesting," Mr. Pierce remarked to the Examiner today. "It is already well timbered with a lot of young pine coming on, and every prospect that proposed reforestation will be a success. The Ouse River crosses it from the northeast corner to the southwest. There are several rather big marshes on it, one of them caused by a beavers' dam, a couple of small streams and little lakes, all indicating that the area has an ample water supply.

Plenty Of Deer.

I went back there a week ago, walking into the area from Centre Dummer on snowshoes. We saw so many deer tracks that it seems safe to say there is a numerous herd somewhere in the county's property. We saw them when we were making the survey, but the indications were so definitely of a rather large number of deer as they were a week ago.

One thing that interested me was the evidence of farming that was once carried on in that section of the county, on land that is now abandoned. There is the Hubble clearing, an extensive deserted farm immediately south of the county forest. I understand that at one time several or more families had their homes in that section. There is a road leading into the area and through it, and all the signs that at one time people lived and worked there. Another deserted farm place I saw for the first time was on the west end of the forest, and a farmer told me that the man who once owned it made enough off it to bring up a family and leave each of them $1,500. Now, it is abandoned, too. And you wonder why this land should be of no more value."

Mr. Pierce said he was greatly impressed with the reforestation project and felt sure the county council had made a sound beginning. Some one else said recently that the county might before long gain a small yearly revenue from the sale of Christmas trees, and the Ouse River was mentioned at the Fish and Game Protective Association's meeting the other night as one of the trout streams of the county. If there are trout in the section within the forest, an additional attraction of good fishing might be a little asset the county has not yet considered.

Great Britain And U.S. Supplying Japan

CAMPBELLFORD, March 6. — Nearly 77 per cent of the war material used in Japan was supplied by Great Britain and the United States and reached its destination on the same boat on which our missionaries went to Japan, declared Mrs. C. Maxwell Loveys, Toronto, the Home Executive Secretary of the Women's Misisonary Society of the United Church. Mrs. Loveys, who addressed congregations at St. John's United Church here at both the morning and evening services, is considered to be one of the most able woman speakers in the church. Her visit marked the celeberation of the 50th anniversary of the formation of the Women's Missionary Society of St. John's United Church in Campbellford. At the evening service members of the W.M.S. and W.A. attended the church in a body while the women's choir also assisted in the evening.

The speaker centred her remarks around the Madras Conference in India and the part played by the misisonary in both India and Africa. Miss Soga, who represented the black race at the conference, had claimed accoding to Mrs. Loveys, that even in the next one hundred years one would not see a colored woman representing that race in Africa. In Africa the white man has too often exploited the native, according to the speaker, while in India there are still many with no religion at all there are nearly two thousand Christians a month coming for baptism. Rev. Harold B. Neal extended a hearty welcome to the speaker.

Canadians Know Too Little About Other Nations Of Commonwealth

That Canadians should be given more news of South Africa, Australia and New Zealand and the people of those Dominions should be told more of what is going on in Canada was the statement of Lieut-Col. C. H .Ackerman in addressing the Men's Forum at George Street United Church on Sunday afternoon on his impressiosn of South Africa as gained in a recent visit. A large attendance was present for the last meeting of the Forum for this winter.

R. J. Goring, secretary of the club presided and the speaker was introduced by Lieut.-Col. R. T. E. Hicks-Lyne.

Col. Ackerman devoted a portion of his address to an interesting discussion of the history of South Africa, particularly discussing the part played by Smuts and Botha, of whose services to the British Empire he spoke in terms of the highest praise. South Africa, he said, was as loyal to that Empire as was Canada and the one-time enemies, Smuts and Botha, deserved much of the credit for that condition. Col. Ackerman advised his hearers to read the book, "Gray Steel," in order that they might properly appreciate the story of South Africa and its people.

The speaker described his trip by motor through part of South Africa, telling of some of the things that had most impressed him, the beauty of Capetown, the loyalty of the Zulus to Great Britain, the danger of disaster at Johannesburg because of the mining operations, the rich flowers and vegetables and other features of interest.

Of things political in South Africa he said that while there was a nationalist feeling among some of the people there was a steadying influence that kept South Africa a loyal member of the British Commonwealth.

Col. Ackerman in the final part of his address told of his journey home by air from Durban to England, telling a most enjoyable story of the trip, one feature of which was the fact that he discovered that one of the pilots was a Canadian who had been educated at Royal Military College.

After the regular business period the president, Mrs. J. D. Mills offered a delightful talk on the subject, "Transforming Friendships." Other items on the program included a reading by Mrs. Alex. Abar and a dialogue by Gwendolyne Neal and June Burgiss. A vocal duet by Gladys Stephen and Dorothy Henson was much appreciated by the group and was followed by a group of ten who presented a well rehearsed dialogue.

Winners of the contest held during the afternoon were Misses Nellie Hoover and Dorothy Henson. Those of the group who assisted the hostess were Mrs. Garnet Cassan, Mrs. George Hawthorne, Miss Stella Keir, Mrs. Marshall and Mrs. Alex Abar.

Theft Of Trees Charge Dismissed

A charge laid against Fred Miles, veteran Clarina farmer, of stealing trees from Crown property in Dummer was dismissed by Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in county police court this morning when Crown Attorney McElderry, K.C., announced that he was offering no evidence.

Miles was first arraigned several weeks ago, pleaded not guilty and the case was adjourend until to-day.

Several other cases of the same kind are to be heard by Magistarte Langley at Norwood to-morrow. They involve other Dummer farmers and in the case of Calvin Lee nearly all the evidence was heard here some weeks ago.

Mail Is Delivered By Snowmobile

(Examiner Correspondence.)

ENNISMORE, March 6—While air mail service is becoming more common day by day throughout the country, one Ennismore district boasts of snowmobile mail delivery. Mr. Shearers snow-bird travels daily from Lakehurst to Ennismore village where it meets the Lake-sturt where it meets the Lakehurst,Ennismore stage, giving mail service to the residents on the main north road which is still impassable for cars, although open for raffic wih horses.

Wild Geese Seen Flying Over Keene

KEENE, Mar. 6. — A flock of about twenty-five wild geese passed over Keene about 10.30 on Friday morning. They were flying north.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Cocks of Peterborough were week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Gainer.

Mrs. James Grey has returned from Renfrew, where she has been visiting her brother, A. B. C. Throop.

FIRE FROM EXHAUST

SHOREHAM, England — (CP). — Spark from the exhaust of a passing automobile is believed to have caused a gas-main fire, the 20-foot flames from which held up traffic more than an hour.

Truck Piles Up On Bad Curve

Considerable damage was done to a huge tractor-trailer conbination owned by the Smith Transport Company when the driver failed to make the turn from the Chemong Road into Reid Street shortly before 8 o'clock this morning, as he was coming into Peterborough and the tractor had the front wheels knocked off in crashing into a Hydro pole on Stewart Street near the intersection.

The pole was broken off by the impact.

The driver of the big machine stated that something went wrong with the steering gear as he approached the turn and the tractor-trailer, instead of swinging on to Reid Street kept going almost straight ahead. The tractor smashed into the pole and the trailer, carrying five tons of merchandise followed through but did not upset. The goods on the trailer included a large consignment of matches and the crash might easily have been followed by a costly fire.

Mother Says Son Knows About God

Evidence by her 11-year-old son, Harold Payne, that he received no religious education and knew nothing of God, as told by the youngster himself in a Supreme Court civil action recently, was incorrect according to the boy's mother, Mrs. Maxwell Payne, Park street south.

Mrs. Payne told the Examiner today that her son does receive religious training. She admitted that he had said otherwise in the witness box when Mr. Justice Greene was questioning him before taking his oath, and admitted that the Examiner's report of proceeding was accurate. She said the youngster must have become confused, pointed out that he was a young boy and that his surroundings were strange.

The boy has attended church and Sunday school, although not regularly, she said. "I have six children and it is not always possible to get them ready for church or Sunday school, nor have we always had the clothes, but I send them whenever I can," she said.

Her boy should know about God for he is taught about Him both at home and in Sunday school, and at day school, Mrs. Payne said. The boy said he was taught nothing about God, knew nothing of Him. This, Mrs. Payne said, is incorrect. The youngster was confused at the time. She said he had not been attending Sunday school for several weeks past, and when he was asked whether he attended Sunday school, he probably thought he could not answer in the affirmative with truth because of those absences, she explained.

Townships Supply Workers For Road

A number of men from the townships comprising Peterborough county were taken on as workers on the Buckhorn-Bobcaygeon highway, through the Employment Service of Canada, this morning. Each municipality that has able-bodied men on relief will be represented on the construction work. A total of 20 openings for skilled workers of all kinds are listed at the Service headquarters on King street—in jobs ranging from glass to construction work, but each a specialized trade, in which a man must have been trained.

Organization of the Peterborough County Chamber of Agriculture advanced provisionally several stages at the meeting on Saturday afternoon of the general committee which had been appointed to proceed with th details of establishment.

James Gifford was named president, Melville H. Johnston, vice-president, Frank C. Paterson, secretary-treasurer, Gordon Hancock, and W. A. Anderson, directors, and that group comprises the executive which will deal with any matters requiring immediate attention. These members are not permanent officers. They have not yet been elected by the Chamber as a whole, but they will carry on the work of the formative stage of the institution until constitution and other matters are ready to be presented to the main body.

A special committee was appointed to take up the question of organization of the swine breeders of the county. Its members are: John McColl, Fred Eason, Willard Waterman, J. F. Walsh, and Clayton Sanderson.

Mr. Gifford was authorized to attend the Eastern Canada conference which is to be held in Winnipeg. It is designed to quicken interest in the Canadian Chamber of Agriculture and its projects, and is intended to be the counterpart of the meeting which was held in Winnipeg last fall.

It was decided to write each farm organization in the county and ask for its definite asurance of becoming affiliated with the Chamber. Opinion has already been indicated at the organization meeting, but the members of the committee decided that they should have statements from the farm groups that will throw in their lot with the Chamber. Several other questions were discussed during the afternoon. Twenty of the thirty members of the committee were present.

Japs Ravage Hupeh

SHANGHAI, March 6.—(AP). — Three motorized Japanese columns established advance lines on the Han river to-day, easing the way for infantry driving toward Shasi and Ichang, two important Yangtse river cities.

Denies Knowledge Of Liquor Bottle

Although a young Toronto man at first pleaded guilty in police court this morning to illegal possesdon of liquor, the explanation he started to make afterward caused Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., to finally adjour the case until Wednesday morning to give the accused a chance to think the thing over before entering a plea.

"I had the bottle of liquor on me," the accused stated, "but I did not know I had it."

"Well then do you want to change your plea to not guilty?" asked the Magistrate, adding that if the plea of guilty were to be allowed to stand nothing the accused could say could prevent the minimum fine of $100 which was all the Crown was asking from being levied.

The accused accepted the chance of deferring his plea until Wednesday.

Large Wolf Seen Near The Nepheline Mine Deer Seeking Refuge In Valleys Near Camp

LAKEFIELD, March 6—A large wolf was seen at the Canadian Nepheline mine, at the head of Stoney Lake, on Saturday morning.

It was noticed first travelling south from Big Mountain Lake across Little Mountain Lake toward Stoney early in the day. About one half hour later, Harry Stabler, of Lakefield, saw the animal clearly, making its way back across the ice over Little Mountain Lake. It came out of the woods to the south, stopped and looked around, and then trotted off across the ice toward Big Mountain Lake. It was not travelling fast, Mr. Stabler reported, and must have been within two hundred yards from where mining operations were going on.

Wolves are killing deer in that area, it is reported. The deer are being driven toward civilization and are yarding in the valleys close to the mine—an indication that the wolves are playing havoc wth them in the preserve. By staying near the mine the deer are comparatively safe.

That the deer are at the mercy of the wolves in the deep snow was evidenced one day last week, when mine employees saw a deer jumping through the snow. It would take about four jumps, then pause for a moment and take four more jumps. It was impossible for the animal to walk in the deep snow, the employees said.

An unfortunate angle of the situation is that the wolves there cannot be shot as it is unlawful to carry a gun in the game preserve area. Because of their suspicious nature it is difficult to snare the animals.

Walking Very Bad On City Streets

Miles of slushy sidewalks brought a crop of complaints to City Engineer Parsons' office this morning. For those who had to walk during the week-end the alternative to sloshing along in the paths made by the snow plows was to skid and slither along the banks or pick out new paths up on top of them. And Sunday night's fall of rain soaked snow added depth to the waterways which stretches of the sidewalk had become. There wasn't much that could be done about the heavy going. Removal of last week's snow from the roads had left no time to dig curb drains, although a few industrious citizens had done that job in front of their homes.

Mild weather changed the snow to a blanket that was spongy, holding back the water, with only an extra trickle showing in the Jackson Park creek. Ruts were forming on some of the streets, but towards noon today the wind had veered to the west with some promise of frost by tonight.

ST. PAUL'S YANK OUT 38-37 CAGE WIN OVER TORONTO SQUAD

Colorful Field Starts Famous Brier

By Louis V. Hunter
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

TORONTO, Mar. 6 — (C.P.). — The cream of Canadian curlers, 10 championship rinks from coast to coast, took to the ice to-day at Toronto's palatial Granite Club in quest of the prized Macdonald Brier and the Dominion title held by Manitoba, almost perennial winner since the Brier was inaugurated 12 years ago.

To defend the trophy it has won eight times, Manitoba sent to the four-day competition one of the two rinks tasting Brier play for the first time. Police Magistrate Walter Limerick's "family" four from New Brunswick also is composed of newcomers. Limerick's two sons and his nephew are on the rink.

The other rinks, from British Columbia, Saskatchewan, Alberta, Ontario, Northern Ontario, Quebec, Nova Scotia, and Prince Edward Island, all are skipped by men with previous Brier experience. Twenty of the 40 men on the 10 rinks have played before for the trophy, and of these Skip C. W. Durrant of Nova Scotia and Skip D. H. Millar of Northern Ontario have been here three times. The others have made either one or two trips.

The task of defending the Brier for Manitoba has been allotted to Ross Kennedy's rink from the Winnipeg Strathcona Club. The 41-year-old skip comes from Glenboro, Man., where he curled with Ab. Gowanlock, former Brier holder. Kennedy skipped a rink in the Manitoba bonspiel at the age of 16. His third is Billy MacDonald, 29, who skipped the rink through the Consols final this year while Kennedy was ill. Bob Hume, second, and lead Clair Wells both have plenty of curling experience behind them.

Manitobans Get Around.

The Manitoba monopoly in the curling games extends farther than actual wins. This year's rink learned to curl in Manitoba and in addition, the British Columbia entry led by Rolly David has two Manitob-trained players. Howard Palmer, the Alberta skip, and Saskatchewan's George Dunbar and Jack Brower are Manitoba products.

Lorne Umphrey, lead on the Northern Ontario rink from Haileybury, was born and learned to curl in Manitoba and R. F. McLaine of Prince Edward Island, though born in the Maritimes, learned the game in Manitoba. Thus Manitoba has trained 11 of the 40 competitors.

Of the rinks in this year's Brier, Bert Hall's powerful Ontario Kitchener four is the only one bringing back the same men as last year. The rink has won almost every competition it entered in the two years it has been together and in last year's Brier it was close to the top. In the Ontario Tankard this year it stamped itself as a dangerous contender.

Each rink plays nine matches in the competition, meeting each of the other rinks once in a round-robin. If a tie results a play-off is held between the leaders.

St. John's Team Get Soft Win

Piling up an overwhelming 40-2 lead in the opening quarter, and then coasting to a 98-21 victory, St. John's advanced a step into the second round of their O.C.B.A. juvenile championship guest, eliminating Port Perry in the Port Perry High School gym Saturday night before a fair crowd. St. John's opened the scoring almost from the opening tip-off, had a 20-point lead before the homesters could score, and from there on, scoring at will, breaking fast and using long passes to advantage, were never threatened, piling it up as the game wore on.

It was 40-2 at the quarter, 49-9 at the half and 76-12 going into the final period. The visitors seemingly had no trouble breaking through Port Perry's defensive system, time and again working it in close to score easily, or looping long passes over the heads of the Port Perry defence, with the St. John's guards doing the pitching. Port Perry had a better part of the play, than the score indicates but better shooting from around the free throw lane, enabled St. John's to pile it up. St. John's made 4 out of 8 free throws and the homesters 5 for 5. Craig led the winners scoring with 46 points, with Ascott and Dyer, the St. John's guards starring, setting up plays and dropping in 23 points themselves. Bruce Beare and Colbear were the best of the homesters. The teams:

St. John's (98) — Centre, Craig (46); forwards, Amys (10; Marshall (16); guards, Dyer (16), Ascott (10).

Port Perry (21)—Centre, B. Beare (7); forwards, W. Beare, L. Colbear (6); guards, B. Beare (4), Dusty; subs, O. Colbear (2), Aldred, Emerson (2), McMasters.

Digging up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

And now we have Niagara Falls hockeyists' in our midst again. Yep, they're here Tuesday to tackle the Petes at 8.30 in the Brock in the first of the locals' O.H.A. round-robin finals in senior "B" company. Last year, the Falls and Petes clashed in Ontario senior "B" semi-finals, with the locals winning here by two counters but losing the round by a single goal. This time, games count in the series with Chatham, Waterloo, Niagara and Peterborough. This week's setup calls for the Falls here tomorrow, the Petes in Waterloo on Wednesday and Chatham here Friday. We're told the ice is fair and there's a big demand for ducats—and can well believe that. So don't pass it up, folks, and don't arrive late. The game was postponed from tonight.

* * * * * *

Remember that bruising 5-3 win for the Petes here last March 'gainst the Falls. Over 2,000 redhot rooters—best crowd in years—jammed the arena and booed lustily as the rough Big Roar bunch drew nine of the 10 penalties handed out by Referee Tracy Shaw. They banged the Petes around in scandalous style, but played cleaner hockey at home to earn a 4-1 win. Bill Gaynon said the other day in his Falls' column: "Hockey followers of this territory who recall the hectic battles with Chatham and Peterborough clubs last season will welcome the new arrangements which call for a round-robin series." Yeah, they will here, too.

Then And Now

The 1938 Falls' lineup was: Goal, Mowers; defence, Peterkin, Astle; centre, Brenchley; wings, Morrison, Steele; subs, Wilson, Pavone, Colucci, Murray and Hudson. This year, Mowers is still in goal, but on Detroit Red Wings' list; while Murray and Dyte play defence—the latter being the big Barrie boy who played junior 'gainst us, and whom the Orfuns tried hard to get. Grigor is at centre between Mason and Croucher, and subs are: Brenchley, Pavone, Morrison, Greenwood and Allan. They've played senior "A" all season—twice tying the Goodyears' champs—and are classy. But they won't scare the Petes this time, we'll bet.

* * * * * *

Locals' lineup last winter against Niagara was: Goal, Harding; defence, Barnes, Brennan; centre, Calladine; wings, Vitarelli, Starr; subs, McDougall, Kingdon, Tompkins, Creighton and Weir. Tomorrow's will likely be: Harding in goal, much improved over a year back, with Gray and Gardner on defence; Kingdon betwixt Tomkins and Starr on one line, with Creighton, Coughlin and Nichol on the other. Crowe and Weir are on the other defence, with extra puckists being McNulty, McDougall and McNabb. Somehow, we feel the speedy Petes, with more experience now—and on home ice—will just about cop the nod here Tuesday and they won't be backing away from charges, elbows and cross-checks as happened here a year ago.

A Feud Renewed

And so it come up the Falls-Petes' playoff on local ice once more, with another huge crowd of wild-eyed rooters roaring lustily as teams—who didn't like each other personally last winter—battling for a title, resume a year-old feud. One is a pretty fair senior "A" squad and the other a good senior "B" team, and they're fighting for senior "B" laurels. It'll be a hotchs scrap from start to finish with the Falls unable this year to work on the principle of holding down the score for the return tilt—seeing as points do not count on the round this season. Both teams will be out to win and ready to run themselves into the ice doing it.

* * * * * *

There are a coupla points in the round-robin schedule, as drawn up by the O.H.A., which the Petes don't like a bit. They want Waterloo here Friday or the first of next week, since natural ice won't last much longer—but the O.H.A. has Waterloo billed for here in another two weeks! Out of the question, of course. Then the locals have been ordered to play in Chatham on Wednesday, March 15th, and in the Falls the following Friday. But the Petes want to go to the Falls that Wednesday and from there over to Chatham—cleaning up the two games in one long trip, and not being anxious to journey 300 miles to Chatham the first jaunt. They could break up the long trip nicely by playing first in the Falls and then going from there to Chatham and have the long 300-mile trip home on a Saturday. But the Falls wants Friday home games and may get 'em. Petes are still arguing the point with the O.H.A.

No Heavy Sugar

One gold-plated cinch, and that is that this round-robin serial is gonna cost the locals heavy dough. If they make any coin, it'll have to be on side bets. Long trips cost like the deuce when you figure in transportation, hotels, meals, incidentals and (a big item) time off work for several days for all the players. Nope, the boys are not figuring on any big profit this season—they're out for the glory of it now. The real coin comes in a long playoff series between teams living fairly close to each other, like the old Campbellford-Petes' intermediate playoffs, and the 1938 Fliiers-Petes' series in senior "B", but these 200-mile and 300-mile hikes are a headache financially.

* * * * * *

Two of our church cage teams opened their O.C.B.A. playdown series on Saturday and did okay. St John's Juveniles went to Port Perry and pasted the daylights out of the Ports, doing a 98-21 chore on 'em! Yep, with Jack Craig of the locals collecting a cool 46 points by himself It is very doubtful if the double-P players will bother with a return joust here. St. Paul's intermediate "A" squad yanked out a nifty 38-37 edge over the Parkdale Invictus Club here before a big crowd in a thriller, and will tote a one-point lead back to Toronto for the return. Jim Thorburn was the main gun for the Saints as he notched 23 points. Quakers nosed out Dominions, 35-33 in a good city loop tilt here Saturday eve, too.

* * * * * *

Up and Down Sports' Rialto: Guess the Church Loop puck playoff on Sat'day was postponed....D. A. Houston was slated to referee tonight's senior "B" playoff here, till it was postponed a night....Waterloo is billed for Chatham this eve with a London referee....We understand the Falls and Chatham have artificial ice, but not Waterloo....Oshawa's junior "B" bunch, which rubbed out our Colts and Kingston, opens a series now in Barrie....And Lindsay's "C" lads have a return joust in Belleville with a 6-goal lead .. The Oshawa-Lindsay juvenile hockey winnah meets Kingston next....What cage contests are slated for this week....Toronto girl basketeers took a 58-37 win Sat'day over Cobourg Grads, who won intermediate "A" honors in our group this winter; return is next Sat'day in Cobourg....Chatham scribe says the Petes 12-1 win over Kingston indicates the locals must have plenty of punch....Local Aces are waiting word from the O.H.A. about their intermediate "B" playdowns....Please, just one good blast from the north this week, just one, doggone it!

Rookie's Prowess Thrills Hometown

COAL CREEK, B.C., March 6.—(CP).—Outstanding performance of Stan Smith, rookie star of New York Rovers, New York Rangers" amateur farm club, has been followed closely by residents of this Rocky Mountain mining district, where he was born.

Last year Smith was top scorer for Rossland Miners in West Kootenay Senior League, and finished sixth in the league, whose champions, Trail Smoke Eaters, won the Dominion senior hockey crown.

Jan. 30 standings of the Eastern Amateur League, showed Smith was setting the pace for Rovers with 12 goals and 15 assists.

New York sports writers highly praise Smith and tab him as real National Hockey League material. He is not only strong on offence, but one of the best backcheckers on the squad.

The 21-year-old Rover began his hockey with the Coal Creek flyweights and graduated to Trail juniors. Last year he went to Rossland.

In the off-season Smith returns to live with his family—he has eight brothers and sisters—in Trail, B.C., where he operates an electric freight conveyor at a mine

Injury To Samis Gives Birch Racquet Final

By Allan Nickelson
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

TORONTO, March 6.—(CP). — Long-limbed Dick Birch of Vancouver, whose vitality brought him through a siege of illness a year ago, held one Canadian badminton championship to-day and shared another as a climax to a determined struggle to regain the form that won him the national singles title in 1937.

Recuperating when the championships were played last year, Dick did not complete. A few months previously his life had been despaired of when he contracted pneumonia. To quote Dick, "they had the coffin measured."

Clubmate of rambling Richard, slamming John Samis took the title last year and gave it back to Birch by default at the Dominion championships here Saturday following an ankle injury in a semi-final match. It wasn't the kind of a victory Birch wanted, but he showed he had regained championship form in smashing his way to the finals.

Pacific Coast entries won three of the championships as new titlists were crowned in three of the five divisions. Birch's second title came when he paired with Vess O'Shea, also of Vancouver, to take the mixed doubles final from last year's rulers, Nancy Bonnar and Len Schlemm of Montreal. The scores were 15-4, 15-12.

Doubles Crowns Unchanged.

It was in the men's and women's doubles that champions retained their crowns. Roddie Phelan and Jack Sibbald of Toronto remained as kings after what probably was the hardest fight of their court partnership. Margaret Taylor of Kelowna, B.C., and Miss O'Shea had almost as tough a battle before being handed back their trophies.

Sweetheart of the tourney was 20-year-old Marjorie Delaney, an Irish miss from Quebec City, who played like a thoroughbred to emerge with the women's singles title and the plaudits of all.

Marjorie defeated Miss Taylor, 11-7, 11-12, 11-7 to take over the throne vacated by Mrs. W. R. Walton, Jr., Toronto, who is currently winning matches in England preparatory to a try for the all-England title.

Experience was the keynote as Miss O'Shea and Miss Taylor pounded out a 15-7, 17-15 decision over the Quebec "kids," Miss Delaney and little Louise Turcot. Louise's speed amazed the critics.

Dynamite-laden shots that exploded on both sides of the net featured the men's doubles match, hardest-hitting and grimmest battle of the show. Against it was experience that won out for slim Roddie and jumping Jack against the bashing and tricky combination of Jim and Paul Snyder, Waterloo, Ont., brothers. The scores were 15-6, 7-15, 15-10.

Lakefield High Beats Grove

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, March 6—The Lakefield High School first hockey team defeated the Lakefield Preparatory School squad in a close and hard fought battle in the Lakefield rink on Saturday afternoon. The local boys battled their way to a 4 to 3 win on soft ice, which made going difficult in this first contest of the season between the two schools.

The high school held their opponents to a tie in the first period with the score standing at one all at the end.

"Prep" School Takes Lead

The "prep" school lads took the lead in the second stanza when Harris banged the puck past Windsor for their second counter. The high school boys made many attempts to tie the score but without success and the period ended with Grove 2, Lakefield 1.

Lakefield got away to a good start in the third when Yale tied up the score at 2-2. Roberts counted for the Grove and shortly afterwards McCracken tied the score. The high school took the offensive and managed to keep the play up at the Grove net for most of the rest of the period. But it was not until two minutes before the final bell that the homesters were able to get past the Grove goalie for their winning point. The shot was made by McCracken who scored for his second time in the game.

The goals for the Grove team were made by Harris (2) and Roberts while McCracken counted twice for the high school with Yale and Tanner making the other two. Few penalties were handed out during the game. The line-ups are as follows:

TRAINING CAMP BRIEFS

(By The Associated Press)

NEW ORLEANS, March 6 (AP)—Hal Trosky is going to be a few days late checking in at the Cleveland Indians' training camp, but its okay with Manager Oscar Vitt. There is a new infielder in the Trosky household at Norway, Iowa. The remainder of the Indians' squad was expected today.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Joe McCarthy, manager of the world champion New York Yankees, keeps his answers handy. When it became known yesterday that Spurgeon (Spud) Chandler would be lost at least half the season because of a broken ankle, someone suggested to McCarthy he faced a problem as to starting pitchers. "It's not the starters you have to worry about, give me the finishers," retorted Marse Joe.

ORLANDO, Fla. — It's hard to find baseball magnates who will admit their unsigned players are holdouts. Maybe they know something—some of the salary powwows are popularly thought to be ballyhoo. Anyway President Clark Griffith of Washington Senators said he expected no trouble signing the recalcitrant Buddy Myer. "We always manage to work out our difficulties." he explained.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla.—President Sam Breadon of St. Louis Cardinals took occasion today to disillusion again any club owners who might be hoping to benefit from the holdout of slugging Joseph Michael Medwick. "Nothing doing," he broadcast to all. "We're not trading Medwick under any circumstances."

West Point Sets History, Whips R.M.C.

KINGSTON, Ont., March 6 (CP) —For the past 15 years the two leading military schools of the North American continent — the United States Military Academy of West Point, N.Y., and Royal Military College of Canada here—have played an annual hockey game with never a penalty issued and never a win for the Americans.

The no-penalty record remained unblemished today but West Point made history Saturday by edging out the Canadian Cadets 3-2 and setting the stage for a victory celebration on their return to the banks of the Hudson River. The best previous West Point effort was a 4-4 tie two years ago.

The game was the first between the two colleges in which Professor Tom Gelley did not coach R.M.C. He was forced to retire through illness and was succeeded by Captain J. W. Lane, who played with R.M.C. from 1928 to 1931.

The West Pointers were greeted by Hon. Ian Mackenzie, Minister of National Defence, on their arrival. Each of the 25 visiting cadets and officers was "adopted" by an R.M.C. cadet for the visit. The visitors inspected the college and were entertained at a dance following the game.

CURLING

By HERB. MARTIN

It was Saturday morning, somewhere around 10 o'clock. A few of the boys had gathered in on No. 8, wondering if there would be a bonspiel that afternoon or not. Some of them looked with drawn faces out on the ice that was slowly, but surely, losing all its pebbie and frost. Some looked at the calendar on the wall to see what kind of weather we were to have on this day. Some said spring had arrived, and that winter sports were at an end.

One chap, who sat on the little table, said: "Boys, I'll tell you, we are going to have lots of snow and cold weather yet." This chap went on at great length and told us how that in his business it was necessary for him to keep tab on the weather, and, in fact, he could produce records for the past 25 years, He told us how on many occasions he had prophesied the day and hour the ice would go out of the great lakes. Now, folks, you can believe this chap's story or not, but when he is willing to back his opinion with national currency, that settles it. I'm voting for James G. Harkness.

The first challenge of the year was handed to us on Saturday. As we understand it, the game will be played and the losing team buys the oysters. The old A.B.C.D. rink is challenging the members of the executive. We don't know who the president will have as helpers but he has asked yours truly to act as coach and advisor and umpire and collector, so we're in anyway. The A.B.C.D. rink is as follows: Alexander "Winsome" Archibald; Ray "Patience" Best; William "Daredevile" Campbell; Ross "Lonesome" Dobbin.

If the weather tightens up we will play a double header in the leads and seconds tonight so as to reach the finals and then tomorrow night (Tuesday) get right into the vice-skips bonspiel. Two games a night until winners are declared.

Sopwith Plans To Meet American Boat

By Central Press Canadian

LONDON, March 6—Britain's millionaire yachtsman, T. O. M. Sopwith, is having a new 12 metre yacht built to meet the challenge of his American rival, Harold Vanderbilt, who is coming over to race in British waters this summer.

T. O. M. Sopwith

Having beaten Sopwith's two "Endeavors" in the America's Cup races, Vander bilt has challenged his rival with smaller craft.

This race between the two leading Anglo-American yachtsmen will mean a boom year for British yachting.

It is expected that three American 12-metre racing yachts will cross the Atlantic for the summer season. Vanderbilt, who is also building a new 12-metre yacht, will arrive in England in April.

Sopwith plans to have his new craft ready for launching in May, to allow for an intensive series of tuning up trials before the Royal Regatta at Lowestoft on June 3.

Its designer, C. E. Nicholson, is keeping details of the new yacht secret, but it is understood that there will be many revolutionary features in design but no freakish overhangings as in the larger racing yachts, Endeavors and Ranger.

Luxury fittings will make the new yacht the most expensive of her size ever built.

Yachting circles believe that Sopwith is a better helmsman in smaller craft than in the Endeavor.

It is certain, however, that the cheaper 12-metre class will provide keener competition than with the $50,000 a year yachts like the Endeavors and Ranger.

Pontiacs To Tangle With Chryslers

DETROIT, March 6.—(CP)— Detroit Pontiacs and Windsor Chrysler's battle tonight in the first game of a best-of-five series for the Michigan Ontario Amateur Hockey League championship.

Pontiac's all-star line of Joe Carveth, Archie Wilder and Lester Douglas will be faced with the all-star defence of Goalie Phil Mcatee and Defencemen Jack Dent and Roger Proulx.

Windsor won three, lost two and tied one with the Detroit team during the regular season play. Pontiacs won their berth in the final play-offs by defeating Detroit Holzbaugh in two straight games while Windsor eliminated Stratford Majors in the same manner.

Windsor will be strengthened tonight with Mickey Drouillard and Gordon Anderson back in uniform.

Carveth, Wilder and Douglas will be playing their final amateur hockey, it is expected, in this play-off series as Manager Jack Adams of Detroit Red Wings has forecast they will be with the Wings in the National Hockey League or the Wings' farm team, the Pittsburgh Hornets in the International American League next year.

Winnipeg Youth Henie Stand-In

WINNIPEG, March 6.—(CP).—Robert Clark, former Winnipeg ice skater, has made a job for himself in Hollywood as technical adviser and stand-in for Sonja Henie.

Clark has just completed a tour of United States with the Henie ice troupe and is visiting his mother in Winnipeg.

As technical adviser Calrk watches Miss Henie for mistakes during skating scenes for her pictures.

"Miss Henie never makes mistakes in ordinary skating," Clark said, "but skating before a camera is very different. All jumps and spins are marked on the ice and must be done at the exact points."

Duties as skating stand-in are to dress in Miss Henie's costumes and go through her routines for test shot.

"They get me up in those short, fluffy skirts and tops while they get the cameras arranged and everything ready for her skating sequences.

"I'm not very crazy about wearing her clothes and I take an awful ribbing about it," he said,

Dominions Lose 35-33 Fray To The Quakers

Walt Ward's field goal with 15 seconds to play, gave St. Paul's a 38-37 victory and a one-point lead to carry into the return game of their O.C.B.A. Intermediate A first round playoffs, beating Toronto Parkdale Invictus in a thrilling climax Saturday night before a big crowd at the Y.M.C.A. It was the most exciting game of the year.

Parkdale opened the scoring, sinking two free throws and keeping ahead to the half. They went out in front 14-7 near the end of the first half, with Thorburn scoring all the home club's points. But the Saints rallied, and field goals by Marsh and Gemmell, and free throws by McArthur and Pulkinghorn, pulled them up within a point of the visitors. Invictus opened the scoring to start the second half, but sparked by Jimmy Thorburn, who was looping them in from all angles, the homesters took a commanding 34-27 lead with five minutes to play. Invictus' desperate rally, changed the whole complexion of the game, wiping out the locals' lead and Miller's long shot tying it up at 34-all.

St. Paul's were awarded a technical free throw. Thorburn making it to put the locals ahead again 35-34 but Miller tossed in another beautiful effort from centre to put Toronto out in front 37-36 with a minute to play. Then, with the crowd on its feet, Ward scored the winning effort from outside the free throw line to give St. Paul's their victory, 38-37.

Get 8 Free Ones

St. Paul's made 8 out of 17 free throws and Invictus 5 out of 20. Thorburn, March and McPherson starred in the locals' victory with Miller, J. Scott and Harrison outstanding for Parkdale's The teams:

QUAKERS WIN

Taking a 17-15 lead in the first half and then fighting off the loser's desperate rally in the dying minutes, Quakers nosed out Dominions, 35-33 and closed the half game margin St. Paul's had over them, pulling up into a first place tie with the Presbyterians in Saturday night's lone City League game at the Y.M.C.A.

It was close and fast throughout, with Quakers having a slight edge in the opening half to take a two point margin. Then, to start the second half they took a big lead, just fighting off the Dominions rally at the finish that pulled the losers within two point of deadlocking the score.

Both teams had good passing with checking close but clean, Quakers being charged with 11 fouls and Dominions but 4. The winners made 1 point from the free throw line and Dominions 7 out of 14 tries. Jakafby with 14 and Kingdon with 11 were the winners' big guns; and Weese, Wolstenholme and Csumrick lead the losers scoring. The teams:

CANADIENS DEFEAT CHICAGO WHILE BRUINS DOWN RANGERS

Bruins Take Rangers 5-3 Overtime Leafs Lose George Parsons In Holding Hawks To 1-1 Tie

By Jack Calder
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Boston Bruins need only one more victory to take the National Hockey League championship. After that, as the Bruins have discovered before, anything may happen when the other teams start devising ways and means of beating them in the play-offs.

The great Boston team stepped to the threshold last night with a typical Bruin success, coming from behind to defeat the second-place New York Rangers 5-3 in overtime before a crowd of 16,000 persons at Boston. The result left the Rangers 13 points off the pace with only seven games to play.

So before Boston's big, well-balanced machine enters the winner's enclosure, it should be recorded again that Manager Art Ross has taken a succession of chances and made good on all of them. In two years, though the process has been gradual, he has re-made half his club.

The Bruins' highest-scoring forward line was brought up from the minors to stay only last season. There isn't a more evenly paced line in the league than that one—the three Kitchener, Ont., youngsters, Milt Schmidt, Porky Dumart and Bobby Bauer.

Conacher a Find.

Ross sold two experienced stars, Leroy Goldsworthy and Art Jackson to New York Americans last fall. To replace them he brought in rookies and one of the newcomers, Roy Conacher, proved to be one of the very best youngsters ever to come straight into the league from amateur raiks.

Roy Conacher

Then Art took the biggest gamble of all. He sold his great veteran goaltender, Tiny Thompson, to Detroit, calling on another first-year player, Frank Brimsek, to replace him. Brimsek has been the goalie of the season.

No matter what the playoffs bring, Ross has done one of the hockey season's great jobs. He always will have a team so long as he has men like Eddie Shore, Bill Crowley, Dit Clapper and Cooney Weiland to build it around, but it takes something extra to pick up youngsters to complete a winning combination.

The Boston fans got a taste of what the playoffs will bring in last night's game, for there isn't a doubt the Rangers will finish second. Three times the New York team shoved ahead and each time the Bruins caught up, winning out on overtime goals by Schmidt and Conacher.

Clint Smith sent Rangers ahead in the first period and Cowley tied the score. Alex Shibick scored in the second period and again Cowley evened it. Cecil Dillon put Rangers in front again in the third and Bobby Bauer levelled the count with less than a minute to play.

Third for the Wings

One of the hottest teams in the league right now, Detroit Red Wings scored their third straight victory, a 4-2 decision over the Americans at New York that lifted them to within five points of the fourth-place Toronto Maple Leafs. Twice the Wings took leads and Americans caught up. But Detroit went ahead to stay on Ebbie Goodfellow's goal in the second period and Carl Liscombe added another in the third.

The Maple Leafs picked up only one point, during the weekend, being held to a 1-1 tie Saturday night at Toronto. Carl Dahlstrom scored for Chicago in the first period and Bob Davidson for Toronto in the third.

George Parsons

The night was disastrous for the Leafs, for George Parsons suffered an eye injury when nicked accidentally by Earl Robinson's stick that will keep him out for the season. There is a possibility the young wingman's sight may be impaired permanently.

The Hawks pull-pulled into a sixth place tie with Montreal Canadiens through the division in points, but slid right back into the cellar last night. Montreal defeated the Hawks 2-1 at Chicago on Polly Drouin's overtime goal. Joe Cooper scored for Chicago with five minutes to play and Lou trudel evened the count a minute and a half from the end of regular time.

Niagara Falls Here Tuesday

Word was received here over the weekend that Niagara Falls will play the Petes at 8.30 Tuesday in Peterborough, it being the locals' first game of the O. H. A. senior "B" final round-robin series. Waterloo was first named to play here tonight, but that game was switched to Chatham Friday at the Brock, and the Falls will be here on Tuesday night—with the Petes in Waterloo on Wednesday. With the ice tightening up last night and today rink officials believe they will have a fair sheet of ice ready for this important senior playoff, and another huge pack of fans will be on deck—probably the biggest crowd since the Big Roar bunch clashed with the Petes here last Spring in an Ontario semi-final tilt.

Puck fans of Peterborough will recall the rough Falls' squad, husky and hard-hitting, who bumped the Petes out in semi-finals a season ago, though only by one goal on the round. This team is at least as good this year, having played all winter in senior "A" ranks—and they have a couple of pro prospects, including Goalie Mowers, on Detroit's list. But the Petes have more speed than last season and know what to expect from the Cataracts now, so tomorrow's playoff should be the best of the season—a sizzling scrap before a record crowd.

MAKE RECORD PROFIT

COVENTRY, England — (CP). — Coventry City football club made a record profit of $31,020 last season from gate receipts amounting to $113,097.

Breaking Hockey Records With McGill

One of the outstanding figures on the amateur hockey scene this year is Russ McConnell, ABOVE, left wing with the McGill University team that plays in both the International Intercollegiate loop and the Quebec senior league. In two successive games not long ago, the first against Harvard, the next against Montreal U., he bagged 20 scoring points! Seven goals and three assists in the first tilt and five and five in the next made up the total. He is top scorer in the college circut for the second year in a row and in the Quebec league won the trophy awarded annually to the player voted most valuable in the league. He is on New York Rangers' negotiation list.

Norwood Squad Whips Madoc 11-4 On Round

HAVELOCK, March 6.—Taking the second game of the home-and-home series with Madoc High School, by a 6-1 count, Norwood's classy high school squad grabbed off first honors in the Bay of Quinte Division, C.O.S.S.A., and now advance into the finals with Oshawa. Winning the first encounter in Madoc, by a 5-4 count, the locals carried a one-goal margin into Saturday night's game at the Norwood arena, and won the round easily 11-4.

A good crowd was on hand to witness the game, which despite soft ice, developed into a fairly fast session of hockey. The game was cleanly fought, only two penalties being handed out, both of these in the second stanza to local players.

Bongard, Norwood netminder, playing his first season between the pipes continued to show plenty of ability in goal, practically deserving a shutout on his stand-out performance. Scoring honors for the winners were evenly divided between "Mickey" Puffer and Gill, with three goals each to their credit. Godin with three assists, and Buck with one, together with Gill made up Norwood's most potent attacking trio. The other line composed of Stevenson, Sargent and Petticrew, turned in an effective chore of checking Madoc's top-notch scorers, Kellar, Stewart, and Maylor. "Porky" Morris combined with Puffer on the defence to provide plenty of support in front of Bongard. Every member of the local lineup in fact played an important part in the Norwood victory.

Playing a great game in the Madoc goal, W. Hawthorne kept the locals from increasing their scoring average on many occasions, stopping drives at almost impossible angles. Moon, Kellar, Stewart and Maylor were most effective for the visitors, with Kellar, their centre ice ace, scoring their lone tally of the game, on a rather lucky shot in the second frame. The Madoc team were noticeably bothered by the large ice surface of the Norwood arena, particularly in the initial period.

The Game

After four minutes of close checking in the first stanza, Puffer broke loose for the first Norwood goal. Gill collected their second a couple of minutes later. Starting another rush, Puffer passed to Godin at the visitor's defence, the latter relaying it back to him at the goal mouth, where Puffer pushed it in for his second counter of the period. Gill, combining with Puffer, notched another with less than a minute remaining, to make the count 4-0 at the end of the first session.

Getting accustomed to the strange ice surface, Madoc threatened continually going into the second stanza. Kellar, Stewart and Maylor, first attacking division pressed hard around the Norwood net and only fine work by Bongard kept them off the score sheet. A penalty to Petticrew for tripping Kellar gave the visitors a one-man advantage but still they could not dent the twine. Norwood drew another penalty when Morris got the gate for tripping J. Thompson. This time Kellar grabbing the puck from the faceoff in local territory and banged it at Bongard, the shot bounding in front of the net to trickle past his stick into the cage. This was the only goal of the middle frame, which ended with the count standing 4-1 on the game and 9-5 on the round.

Gill combining with Godin and Buck notched the first counter of the third, and Puffer tallied unassisted for Norwood's sixth and last goal. The teams:

Referee—J. Watson, Madoc; R. Ennis, Norwood.

Summary:

Norwood—Puffer 8.14
Norwood—Gill (Godin) 6.16
Norwood—Puffer (Godin) 8.20
Norwood—Gill (Puffer) 8.32

Second Period

SUBSIDIZE RACING

DUBLIN — (CP). — The Government of Eire is subsidizing racing this year by allocating $47,100 to stake money so the aggregate will not fall below last year's level of $391,832.

Hockey Fight Ends When Two Players Find They're Cousins

BRANTFORD, Ont., March 6. — (CP).—Jack Haley of the Jerseyville team and Frank O'Donnel of the Renton team, were playing hockey at Linden, Wentworth county. Referee Murray Connamon, Brantford, sent both men off for fighting in the third period. They were no sooner on the ice than they started wielding their fists again. They were sent to the cooler for five minutes. This time blows led to words, the pair finding out they were cousins. This settled the feud.

Senior Cagers In 3-Way Tie For Top Honors

TORONTO, March 6 (CP)—Unique in intercollegiate senior basketball, a three-way tie exists today for the league's top rung and Canadian Intercollegiate Union officials are expected to make a ruling shortly regarding a playoff series for the title.

It's all the fault of McGill University Redmen that the precedent was set. They upset University of Toronto 39-33 here Saturday night after pulling another surprise by edging out University of Western Ontario 42-51 at London Friday.

Final standing of the series shows that each of the three teams has won four and lost two games for eight points. Queen's University, the other team in the circuit, lost all its six games.

No one gave the Montreal Redmen much chance of even one victory on their two-game road trip, especially since they'd lost to both teams right in Montreal. But the McGill men ran up a 12-0 lead against the Toronto Collegians in the first eight minutes of play and never were headed. They led 21-14 at half time.

A Toronto rally cut the margin to three points late in the last quarter but they could get no closer and McGill increased the difference in the last few minutes. Sandy Sandberg, flashy guard, led McGill marksmen with 12 points, Moose Rogin, a former Windsor Assumption College star, led the Toronto team with 11 points.

Kayak II Heads Whichcee

LOS ANGELES, March 6—(AP).—To the turf world today, Kayak II loomed as a new nominee for the honor of being the United States 1939 handicap champion.

The big brown Argentine thoroughbred that went in to pinch-hit for Seabiscuit and the Charles S. Howard stable Saturday at Santa Anita Park, convinced 65,000 wild-cheering spectators that he is all horse. He covered the 1¼ mile $100,000 Santa Anita handicap in 2:01 and two-fifths seconds and won by a length and a half under the calm riding of Johnny Adams. He cut one-fifth second off the mark hung up by last year's victor, Stagehand, unsuccessful in the Widener cup race in Florida Saturday.

It was simple, the way Kayak won. He went up to the pace past the stands the first time and held to fourth place behind Specify, Whichcee and Main Man down the back stretch. Once into the home stretch he got the rein and went out from away from there.

MIAMI Fla., March 6——(AP).—Tropical Park race track, improved some $50,000 worth since the first half of its split season, today takes over the sport in Florida, which ended at Hialeah Saturday.

A good race marked Hialeah's closing and the 21,000 spectators, who poured $144,349 through the till on the day's classic. the $50,000 Widener Cup race, could only concede they put too much faith in the favorite, Maxwell Howard's Stagehand, and not enough on the winner, Bull Lea.

Bull Lea came around the turn like an express train, got the pack behind him and kept it there all the way in, thundering across the finish line three lengths ahead. He paid $15.50 straight, $4 place and $2.20 to show.

Spectators were stunned as they saw Stagehand, considered as sure a bet as ever a horse race offered, lag behind to the turn and then romp past the also-rans to finish third. Sir Damion came in second.

Winning the Widener was worth $46,450 to Bull Lea's owner, Warran Wright, and brought the horse's total earnings to $94,825.

Michigan-Ontario League Studies Plan To Eliminate Play-offs

DETROIT, March 6.—(CP)—Governors of the Michigan Ontario Amateur Hockey League are considering a proposal to eliminate play-offs in the future, League President Fred Haner said today.

Haner's plan, patterned after the Eastern Amateur League procedure would lengthen the regular playing season to give each team 20 games instead of 15. At the end of the first half of the season, the team on top would be declared champion for the second half. The team having the most points in both halves at the end of the season would be the champion and given the Judge Joseph A. Moynihan Trophy without a playoff. Each half season champion would receive a special trophy.

Haner said sentiment is evenly divided in the plan, which will be discussed at the next meeting of the board of governors.

"London is a good example of the unfairness of the present system," Haner said. "The Mohawks started out by losing 10 games in a row, and were eliminated almost before the season got under way. Yet many people feel that on the basis of their strong playing during the latter part of the season, they deserved a place in the playoffs. There is little doubt they would have been strong contenders for the championship had they been able to make the playoffs.

"Under this new plan a club that starts poorly would have more incentive to keep building and improving to make a bid for the championship of the second half of the season."

"Another drawback the plan would abolish is the uncertainty of the places and dates of playoff games. For instance, we didn't know until Friday night when Windsor eliminated Stratford whether to plan for the start of the final round at Olympia Monday. It would give us a definite beginning and ending to the season."

IN MEMORIAM

HARRISON.—In loving memory of my dear husband, Wilbert Stuart Harrison, who died March 5, 1937.

We watched him suffer day by day,
It caused us bitter grief
To see him slowly pine away
And could not give relief.
His weary hours and days of pain,
His troubled nights are passed;
And in our aching hearts we know
He has found sweet rest at last.
So deep in my heart lies a picture
Of that loved one laid to rest,
And in memory's frame I shall keep it,
Because he was one of the best.

Havelock School Finds Fourth Teacher A Boon

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HAVELOCK, March 6. —Since a fourth year teacher was added to the Havelock High school staff, the first of this year, there has been a decided improvement in the school, according to Principal R. W. Goheen in his remarks to the Board at their meeting on Thursday evening. Mr. Goheen said that the work was progressing much better and that the new assistant, Mrs. Smythe, was proving a capable teacher. Present for the meeting were Trustees Rigby and Denike, with Chairman Lancaster presiding.

Mr. Goheen in his report also informed the Board that Dr. C. V. Wallace, local dentist, would cooperate with them in the matter of free dental work to students unable to afford same, a 30 p.c. grant being provided now by the Department of Health.

Secretary-Treasurer E. Fennell reported that due to the requirements of the department reports, the present system of handling the accounts between the public and high school boards would prove quite cumbersome. On motion of Trustees Denike and Rigby he was authorized to revert to the system adopted during the past year.

The Board in a motion expressed a wish that the public be informed that the liability insurance carried by the school only covers the negligence of the Board regarding the equipment and accommodations, and not in the general sense of the term liability insurance. Unless the Board are directly responsible due to lack of proper equipment or accommodations no claim will be recognized by the insurance company, such as in some recent minor injuries to students.

On motion of Trustees Rigby and Denike a cheque was issued to the high school literary society, for the sum of $15.25, and charged to auxiliary agencies.

The treasurer submitted the general statement regarding the requisition to the county council. The requisition for the tuition costs of two Havelock students attending Norwood high school last term was received and a cheque issued for the sum of $75.55.

The accounts as read were ordered paid on motion of Trustees Rigby and Denike, and the meeting adjourned to Thursday, April 7.

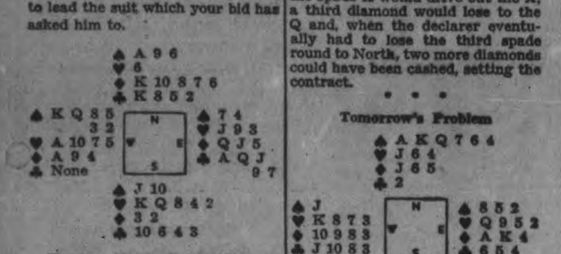
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER
By SHEPARD BARCLAY
"The Authority on Authorities"

LEAD-DIRECTING BIDS

ONE REASON FOR injecting a suit bid over the opponent's original call is to direct a lead of that suit as the most promising defense, especially if the other fellows get into a no trump contract. In that event, your bid should act as almost an absolute command to your partner unless he happens to have a pretty good suit of his own, plus some sort of side entry, or else has only a singleton of yours. Since this combination seldom prevails, you can usually count on a good partner to lead the suit which your bid has asked him to.



(Dealer: North. Both sides vulnerable.)

Bidding on this deal began with West's fourth-hand 1-Spade. North then inserted 2-Diamonds, East bid 2-No trump, West 3-Spades and East 3-No trump. South led his heart 4, East winning with the 9 and returning a spade to the J, K and A. The club 2 came back to the Q, then the spade Q was won and a small spade lost to North. The second club return was won by the J, the diamond Q sent through to the K, the diamond J took the returned lead and East claimed the rest, making 3-No trump plus an overtrick.

South, with no side entries to help bring in his heart suit, and as many as two of his partner's diamonds, should have obeyed orders and led his diamond 3. The K would have won, and the repeated diamond would probably have been allowed to run to the A. By normal play then the spade K would drive out the A, a third diamond would lose to the Q and, when the declarer eventually had to lose the third spade round to North, two more diamonds could have been cashed, setting the contract.

Pinched By Taxes Duke Gives Up 200-Room House

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE, England, March 6—(CP Cable).—The wealthy Duke of Northumberland, one of the largest land owners in England and the largest single owner of coal royalties in Northern England, is temporarily abandoning 200-roomed Alnwick Castle for the less costly 20-roomed Lesbury house nearby.

Death duties estimated at £1,000,000 ($4,690,000), which the estate must meet within a 12-year period, heavy taxes, and depreciation of coal royalties resulted in the decision.

The Duke, head of the House of Percy, is 26 and a bachelor. He succeeded his father as ninth Duke in 1930.

He said he was reluctant to move from the castle, which has been the family seat for more than six centuries. Whereas the castle required a staff of 100, his new home needs only eight. A permanent staff will be maintained at the castle, however, to aid in watching its famous treasures and relics when the "Windsor of the North" is open to the public.

The Duke controls a £2,000,000 estate firm and gets about £69,000 annualy from his coal royalties.

Papal Secretary Likely Maglione

VATICAN CITY, March 6 (AP).—Pope Pius XII, assumed the regular routine of administering the multiple affairs of the Holy Roman Church today.

The day was taken up with conferences with members of the Hierarchy as His Holiness delved into problems left in suspense during the Holy See's three-week interregnum.

The change of regime involved fewer readjustments than usual, however, because Pius XII. had been his predecessor's closest collaborator and because, during the interval after the death of Pius XI., the former Secretary of State was Camerlengo, or principal administrator of Church affairs.

His Holiness reappointed the aged Monsignor Mella Di Santelia as Papal Chamberlain. It was believed widely that Luigi Cardinal Maglione, former Nuncio to France, would be named Secretary of State.

The Pontiff rewarded the 120 Swiss guards with double pay for the 18 days of the interregnum before the Papal conclave during which they were responsible for his safety.

Fourteen young clerks in Sydney, Australia, have completed a new home for an unemployed man and his family, doing the work every Saturday afternoon for two months.

Potatoes Quoted At $1.40 A Bag On Farmers' Market Butter Is Scarce At 25 Cents

Larger attendance at the local market Saturday morning carried its own story of the long and partly successful battle farmers of the district had last week in clearing out blocked-up side roads. Many of the roads, attendants at the market reported, were still in bad shape and one Campbellcroft man stated that for two weeks he had left his truck out on the highway, using a sleigh to get his goods out from the farm to the trunk road where the load was transferred to the motor vehicle.

A feature of the basket market was the abundance of eggs offered for sale with 25 cents as the prevailing price and a few women asking a cent lower. Butter was about as scarce as eggs were plentiful, with 25 cents a pound the standard price, although The Examiner found one vendor who was selling her butter for 23 cents.

Chickens 25 Cents A Pound.

"Those are last June's chickens and they weigh 8 or 9 pounds" one woman said smilingly when asked for price quotations. "I am getting 25 cents a pound and they are worth it. We have been feeding them a long time and now they are called on to pay their board. One customer just paid me $2.25 for one bird." Hens were going at from 20 to 23 cents a pound but there was not a great deal of poultry in sight anywhere.

On the outside market the turnout was considerably larger than for the two previous Saturday's. Potatoes were in good quantity and R. Kinsman of Campbellcroft who claimed that the loam in that district was ideal soil for potatoes and gave them a fine flavor was asking $1.40 a bag for White Winter potatoes and 90 cents for No. 1 small. He had White Stars that were selling a 30c a peck and another farm displayed the same variety at $1.35 a bag. A Colborne woman said her apples were selling fast. She had Spies at from 60c to $1.50 a hamper and Starks at a dollar a hamper.

Vegetable Prices.

One of the regular vendors obligingly quoted vegetable prices for the benefit of the reporter. He had onions at 25 cents for a six quart basket, carrots were 15 cents, and cabbages and turnips selling at 5 cents each or three for 10 cents. Golden-eye beans were two quarts for a quarter. Some vendors were selling pork at 13 and 15 cents and others were asking 14c and 16c. Good-looking beef was offered at 11c to 13c and one man had beef liver that was selling at 8c a pound. Incidentally he reported that he had as much trouble on city streets as he had in getting into town. "I was delivering a peck of apples this morning", he confided and I got stuck in the snow on one of your city streets and was there an hour".

Seven or eight loads of wood were on display, $5 a load being asked by several vendors for mixed maple and beech. Hanging from the end of one wood truck was a big jack rabbit and the driver of the outfit said the long-earned animal was for sale.

"There's nine pounds of meat for 50c", he declared.

Apsley Institute Is Planning Play

(Examiner Correspondence.)

APSLEY, March 6 — The March meeting of the Apsley Women's Institute was held at the home of the president, Mrs. W. Wilson, on Saturday evening. The president presided with sixteen members present. The roll call was answered by naming an Irish song.

Plans were laid for a social evening to be held at Mrs. J. Wallbridge's home on March 24th, also a play entitled "The Old Famly Album," to be held sometime in April. The losers in the membership contest have invited the winners to an April fool party on April 1st.

After the business period, Mrs. Wellington Lean, convener for legislation, introduced the speaker, Mr. McKerchar, manager of the Royal Bank at Lakefield. Mr. McKerchar gave a very interesting talk on the different phase s of banking and answered many questions.

A motion of thanks to the speaker was moved by Mrs. W. Wilson, seconded by Mrs. J. Downing. A contest was then conducted by one of the members and won by Mrs. (Rev.) R. McMullen. The meeting closed with singing the National Anthem, after which Mrs. Wilson served lunch and the usual social hour was enjoyed.

Switch From Wheat To Livestock Pictured "Danger"

Toronto, March 6 (CP)

G. R. BICKERTON, president of the United Farms of Canada (Saskatchewan section) warned yesterday that any "quick, drastic switch" in Western Canada from wheat production to livestock raising and dairying would constitute a "grave danger" to the Dominion's national economy.

Such a movement now is under way, Mr. Bickerton said in an interview in which he advised eastern Canadian farmers "in the interest of self-preservation" to urge the federal government to assist western agriculture. Any change to mixed farming in the west must be made "sanely," after "we find out where we stand."

Guard Tightened On Child Killer

SUNBURY, Pa., March 6—(AP)—A police guard was tightened today around a jail where a 22-year-old former brickyard worker is held on charges of beating to death two-year-old Mariam Wolf.

As arrangements went forward for the baby's burial, Corporal Richard Grey of the State Police said he would place a murder charge against Paul W. Barrick, whom Gray described as a "jealous" suitor of the child's mother."

The corporal quoted Barrick as saying he beat Mariam "at least 50 times" and branded her with a stove-lid lifter "because I was jealous of her father."

The baby—called "Rosebud," because she was so tiny at birth—died yesterday. She had been unconscious five days.

Norwood Institute To Sponsor Show

NORWOOD, March 6.—The Women's Institute met at the home of Mrs. A. Gill for their March meeting with an attendance of 14 members and two visitors.

The meeting opened with the singing of the Ode, followed by repeating the Lord's Prayer. The president, Mrs. A. Innes took the chair during the business. The members reported that 22 sick calls had been made since the last meeting. Several letters of appreciation were read from members receiving fruit. A letter regarding a Minstrel Show, sponsored by the Scout Troop in Peterborough was read, and it was decided to present it the latter part of March. The treasurer's report was given by Miss M. Buck. The April meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Wm. Hubble, with Mrs. R. Longhurst as convenor. The roll call is to be the exchange of flower seeds and slips.

Mrs. Wright, the convenor then took over the program. It opened with community singing, after which Mrs. Earl Cuthbertson gave an instrumental. Mrs. R. E. Lemon gave a talk on "The Institute motto for Home and Country," which was very interesting and enjoyed by all the members. (Mrs. Lemon had previously given this talk to a group of ladies in Belmont Township and had been asked to give the same talk to the local Women's Institute.)

The meeting closed with "God Save the King" after which a dainty lunch was served by the hostesses, Mrs. Gill, Mrs. Innes, Mrs. J. O'Brien and Mrs. W. Simpson. A vote of thanks was tendered to Mrs. Gill who so willingly opened her home for the occasion.

German Newspaper Declares New Pope Never Shepherd Of Souls, But Diplomat

BERLIN, March 6 (CP-Havas).—The Danziger Vorposten today asserted that in the choice of a new pope the Roman Catholic church has shifted emphasis from the salvation of souls to Vatican influence in international politics. Breaking the reserve which the German press generally has observed since Eugenio Cardinal Pacelli was elected Pope, the Danzig newspaper said:—

"With Pius XII it is not a 'pastor angelichus' who sits on the pontifical throne. The new pope guarantees by his personality that the Vatican policy practised under Pope Pius XI, and for which the present Pius XII might already in recent years have been held indirectly responsible, will be continued.

"Pacelli was never a shepherd of souls, a priest in the pulpit. For nearly 40 years he was a diplomat, a politician of the world politics of the Vatican. Thus the position which the Catholic Church now wishes to take is clearly defined: what is placed first is no longer the church as a house of God, but the throne of the pope.

"It is not longe salvation of the souls of the faithful, members of the Roman Catholic Church, but the influence of the Vatican policy upon the policies of peoples, it is no longer the internal life of the parishes but the internal unfolding of the diplomatic power of the Vatican, which have become dominant."

Herman Goes On Trial Theft Count

A shrinkage in stock values amounting to $1,296 was found after insurance adjusters completed their investigation and inventories in the Pattenick Department Store following the fire on December 12th last, was the evidence given today as Robert Nathan Herman, former manager of the store, went on trial on a charge of theft.

The trial is being held in the court house before Judge J. A. McGibbon of Lindsay at a special non-jury sitting of the Criminal Court. V. J. McEldery, K.C. is representing the Crown and E. N. Singer of Toronto assisted by H. S. Balfour of the law firm of Hall and Carley is counsel for Herman.

Herman had been first charged with arson but was acquitted and then faced the charge of theft. He had been previously arraigned and had elected trial before a judge without a jury and had pleaded not guilty.

Independent Inventory

C. H. Griffiths, fire insurance adjuster of Toronto, who adjusted the loss following a fire was the first witness. He had been called by the owner, Mr. Pattenick, to make an independent detailed inventory of the stock. He explained the method used in making the inventory and seven people assisted him.

E. L. Singer, counsel for the defence, subjected Griffiths to considerable questioning tending to show that witness had been found to take figures from the assistants which went into the final inventory. Griffiths admitted an estimated loss figure of $600 based on the space occupied, the goods contained as described by the assistant manager, Mr. Pattenick and other employees.

"Why didn't you ask Herman?"

"He wasn't available, he was in the chief's office, so I obtained the information on the class of merchandise which had occupied the space from the assistant manager," replied Griffiths.

Half Stock Lost

What was the total damage from fire, water and smoke.

"So the damage was quite severe, almost half the total stock."

Yes, it was. The inventory as taken showed basement stock estimated at $2,998.54 plus a $600 loss of goods burned out of sight. The main floor inventory was $17,326.10 giving a total stock inventory of $20,924.64.

"How long was Herman there.

I'm sorry I can't give you an accurate answer Mr. Singer. He was there quite a bit of the time, gave

Gas Or Licenses Tax Puzzle

TORONTO, March 7 (CP).—How and to what extent Ontario motorists might be taxed to provide additional revenue for highway purposes was an important issue today on the eve of the opening of the second session of the 20th Legislature.

(The Toronto Globe and Mail says in a news story today that a two-cent boost in the present six-cent gasoline tax is among the government's legislative proposals. Queen's Park speculation foresees as an alternative an increase in automobile license fees.

(Delegates to the 32nd annual conference of the Ontario Motor League agreed yesterday that Ontario motorists cannot afford an increase in the gasoline tax as was suggested by the Chevrier Royal Commission which investigated Provincial highway problems. The delegates admitted, however, that more revenue is needed if the province is to continue its road-building program).

Premier Hepburn's Cabinet is scheduled to meet to put the finishing touches on the Throne speech which Lieutenant-Governor Albert Matthews will read tomorrow. The session is expected to last about two months, but it may not be formally prorogued until May 22 when, it is hoped, the King will officiate in

Kingsville's German Club Ordered To Quit Town's Hall–Branded Nazi Propagandists

KINGSVILLE, Ont., March 7. (CP).—Kingsville's German club was under orders to-day to move from the town-owned Allen Hall after charges at a council meeting the club was a Nazi propaganda centre. The Allen Club rooms were turned over to the Kingsville branch of the Canadian Legion at a slightly higher rental.

Councillor Walter Gardener told the meeting last night residents of nearby Harrow and Amherstburg planned last summer to raid the club.

"Police Chief Babcock told me that he heard the residents of Amherstburg and Harrow were going to come down to Kingsville and raid the club because the town is becoming a breeding place for propaganda," said Gardener. "He said it was the headquarters for the county.

"I have heard a lot of rumors about the club, people have told me all about the German propaganda being handed out up there, but I can't prove it. I don't know whether it is true."

ANSONVILLE, Ont., Mar. 7 — (CP). — Dr. E. J. Clouthier, Medical Officer of Health, said to-day five cases of scurvy have been discovered here. He said the disease was the "direct result of starvation and deprivation of the essential foods." Ansonville is three miles south of Iroquois Falls.

Dr. Clouthier said one case has advanced to a stage which necessitates hospital treatment. Vigilance to prevent spread of the disease, rare in civilized countries, is being exercised by the physician, who also is conducting an investigation into the cause of the outbreak.

The disease is caused by a lack of vegetables and fruits in the daily diet. It was said many residents of the village who are employed at the paper mills in Iroquois Falls are working only part time and are unable to purchase these essential foods.

The municipality is in the Township of Calvert, under control of the Provincial Government. It was said the township had sought to obtain increased relief quotas for welfare recipients which would enable the impoverished residents to obtain the necessary vitamins, but that such requests had been so frequent recently it was impossible to expect further aid.

Village authorities said the situation was made more serious by the fact that many residents were insufficiently clad and that during the first two months of this winter sub-zero weather prevailed. Some householders were said to lack sufficient fuel in their homes to withstand the cold weather.

Showgoers 'Let Down' Police Nip Seat Bolt-Pincher

Milwaukee, March 7. (A.P.).

Then, in the Princess Theatre there was a squek as a rusty bolt was turned. The law rushed in and got its man. In his residence they found about a bushel of nuts, bolts, screws and washers. He had a mania for them, tlfe man said. Puzzled police bolted him behind the bars.

Madrid Revolt Is Nipped

MADRID, March 7—(AP).—Warplanes were used over Madrid by General Jose Miaja's new republican defence government to-day in an effort to crush an uprising of "some troops" said to have been inspired by Communists.

Earlier pronouncements by General Miaja and his Defence Minister, General Segismundo Casado, said that the revolt—an apparent attempt to force continuation of the civil war as opposed to Miaja's expressed desire for a "worthy peace" —was under control.

It was subsequently reported that Communists holding out in a building on the site of an old race track on Madrid's outskirts, had surrendered but that companion forces still were in possession of a few other buildings elsewhere.

The revolt developed among troops in the environs of Madrid. In the early morning there was cannon and machine-gun fire in outlying sections and isolated snipers kept up an intermittent fire within the city proper.

Miaja last night became head of the National Defence Government which succeeded that of ousted Premier Jpan Negrin. Communists were excluded from the regime.

Gandhi Victor Ends His Fast

RAJKOT, India, Mar. 7 — (AP).—Dispute between Mohandas K. Gandhi and the native ruler of Rajkot —a quarrel which caused Gandhi to start a "fast unto death"—was settled to-day. Immediately Gandhi ended his fast of 98 hours and 25 minutes. He drank a glass of sweet orange juice. The nourishment was the first since he started the fast just over four days ago after drinking a cup of hot goat's milk.

Intervention by the Viceroy, the Marquess of Linlithgow, brought an accord between the Nationalist leader and the 29-year-old Thakore Saheb Shri Dharmendrasinhji, whom Gandhi called "My son."

Gandhi voluntarily ended the long fast, which his doctors said was endangering his life, after receiving a letter from Thakore Saheb.

The letter was handed to the ascetic leader by a chauffeur sent by E. C. Gibson, British resident in the States of Western Indian.

Gandhi opened the letter, smiled weakly, and turning to his attendants, accepted the glass of orange juice which he began sipping slowly.

The British Viceroy and Gandhi's secretary, Mahadev Desai, had carried on one side of the negotiations, while Gandhi himself dealt with Gibson who was acting for the Rajkot ruler.

Gandhi had spent a restless night, much of the time being prevented by nausea from drinking water.

He was rejoined yesterday by his wife, who was released from jail despite rejection of a previous offer of freedom.

She had been in jail since February 3 with others arrested for a civil disobedience campaign.

Details of the messages which Gandhi and Lord Linlithgow exchanged were not made public.

Halifax Fire Threat Is Revealed

HALIFAX, March 7 (CP)—A hotel fireman dismissed the night before the disastrous Queen Hotel fire last week told him "there'll be a lot more than me out of a job tomorrow," John Desmond, acting manager, told a fire marshal's investigation today.

Desmond, who said he dismissed the man for drinking, quoted the fireman as saying: "If I'm out of a job, there'll be a lot more than me out of a job tomorrow." He said the fireman's name was Bouffard.

Then the hotel official leaned over and whispered to the inquiry stenographer the remainder of Bouffard's remarks, made a few hours before fire swept through the hotel and claimed at least 28 lives.

Man Had Been Drinking.

He "noticed" the man had been drinking, Desmond testified, and dismissed him with three weeks' notice.

A small blaze, extinguished without difficulty, preceded the major fire, Desmond told the inquiry, held under Nova Scotias Fire Prevention Act. As the investigation opened Major John A. Rutland, fire marshal, asked that other hotel employees be excluded while Desmond testified.

Much of Desmond's testimony dealt with a description of the basement and location of the furnace room. In reply to a question, he said he once had smelled gas on an upper floor but never noticed any coal gas odor in the basement.

Desmond, who said he inspected the furnace room about twice a week, testified no rubbish or combustible material was left in rooms near the furnace room.

SIR JOSEPH WESLEY FLAVELLE, BART.

TORONTO, March 7—(CP).—Sir Joseph Flavelle, noted Toronto financier, died suddenly in Palm Beach, Fla., this morning, it was learned here. He was 81.

It was understood Sir Joseph suffered a heart seizure. Sir Joseph had been ill for three days, it was learned, but his health previously had been good. Only last week he informed members of his staff here he was enjoying golf in the southern holiday resort and his death was unexpected.

Joseph Ellsworth Flavelle, only son of the financier, left here today to bring the body back to Toronto. Other survivors are two daughters, Mrs. Wallace Barrett and Mrs. F. Y. McEachren, both of Toronto. Lady Flavelle died in 1932.

Sir Joseph, prominent in public life as well as in commercial and financial affairs, was widely known in Great Britain as well as in Canada. During the Great War he rendered distinguished service to the Allied cause as chairman of the imperial munitions board. A baronetcy was conferred upon him in 1917 in recognition of his work on the board.

Headed C.N.R. Board

At the time the Dominion Government took over the Grand Trunk Railway as part of the Canadian National Railways, Sir Joseph was appointed chairman of the C.N.R. Board. The appointment was a tribute to his great organizing abilities.

Born in Peterborough, the financier was educated in the public schools of that city. He became a resident of Toronto in 1887.

Sir Joseph was identified prominently with many concerns—packing companies, banks, trust companies and a department store. His interests even extended to the newspaper field and between 1903 and 1910 was proprietor of the old Toronto News. A former chairman of the board, Canadian Bank of Commerce, at the time of his death he was chairman of the board, National Trust Company.

He also was connected with many public organizations, among them the British Red Cross Society and the Victoria Order of Nurses. As a governor of the University of Toronto, he headed a royal commission which in 1906 was appointed to recommend a plan of university reorganization.

CALLANDER, Ont., March 7 (CP).—Oliva Dionne, father of the quintuplets, said today he was not favorable to a proposal that the children be taken to Toronto in May to be presented to the King and Queen.

"We are anxious that they should be presented to the King and Queen when they come to Canada, but I cannot see why the government cannot arrange to have Their Majesties visit the nursery here," said Dionne.

The father of the quints spoke after reading an invitation addressed to him by Provincial Secretary Nixon of Ontario, ofefring to convey the five girls and their parents to Toronto by special train for a meeting May 22 with the royal couple.

"I am not in favor of it," he said. Dionne added, however, that he would not reply to the letter until he had consulted his wife.

Two other members of the quints' board of guardians, Judge J. A. Valin and Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, said they had not been formally advised of the invitation. It was believed the invitation would be given consideration by the entire board, whose fourth member is Percy D. Wilson, official guardian for Ontario.

Dafoe Says Little.

Dr. Dafoe declined to express an opinion on the advisability of moving the Quints from Callander. He added:

"If the Ontario Government says we must allow the Quints to be taken to Toronto, what can we do?"

Dr. Dafoe, who several times has opposed suggestions that his nearly five-year-old charges be taken from Callander for public appearances, said in this case the final decision rested with Dionne.

Should the father of the Quints oppose the Toronto trip, the doctor said there was nothing the board of governors could do about it.

After his daily visit to the Quints, Dr. Dafoe left for North Bay to confer with Judge Valin who earlier had said there was no basis for reports that the Nixon invitation would be accepted.

Dr. Dafoe said he had a conference Saturday at Toronto with Premier Hepburn, provincial secretary and the official guardian but that only th health of the Quints was discussed. There was no mention of the invitation.

Disunity Is Rife In Canada Ratepayers Told

"Disunity is rife across Canada!"

"We are living in dangerous times!"

These were storm warnings flung out last night by Captain W. C. C. Innes, managing director of the Taxpayers' Association of Canada, in the course of a brilliant address in the Legion hall that was sponsored by the North Monaghan Suburban Area Ratepayers' Association.

At the conclusion of his address, Captain Innes extended to the North Monaghan group an invitation to join the national organization. Ideals of the T.A.C., he said, were the same as those of the local association only on a national rather than a municipal scale. The T.A.C. is striving for a membership of at least 250,000 member taxpayers and has as its aim the bringing of "decent pressure" to bear on governments in order that Canadian may live a happier life.

Captain Innes scored duplication of services by provincial and federal governments, and forecast the day when provinces would deal only with local matters, "when their wings will be clipped."

Canadian taxpayers are paying out untold millions to provincial governments because of scores of duplications, he said, citing health measures, labor control, agricultural supervision, as a few examples. "You can hardly mention a single service that is being carried on by the Dominion that is not being duplicated by the province," he said. "National unity has been destroyed and you have the provinces at the throat of the Dominion government and the Dominion government at the throats of the provinces. Disunity is rife across Canada."

While he believed strongly in social legislation, he said "I have the biggest quarrel with our social legislation because it is not federal. Social legislation must be for the good of all the people in Canada, and it must be uniform if it is to be that." Yet, in fact, each province legislates its

Mother Smothers Crying Baby

MAHANOY CITY, Pa., March 7—(AP).—A 32-year-old mother quoted by state police as saying she smothered her three-year-old son because he "cried too much" was held on a murder charge today in Pennsylvania's second baby-slaying case in a week.

Police Corporal C. D. Boyle testified at a hearing last night that Mrs. Gus Edinger related she clamped her hand over the baby's nose and mouth as he lay in bed with her and another child early last Saturday.

Boyle quoted Mrs. Edinger as saying the baby disturbed her three other children with its crying and was "a nuisance." The mother, wife of a relief project worker, pleaded not guilty to the murder charge and was lodged in jail.

Meanwhile, not so many miles away at Mifflintown, another mother, Helen Wolf, was held on charge of being an accessory after the fact in the death of her two-year-old daughter, who the state charges was beaten to death.

Paul Barrick, 22, described by state police Corporal Richard Gray as the Wolf woman's suitor, has pleaded guilty to a charge of slaying the child. Gray quoted him as say he beat her "at least 50 times" because "I was jealous of her father."

$4,000 Tax Theft Is Confessed

DETROIT, March 7. —(C. P.) — Kellog Sherwood, 49, confessed today he was guilty of stealing more than $4,000 worth of county funds, according to a police statement.

In a confident, almost flippant tone, Sherwood, father of one daughter, told how he had ordered a counterfeit "paid" stamp made and how he had used this stamp to mark as paid, tax bills from which he stole.

He explained that he would accept a cheque in payment of taxes, give the taxpayer a receipt but destroy the duplicate receipt. He put the cheque in the drawer and took the cash equivalent from other funds he had collected, he said.

He was charged specifically with having taken $3,246 from one tax payment on December 30, 1937, and $1,300 in December 1938. These were his only thefts, Sherwood said, but authorities are continuing a complete audit.

Sherwood said that he took the money to invest in Mexican Oil lands, believing that he would be able to replace the money when the deal matured.

His hopes were blasted when the Mexican government expropriated American and British Oil holdings, Sherwood said.

CHICAGO, March 7.—(CP).—The weight of a fearful secret he kept for 21 years was lifted from Reynhold Faust to-day when he announced in Felony Court a deep love for his adopted country against whose peace he plotted in the Great War days.

Faust, an immigrant from Germany in 1880, was seized Saturday after four home made bombs were found in a safe deposit box he rented since November, 1917. Charges of storing explosives in a business district was not pressed after Faust told his story to Judge Mathew Hartigan. The Nol Prose left him a free man.

Now 74 years old and changed of heart, Faust admitted his original intention was to place the bombs at patriotic meetings to demonstarte against the United States war against Germany.

Morris Meyers, Assistant State's Attorney, quoted him as saying he had never meant to harm anyone, anyone.

The gaunt old man cleared up some mystery of the case in an interview before court. He admitted — for the first time he said—that it was he who placed a phosphorescent bomb in the auditorium theatre the night of Nov. 17, 1917, as a brilliant audience attended the opera. "At that time I was dissatisfied with the world and with my pot. Then there was the rich man-poor man question, but the war changed things."

Meyer related the strange story told by Faust as follows:

In 1917 he made the bombs with the intention of launching a campaign of terrorism. He was embittered over loss of his postal job and the United States' decision to fight his native Germany.

In 1918 he was sentenced to the Illinois penitentiary on a charge of attempted extortion. He threw away the keys to the box. On his release 14 months later he wanted to withdraw the bombs and destroy them but dared not ask the company to dril lopen the box.

He decided to guard his secret until death by paying $10 a year rental for the box. Two weeks ago he received notice that the company intended to move; that boxholders would have to remove their possession or forfeit them.

"I was wrong." Meyer quoted the man. "I am sorry now. I have paid the debt. For more than 20 years I have suffered night and day over this thing."

Japan is inviting groups of editors, business men and others in Latin-American countries to visit Japan, all expenses paid.

Owner Watches Gunmen Slug, Rob Employee Of $13

Windsor, March 7. (C. P.).

TWO masked bandits early today held up the Javaland Lunch here and escaped with $13 after beating the waiter, Don Renaud, 19, over the head with a gun.

British Car Robbed Of Military Papers

LONDON, Mar. 7 — (CP-Havas). —Theft of important military documents from an automobile was announced to-day. The owner of the automobile, whose identity was not revealed, said the papers and the brief case holding them were taken last night while the car was parked in Cavendish Square. The case bore the initials "L.S."

As valises which were placed with the brief case in the rear seat of the car were not taken, and because of the shortness of the time in which the papers were unguarded, it was assumed they were taken by persons watching for an opportunity to obtain them.

ALL workers in Italian private industry and commerce today were given wage increases ranging from five to 10 per cent to meet higher living costs. The increases were agreed upon by Fascist employers and workers' syndicates under the auspices of the Minister of Corporations.

The steadily mounting cost of living in Italy is attributed by Italians generally to the Fascist economic self-sufficiency program and Italian military expenditures, including those for sending troops to Spain.

Il Duce's Press Demands France Surrender Spanish Fleet To Franco "At Once"

ROME, March 7. —(A. P.). —The Fascist editor Virginio Gayda called on France today to turn over to General Franco "without delay" the Spanish republican fleet which has sought refuge at Bizerte, Tunisia.

Gayda, usually regarded as a spokesman for Premier Mussolini, declared Italy "would not tolerate the continued presence of the fleet at a point so near Italian shores. (Bizerte is 15 miles from Sicily).

(Eleven Spanish Republican vessels, escorted by a French cruiser and a squadron of destroyers, anchored off the French North African naval base, awaiting authorization to enter Bizerte. They left the naval base of Cartagena over the week-end and were said to be carrying several thousand refugees).

"It (the fleet) must be speedily disarmed and speedily restored to the Government of Franco," Gayda wrote in the newspaper Il Giornale D'Italia.

Man Who Helped In Execution Of Old Hermit Picks Firing Squad Death For Self

SALT LAKE CITY, March 7.—(AP).—A firing squad will be assembled here next month to execute 54-year-old George Hayes, who expected to be hanged for murder but chose to be shot.

Hayes was convicted at nearby Tooele of participation in the fantastic "execution slaying" of Sherman Cadwell, 71-year-old trapper hermit, who was strapped into a tilted-back chair, hooded and gagged and then shot.

At the trial Sheriff Alma White of Tooele county testified that Hayes had requested, "When I swing will you tie my ankles so I won't kick around and make a noise like a frog?"

But when District Judge Oscar W. McConkie asked the partially deaf defendant yesterday to choose between bullets and the gallows, Hayes replied: "I'll take the squad."

Herman Goes On Trial Theft Count

A shrinkage in stock values amounting to $1,296 was found after insurance adjusters completed their investigation and inventories in the Pattenick Department Store following the fire on December 12th last, was the evidence given today as Robert Nathan Herman, former manager of the store, went on trial on a charge of theft.

The trial is being held in the court house before Judge J. A. McGibbon of Lindsay at a special non-jury sitting of the Criminal Court. V. J. McEldery, K.C. is representing the Crown and E. N. Singer of Toronto assisted by H. S. Balfour of the law firm of Hall and Carley is counsel for Herman.

Herman had been first charged with arson but was acquitted and then faced the charge of theft. He had been previously arraigned and had elected trial before a judge without a jury and had pleaded not guilty.

Independent Inventory

C. H. Griffiths, fire insurance adjuster of Toronto, who adjusted the loss following a fire was the first witness. He had been called by the owner, Mr. Pattenick, to make an independent detailed inventory of the stock. He explained the method used in making the inventory and seven people assisted him.

E. L. Singer, counsel for the defence, subjected Griffiths to considerable questioning tending to show that witness had been found to take figures from the assistants which went into the final inventory. Griffiths admitted an estimated loss figure of $600 based on the space occupied, the goods contained as described by the assistant manager, Mr. Pattenick and other employees.

"Why didn't you ask Herman?"

"He wasn't available, he was in the chief's office, so I obtained the information on the class of merchandise which had occupied the space from the assistant manager," replied Griffiths.

Half Stock Lost

What was the total damage from fire, water and smoke.

"So the damage was quite severe. almost half the total stock."

Yes, it was. The inventory as taken showed basement stock estimated at $2,998.54 plus a $600 loss of goods burned out of sight. The main floor inventory was $17,326.10 giving a total stock inventory of $20,924.64.

"How long was Herman there.

I'm sorry I can't give you an accurate answer Mr. Singer. He was there quite a bit of the time, gave

Gas Or Licenses Tax Puzzle

TORONTO, March 7 (CP).—How and to what extent Ontario motorists might be taxed to provide additional revenue for highway purposes was an important issue today on the eve of the opening of the second session of the 20th Legislature.

(The Toronto Globe and Mail says in a news story today that a two-cent boost in the present six-cent gasoline tax is among the government's legislative proposals. Queen's Park speculation foresees as an alternative an increase in automobile license fees.

(Delegates to the 32nd annual conference of the Ontario Motor League agreed yesterday that Ontario motorists cannot afford an increase in the gasoline tax as was suggested by the Chevrier Royal Commission which investigated Provincial highway problems. The delegates admitted, however, that more revenue is needed if the province is to continue its road-building program).

Premier Hepburn's Cabinet is scheduled to meet to put the finishing touches on the Throne speech which Lieutenant-Governor Albert Matthews will read tomorrow. The session is expected to last about two months, but it may not be formally prorogued until May 22 when, it is hoped, the King will officiate in

KINGSVILLE, Ont., March 7. (CP).—Kingsville's German club was under orders to-day to move from the town-owned Allen Hall after charges at a council meeting the club was a Nazi propaganda centre. The Allen Club rooms were turned over to the Kingsville branch of the Canadian Legion at a slightly higher rental.

Councillor Walter Gardener told the meeting last night residents of nearby Harrow and Amherstburg planned last summer to raid the club.

"Police Chief Babcock told me that he heard the residents of Amherstburg and Harrow were going to come down to Kingsville and raid the club because the town is becoming a breeding place for propaganda," said Gardener. "He said it was the headquarters for the county.

"I have heard a lot of rumors about the club, people have told me all about the German propaganda being handed out up there, but I can't prove it. I don't know whether it is true."

ANSONVILLE, Ont., Mar. 7 — (CP). — Dr. E. J. Clouthier, Medical Officer of Health, said to-day five cases of scurvy have been discovered here. He said the disease was the "direct result of starvation and deprivation of the essential foods." Ansonville is three miles south of Iroquois Falls.

Dr. Clouthier said one case has advanced to a stage which necessitates hospital treatment. Vigilance to prevent spread of the disease, rare in civilized countries, is being exercised by the physician, who also is conducting an investigation into the cause of the outbreak.

The disease is caused by a lack of vegetables and fruits in the daily diet. It was said many residents of the village who are employed at the paper mills in Iroquois Falls are working only part time and are unable to purchase these essential foods.

The municipality is in the Township of Calvert, under control of the Provincial Government. It was said the township had sought to obtain increased relief quotas for welfare recipients which would enable the impoverished residents to obtain the necessary vitamins, but that such requests had been so frequent recently it was impossible to expect further aid.

Village authorities said the situation was made more serious by the fact that many residents were insufficiently clad and that during the first two months of this winter sub-zero weather prevailed. Some householders were said to lack sufficient fuel in their homes to withstand the cold weather.

Gandhi Victor Ends His Fast

RAJKOT, India, Mar. 7 — (AP).—Dispute between Mohandas K. Gandhi and the native ruler of Rajkot—a quarrel which caused Gandhi to start a "fast unto death"—was settled to-day. Immediately Gandhi ended his fast of 98 hours and 25 minutes. He drank a glass of sweet orange juice. The nourishment was the first since he started the fast just over four days ago after drinking a cup of hot goat's milk.

Intervention by the Viceroy, the Marquess of Linlithgow, brought an accord between the Nationalist leader and the 29-year-old Thakore Saheb Shri Dharmendrasinhji, whom Gandhi called "My son."

Gandhi voluntarily ended the long fast, which his doctors said was endangering his life, after receiving a letter from Thakore Saheb.

The letter was handed to the ascetic leader by a chauffeur sent by E. C. Gibson, British resident in the States of Western Indian.

Gandhi opened the letter, smiled weakly, and turning to his attendants, accepted the glass of orange juice which he began sipping slowly.

The British Viceroy and Gandhi's secretary, Mahadev Desai, had carried on one side of the negotiations, while Gandhi himself dealt with Gibson who was acting for the Rajkot ruler.

Gandhi had spent a restless night, much of the time being prevented by nausea from drinking water.

He was rejoined yesterday by his wife, who was released from jail despite rejection of a previous offer of freedom.

She had been in jail since February 3 with others arrested for a civil disobedience campaign.

Details of the messages which Gandhi and Lord Linlithgow exchanged were not made public.

Madrid Revolt Is Nipped

MADRID, March 7—(AP).—Warplanes were used over Madrid by General Jose Miaja's new republican defence government to-day in an effort to crush an uprising of "some troops" said to have been inspired by Communists.

Earlier pronouncements by General Miaja and his Defence Minister, General Segismundo Casado, said that the revolt—an apparent attempt to force continuation of the civil war as opposed to Miaja's expressed desire for a "worthy peace"—was under control.

It was subsequently reported that Communists holding out in a building on the site of an old race track on Madrid's outskirts, had surrendered but that companion forces still were in possession of a few other buildings elsewhere.

The revolt developed among troops in the environs of Madrid. In the early morning there was cannon and machine-gun fire in outlying sections and isolated snipers kept up an intermittent fire within the city proper.

Miaja last night became head of the National Defence Government which succeeded that of ousted Premier Jpan Negrin. Communists were excluded from the regime.

Halifax Fire Threat Is Revealed

HALIFAX, March 7 (CP)—A hotel fireman dismissed the night before the disastrous Queen Hotel fire last week told him "there'll be a lot more than me out of a job tomorrow," John Desmond, acting manager, told a fire marshal's investigation today.

Desmond, who said he dismissed the man for drinking, quoted the fireman as saying: "If I'm out of a job, there'll be a lot more than me out of a job tomorrow." He said the fireman's name was Bouffard.

Then the hotel official leaned over and whispered to the inquiry stenographer the remainder of Bouffard's remarks, made a few hours before fire swept through the hotel and claimed at least 28 lives.

Man Had Been Drinking.

He "noticed" the man had been drinking, Desmond testified, and dismissed him with three weeks' notice.

A small blaze, extinguished without difficulty, preceded the major fire, Desmond told the inquiry, held under Nova Scotias Fire Prevention Act. As the investigation opened Major John A. Rutland, fire marshal, asked that other hotel employees be excluded while Desmond testified.

Much of Desmond's testimony dealt with a description of the basement and location of the furnace room. In reply to a question, he said he once had smelled gas on an upper floor but never noticed any coal gas odor in the basement.

Desmond, who said he inspected the furnace room about twice a week, testified no rubbish or combustible material was left in rooms near the furnace room.

SIR JOSEPH WESLEY FLAVELLE, BART.

TORONTO, March 7—(CP).—Sir Joseph Flavelle, noted Toronto financier, died suddenly in Palm Beach, Fla., this morning, it was learned here. He was 81.

It was understood Sir Joseph suffered a heart seizure. Sir Joseph had been ill for three days, it was learned, but his health previously had been good. Only last week he informed members of his staff here he was enjoying golf in the southern holiday resort and his death was unexpected.

Joseph Ellsworth Flavelle, only son of the financier, left here today to bring the body back to Toronto. Other survivors are two daughters, Mrs. Wallace Barrett and Mrs. F. Y. McEachren, both of Toronto. Lady Flavelle died in 1932.

Sir Joseph, prominent in public life as well as in commercial and financial affairs, was widely known in Great Britain as well as in Canada. During the Great War he rendered distinguished service to the Allied cause as chairman of the imperial munitions board. A baronetcy was conferred upon him in 1917 in recognition of his work on the board.

Headed C.N.R. Board

At the time the Dominion Government took over the Grand Trunk Railway as part of the Canadian National Railways, Sir Joseph was appointed chairman of the C.N.R. Board. The appointment was a tribute to his great organizing abilities.

Born in Peterborough, the financier was educated in the public schools of that city. He became a resident of Toronto in 1887.

Sir Joseph was identified prominently with many concerns—packing companies, banks, trust companies and a department store. His interests even extended to the newspaper field and between 1903 and 1910 was proprietor of the old Toronto News. A former chairman of the board, Canadian Bank of Commerce, at the time of his death he was chairman of the board, National Trust Company.

He also was connected with many public organizations, among them the British Red Cross Society and the Victoria Order of Nurses. As a governor of the University of Toronto, he headed a royal commission which in 1906 was appointed to recommend a plan of university reorganization.

CHICAGO, March 7.—(CP).—The weight of a fearful secret he kept for 21 years was lifted from Reynhold Faust to-day when he announced in Felony Court a deep love for his adopted country against whose peace he plotted in the Great War days.

Faust, an immigrant from Germany in 1880, was seized Saturday after four home made bombs were found in a safe deposit box he rented since November, 1917. Charges of storing explosives in a business district was not pressed after Faust told his story to Judge Mathew Hartigan. The Nol Prose left him a free man.

Now 74 years old and changed of heart, Faust admitted his original intention was to place the bombs at patriotic meetings to demonstarte against the United States war against Germany.

Morris Meyers, Assistant State's Attorney, quoted him as saying he had never meant to harm anyone, anyone.

The gaunt old man cleared up some mystery of the case in an interview before court. He admitted — for the first time he said—that it was he who placed a phosphorescent bomb in the auditorium theatre the night of Nov. 17, 1917, as a brilliant audience attended the opera. "At that time I was dissatisfied with the world and with my pot. Then there was the rich man-poor man question, but the war changed things."

Meyer related the strange story told by Faust as follows:

In 1917 he made the bombs with the intention of launching a campaign of terrorism. He was embittered over loss of his postal job and the United States' decision to fight his native Germany.

In 1918 he was sentenced to the Illinois penitentiary on a charge of attempted extortion. He threw away the keys to the box. On his release 14 months later he wanted to withdraw the bombs and destroy them but dared not ask the company to dril lopen the box.

He decided to guard his secret until death by paying $10 a year rental for the box. Two weeks ago he received notice that the company intended to move; that boxholders would have to remove their possession or forfeit them.

"I was wrong." Meyer quoted the man. "I am sorry now. I have paid the debt. For more than 20 years I have suffered night and day over this thing."

CALLANDER, Ont., March 7 (CP).—Oliva Dionne, father of the quintuplets, said today he was not favorable to a proposal that the children be taken to Toronto in May to be presented to the King and Queen.

"We are anxious that they should be presented to the King and Queen when they come to Canada, but I cannot see why the government cannot arrange to have Their Majesties visit the nursery here," said Dionne.

The father of the quints spoke after reading an invitation addressed to him by Provincial Secretary Nixon of Ontario, ofefring to convey the five girls and their parents to Toronto by special train for a meeting May 22 with the royal couple.

"I am not in favor of it," he said. Dionne added, however, that he would not reply to the letter until he had consulted his wife.

Two other members of the quints' board of guardians, Judge J. A. Valin and Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, said they had not been formally advised of the invitation. It was believed the invitation would be given consideration by the entire board, whose fourth member is Percy D. Wilson, official guardian for Ontario.

Dafoe Says Little.

Dr. Dafoe declined to express an opinion on the advisability of moving the Quints from Callander. He added:

"If the Ontario Government says we must allow the Quints to be taken to Toronto, what can we do?"

Dr. Dafoe, who several times has opposed suggestions that his nearly five-year-old charges be taken from Callander for public appearances, said in this case the final decision rested with Dionne.

Should the father of the Quints oppose the Toronto trip, the doctor said there was nothing the board of governors could do about it.

After his daily visit to the Quints, Dr. Dafoe left for North Bay to confer with Judge Valin who earlier had said there was no basis for reports that the Nixon invitation would be accepted.

Dr. Dafoe said he had a conference Saturday at Toronto with Premier Hepburn, provincial secretary and the official guardian but that only th health of the Quints was discussed. There was no mention of the invitation.

Mother Smothers Crying Baby

MAHANOY CITY, Pa., March 7—(AP).—A 32-year-old mother quoted by state police as saying she smothered her three-year-old son because he "cried too much" was held on a murder charge today in Pennsylvania's second baby-slaying case in a week.

Police Corporal C. D. Boyle testified at a hearing last night that Mrs. Gus Edinger related she clamped her hand over the baby's nose and mouth as he lay in bed with her and another child early last Saturday.

Boyle quoted Mrs. Edinger as saying the baby disturbed her three other children with its crying and was "a nuisance." The mother, wife of a relief project worker, pleaded not guilty to the murder charge and was lodged in jail.

Meanwhile, not so many miles away at Mifflintown, another mother, Helen Wolf, was held on charge of being an accessory after the fact in the death of her two-year-old daughter, who the state charges was beaten to death.

Paul Barrick, 22, described by state police Corporal Richard Gray as the Wolf woman's suitor, has pleaded guilty to a charge of slaying the child. Gray quoted him as say he beat her "at least 50 times" because "I was jealous of her father."

Disunity Is Rife In Canada Ratepayers Told

"Disunity is rife across Canada!"

"We are living in dangerous times!"

These were storm warnings flung out last night by Captain W. C. C. Innes, managing director of the Taxpayers' Association of Canada, in the course of a brilliant address in the Legion hall that was sponsored by the North Monaghan Suburban Area Ratepayers' Association.

At the conclusion of his address, Captain Innes extended to the North Monaghan group an invitation to join the national organization. Ideals of the T.A.C., he said, were the same as those of the local association only on a national rather than a municipal scale. The T.A.C. is striving for a membership of at least 250,000 member taxpayers and has as its aim the bringing of "decent pressure" to bear on governments in order that Canadian may live a happier life.

Captain Innes scored duplication of services by provincial and federal governments, and forecast the day when provinces would deal only with local matters, "when their wings will be clipped."

Canadian taxpayers are paying out untold millions to provincial governments because of scores of duplications, he said, citing health measures, labor control, agricultural supervision, as a few examples. "You can hardly mention a single service that is being carried on by the Dominion that is not being duplicated by the province," he said. "'National unity has been destroyed and you have the provinces at the throat of the Dominion government and the Dominion government at the throats of the provinces. Disunity is rife across Canada."

While he believed strongly in social legislation, he said "I have the biggest quarrel with our social legislation because it is not federal. Social legislation must be for the good of all the people in Canada, and it must be uniform if it is to be that." Yet, in fact, each province legislates its

$4,000 Tax Theft Is Confessed

DETROIT, March 7. —(C. P.) — Kellog Sherwood, 49, confessed today he was guilty of stealing more than $4,000 worth of county funds, according to a police statement.

In a confident, almost flippant tone, Sherwood, father of one daughter, told how he had ordered a counterfeit "paid" stamp made and how he had used this stamp to mark as paid, tax bills from which he stole.

He explained that he would accept a cheque in payment of taxes, give the taxpayer a receipt but destroy the duplicate receipt. He put the cheque in the drawer and took the cash equivalent from other funds he had collected, he said.

He was charged specifically with having taken $3,246 from one tax payment on December 30, 1937, and $1,300 in December 1938. These were his only thefts, Sherwood said, but authorities are continuing a complete audit.

Sherwood said that he took the money to invest in Mexican Oil lands, believing that he would be able to replace the money when the deal matured.

His hopes were blasted when the Mexican government expropriated American and British Oil holdings, Sherwood said.

Il Duce's Press Demands France Surrender Spanish Fleet To Franco "At Once"

ROME, March 7. —(A. P.). —The Fascist editor Virginio Gayda called on France today to turn over to General Franco "without delay" the Spanish republican fleet which has sought refuge at Bizerte, Tunisia.

Gayda, usually regarded as a spokesman for Premier Mussolini, declared Italy "would not tolerate the continued presence of the fleet at a point so near Italian shores. (Bizerte is 15 miles from Sicily).

(Eleven Spanish Republican vessels, escorted by a French cruiser and a squadron of destroyers, anchored off the French North African naval base, awaiting authorization to enter Bizerte. They left the naval base of Cartagena over the week-end and were said to be carrying several thousand refugees).

"It (the fleet) must be speedily disarmed and speedily restored to the Government of Franco," Gayda wrote in the newspaper Il Giornale D'Italia.

MADRID, March 7 (AP).—A revolt against the new government headed by General Jose Miaja developed in Madrid today.

Authoritative sources attributed the movement to Communists and said it involved only "some" of the troops in the beleaguered city.

The rise of Miaja, "savior of Madrid," to head a national defence government and his plea last night for a "worthy peace" had raised hopes among most of the population for an early end to hostilities.

Picked machine-gun units guarded strategic points in the city pursuant to Miaja's stern orders for the suppression of outbreaks against his peace policy.

Sounds of cannon and machine-gun fire came from outlying quarters of Madrid while isolated snipers kept up intermittent fire within the city proper.

The best information immediately available was that several battalions just outside Madrid were involved in the uprising. The revolt broke out in the early hours of the morning.

Miaja and two of his Cabinet members, General Segismundo Casado, defence, and Julian Besteiro, foreign affairs, broadcast declarations that "Communists, despairing for their failures, deceived some troops into revolting."

Fleet Reaches Safety.

BIZERIE, Tunisia, Mar. 7 — (CP-Havas). — Eleven warships of the Spanish Republican fleet, arrived at this French North African naval base to-day from Cartagena, Spain.

The warships left Cartagena on Snuday during the brief uprising against the Negrin Government, which has since been replaced by the new regime of General Jose Miaja.

The veteran strategist known as "the savior of Madrid," assumed the presidency of the tottering republic last night, 24 hours after a junta led by his representative, General Segismundo Casado, had driven our Premier Juan Negrin and a group of ministers determined on war to the bitter end.

With Negrin and his cabinet followers in French refuge, with the Republican fleet headed for internment and disarming at Bizerte, Tunisia, and with Communist leaders under virtual arrest in Madrid, Miaja was in a position to negotiate a "soldier's peace."

Japanese Strike At 3 Centres

SHANGHAI, March 7. (C. P.). — Japanese planes blasted at three centres of China's communist-dominated northwest today while the severest fighting of many weeks marked the close of the 20th month of Japan's invasion of China.

A Japanese communique said 30 planes bombed Yenan, Chinese communist head-quarters in the northern part of unconquered Shensi province, causing considerable damage to the centre of the city and a University there.

Twenty other planes attacked military establishments and barracks at Ningsia, capital of the Province of that name, northwest of Shensi, according to the communique.

Ten planes raided Tungkwan at the Great Bend of the Yellow river, an important station on the Lunghai railway forming part of the Chinese supply route from Russia.

A dispatch from that Shensi province town said 14 persons were killed by 34 bombs dropped near the railway station.

While a long-heralded land offensive into a so-called Red Shensi had not materialized, Japanese armies were engaged in operations almost as deep inland—the westward drive in Hupeh Province, the heart of China more than 50 miles west of Shanghai.

Simultaneously the invaders were striving to blot out a no-man's-land lying between Japanese-dominated Peiping, in the north, and Nanking, in the coastal section of Central China, and to rid a vast area of North China of guerrilla warriors.

Pedigree Tangle Is Explained

LONDON March 7— (CP-.—The The British Friesian cattle society does not accept Canadian pedigrees because "we are solely interested in breeding not prices," according to the secretary of the society.

The secretary, who declined to allow his name to be used, told The Canadian Press that if the society made it a general rule to accept Canadian pedigrees individuals who weren't interested in breeding might buy up Canadian cattle for speculative purposes.

"We don't recognize any importation unless it has been sanctioned by us before the animals leave Canada," he said.

He was commenting on a statement by S. G. Sims, president of the Holstein-Friesian Association of Canada, at its annual convention in Toronto, Sims said "consistent refusal of the British Friesian society to accept our pedigrees" had an adverse effect on the price of Canadian cattle.

Sheriff's Strategy

ROCKINGHAM, N.C., March 7 — (AP).—The man for whom Sheriff E. B. Morse had a warrant was reported to be a swift runner. The sheriff looked over his deputies and decided none of them would do. Forthwith he deputized Odell Childers, a start sprinter at the University of North Carolina a few years ago. Childers got his man.

Common Sense About Constipation

A doctor would tell you that the best thing to do with any ailment is to get at its cause. If you're constipated, don't fiddle with makeshift remedies. Find out what's giving you the trouble!

Chances are you won't have to look very far if you eat just the things most people do. Most likely you don't get enough "bulk" in your diet. And "bulk" doesn't mean a lot of food. It means the kind of food that isn't largely consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass which helps a bowel movement.

Millions of people prefer Kellogg's All-Bran, a ready-to-eat cereal, to keep them "regular." It supplies the "bulk" they need, plus the intestinal tonic vitamin B1.

Eat All-Bran every day, drink plenty of water, and join the "regulars!" Made by Kellogg in London, Can. Sold by every grocer in two convenient sizes.

Ontario Invites Quints To Meet King

TORONTO, Mar. 7 — (C.P.). — The Ontario Government has extended an invitation to Oliva Dionne to bring his wife and their quintuplet daughters from Callander to be presented to the King and Queen in Toronto on May 22, and there are indications it will be accepted.

The invitation was issued in a letter yesterday by Hon. Harry Nixon, Provincial Secretary, who offered a special train to bring the quints and their parents to Toronto and exclusive use of Premier Mitchell Hepburn's offices during the Dionnes' visit to the Legislative Buildings for the presentation. He suggested that the presentations take place in the Lieutenant-Governor's apartments in the buildings.

A member of the United Church of Canada, Sir Joseph was on the board of missions of that church. In politics he was an independent Conservative. The Flavelle home, "Holwood," Queen's Park, is one of Toronto's attractive residences.

Faith in the Empire

A man of great vision, Sir Joseph had unbounded faith in the future of Canada and of the British Empire. He was interested keenly in all scientific developments that could be applied to industry and in 1925 offered the Flavelle medal for outstanding service to science.

Sir Joseph was an ardent angler and an enthusiastic golfer. It was his proud boast he never smoked, never drank intoxicating liquor, never played poker, never attended a horse racing meeting. He decided to grow a beard because he said it required too much time to shave each morning.

He allowed smoking in his home, "Holwood," one of the show places of Toronto, only when it was turned over to governors-general or other high crown officials. But to make up for the lack of smoking privileges on other occasions he often handed parting guests long, expensive Turkish cigarettes.

Sir Joseph Flavelle was one of a brilliant group of Peterborough's sons who went out into the realm of business and finance and made good in a large way—a group that included the late Senator George A. Cox, E. R. Wood, Herbert C. Cox, and Senator Frank P. O'Connor.

He was born here February 15, 1858 and the first twenty-nine years of his life were spent in Peterboro Educated in the public school here and later in the high school, it is recalled that he completed his education at an early age and began his business training by working for some time for James Best who carried on a dry goods business here.

From that position he launched out into business for himself, opening a flour and feed store and produce business on Simcoe street in the building now used by the gas department of the Utilities Commission and he carried on there until 1887 when the lure of bigger business was too much for him and he became connected with the firm of William Davis and Company in Toronto and was launched on the career that was to make him one of the outstanding men of business and finance in Canada.

During his early manhood in Peterborough he was noted for his activity as a member of the congregation of George Street Methodist Church. He was superintendent of the Sunday school and a member of the trustee board of the church and was also prominent because of the interest he took in the promotion of the temperance cause here.

The Flavelle home was on College Street, near the corner of McDonnel Street and Mrs. Flavelle, Sir Joseph's mother taught a class in the High School.

A Hustling Lad.

E. A. Peck, K. C., remembers Sir Joseph's early days in Peterborough very well, recalling the fact that young Flavelle who was somewhat older than him was a fellow pupil at the local high school. "He was a hustling active lad," Mr. Peck said today when told of Sir Joseph's death" and I remember that he left school rather early to embark into business. He married a Peterborough woman, a Miss Ellesworth whose father, a retired minister, used to live at the corner of Burnham and what is now Hunter Street in Ashburnham. She too attended the High school here."

Although more than fifty years have passed since Sir Joseph lived here he took a keen interest in Peterborough affairs and frequently visited his native city. He took a prominent part in every Old Boys' reunion that was launched in Peterborough and on a number of occasions came to George Street church to participate in special events.

Y.W.C.A. officials are delighted with the new quarters, are intending to hold their annual gym pageant in their own gymnasium for the first time in history. A grand opening for the entire new building is planned for some time about the first of April.

Officers Are Named For Rifle Club

A new organization came into being at the Armouries last night when the Prince of Wales Rangers' Rifle Association was formed, with Emmett Sheehy as Captain. The association is the outgrowth of a club that was originally formed by the Red Patch Club, and many of its members are affiliated with those veterans.

Captain Sheehy was elected last night along with an entire governing body that includes David Clement as vice-captain; Lieut. Lloyd Gilders, secretary; Major H. K. Clifton, M.C., treasurer, and an executive committee.

us prices of goods, and assisted us with the piece goods.

In a fire loss where there is a $20,000 stock and a loss of almost half, isn't it reasonable to assume there might be a ten per cent. error either way.

Fireman Testifies

George Gimblett, Jr. a member of the Peterborough Fire Department, was the next witness. He told of arriving at the Pattenick store on the evening of December 12th when the fire occurred at the store. He said the fire chief had ordered him to go into the cellar after the fire was out with Herman to search for some money, which Herman had said was down cellar.

"We stood in water about four inches deep but didn't find any money," Gimblett said.

"Would it not have been difficult without exact knowledge to find any money which had been hidden?"

"Yes, there was considerable smoke, water and floating debris."

Re-examined by Mr. McElderry, he said he believed he could have located any particular article in the cellar if he had known its location.

Small Bank Account

Robert McKillop, accountant at the local branch of the Bank of Toronto, was the third Crown witness. He identified papers which showed Herman had an account at the bank from October 20 to Nov. 22, 1938. The greatest amount at any one time was $35.00.

C. V. Colley, accountant at the Peterborough branch of the Dominion Bank, where the Pattenick Store account was kept. He identified a deposit book and said deposits were made by Mr. Herman, Mr. Stevens, the assistant manager, or one of the girls.

Mrs. Inga Roy, an employee at the Pattenick store for about 11 months prior to the fire, was the next witness. A deposit slip for ten dollars, deposited to Mr. Herman's personal account was identified by her.

"I received ten dollars from Mr. Herman on Nov. 26, 1938, and deposited it to his account at the Bank of Toronto."

"Where did Mr. Herman get the money?"

"I don't know."

Miss Jean Cohen, an employee, was then called. She said Mr. Herman had taken $21 from the cash register in the store on Nov. 24, 1938, and given the money to her to deposit in his personal account in the Bank of Toronto.

"Did you make the deposit?"

"Yes."

Cross-examined by Mr. Singer, Miss Cohen said the layout of the store was such a shopper might steal articles.

Admits Shoplifting Losses

"Did you ever see Mr. Herman carry home any stock?"

"No."

David Pattenick, owner of a chain of ten stores and the large department store in this city, was the next crown witness. He took the oath in Jewish style with his hat on.

Answering Mr. McElderrys questions, he explained Nathan Herman had been manager of the store since it opened here. He had worked for Pattenick for four years before coming to Peterborough.

Pattenick said he made regular visits to all stores and was in Peterborough on the Saturday two days before the fire. At that time he took $65 from the store till and his personal cheque for that amount he put in the till to balance the account.

"That was usual practice?"

"Yes, if I needed expense money on trips, I took cash from the stores money, all cheques being drawn on a Cobourg bank. On December 12, the day of the fire, this cheque for $65 had been deposited in the Dominion Bank.

$200 Loss in August

"When was the last general inventory taken "

"In August, 1938, and at that time there was a shortage of slightly over $200," replied Pattenick.

"When did Herman tell you of money hidden in the cellar?"

"On Tuesday, 13th of December, the day after the fire, he told me $306.00 had been hidden in the cellare, Saturdays receipts. Later he handed me an envelope with $111.00 in it. This money had been hidden in the cellar also by Stevens, the assistant manager and was Monday's receipts."

"What happened to Saturday's receipts?"

"Mr. Herman said it must have burned up."

"Was this $306.00 ever returned to you?"

"No. Stevens had hid the $110.00 on the south side of an aisle, and apparently Herman's hiding place for money was on the north side of the aisle.".

Herman had instructions to deposit the day's receipts regularly each day and was obliged to submit a weekly report to the head office, Mr. Pattenick said.

Answering Mr. Singer's questions, Mr. Pattenick said Herman had been an honest, reliable employee. He admitted that the previous year there had been a shortage of $1,385.00.

"I couldn't lay my hand on any one man because there had been two managers that year,' the store owner explained and added that he allowed a reasonable shrinkage amounting to about $400 a year.

"You knew they hid the money?"

"Yes; I expected them to hide it."

"You know Herman and his wife were so poverty stricken they attempted to get relief after the fire?"

"Yes."

"And you sent Mrs. Herman $5 of your own money?"

"Yes."

"What suspicions had you of Herman?"

"He did not put the money from Saturday in the bank on Monday."

"But he had a good reason?"

"Well, yes, he said the girl didn't have the slips ready."

"Whenever there was a shortage over the usual amount you arranged an adjustment with the manager?"

"Yes."

"And your total shortage was $1,296.00 which was not even equal to the $1,385.00 shortage which had been found under another manager with Herman the year before."

"Yes, but these were the greatest shortage I had ever had."

Mr. Pattenick said the usual weekly report had been sent in showing sales up to Dec. 10, Saturday. The total this day was $306.00.

The trial is proceeding.

Oil In Britain

LONDON, March 7—(CP).—Encouraged by the success of the Dalkeith, Midlothian, oil well now under commercial production, prospecting firms are renewing efforts in the United Kingdom. The projects are smiled on by the government as a possible valuable reserve in an emergency.

The board of trade granted three prospecting licenses to the D'Arcy exploration company covering about 197 square miles near Lancaster, about 46 square miles in Derbyshire, Leicestershire and Staffordshire and 143 square miles in Yorkshire.

Social Security, Health To Be Boosted

OTTAWA, March 7. —(C. P.). — Increasing activity on the part of the Federal Parliament and Government in the fields of Public Health and Social Security was predicted last night by two cabinet ministers as the House of Commons debated Health and Old Age Pensions.

Health Minister Power said the people of Canada were not yet ready for state medicine and would not be for some time, if ever, but sooner or later the present health services carried on by provincial authorities, municipalities, co-operatives and private agencies would be co-ordinated and public opinion would demand that the Federal authority give leadership in a definite national program.

Mr. Power said Canada was definitely moving towards more elaborate and co-ordinated health services but the Canadian people for some time to come would not be prepared to put up with the regimentation involved in State Medicine.

Gale Plugs Roads At Orangeville

ORANGEVILLE, Ont., March 7.—(C. P.). — For the second sucessive day high winds today swept Orangeville and district and three highways here. Nos. 9, 10 and 24, were snowblocked to traffic. The winds piled huge drifts on the through thoroughfares at frequent intervals and rather than attempt to buck the heavy roads, 25 motorists elected to stay in Orangeville overnight.

Most of the stranded drivers came into Orangeville from the south on No. 10 highway yesterday afternoon and last night and were unable to journey farther.

Two members of a Hamilton mercantile hockey team reached here together with two others from the same city, at 7.30 a.m. They told of a harrowing trip from Owen Sound, where they played last night. Leaving Owen Sound at 12.45 a.m., they covered the 51 miles to Arthur in four hours and the remaining 32 miles to Orangeville in another three hours. They had to push their car out of several drifts. The players were Arnold Mattison, Jack McMullen, George Marsden and Gus Douglas.

Eleven Grand Valley residents were forced to remain overnight at a service station, two miles from home on No. 9 highway when they found the final run into Grand Valley impossible to make.

Bible Is Dedicated In Bailieboro Church

(Examiner Correspondence.)

BAILIEBORO, Mar. 7. — A dedication service of a pulpit Bible took place on Sunday evening in the United Church by the pastor, Rev. Mr. Horton. The Bible was presented by the oldest lady of the congregation, Mrs. William Bateson, 91 years of age. The pastor spoke very kindly and feelingly of her interest and faith in her church. Due to her advanced age, Mrs. Bateson is unable to attend church, but she is a keen supporter of all church activities and works of charity. This act of thoughtfulness is greatly appreciated by the church officials.

Agnes Green Is Spoken Of As Unusual Pianist

Agnes Logan Green's piano recital in the Toronto Conservatory of Music Concert Hall on Saturday night was received with enthusiasm by Toronto music riticis. Augustus Bridle, writing in the Daily Star, says she should do a recital like it every month in Peterborough, because none of Toronto's many pianists ever did one more definite in musical and picture message.

Bernard Preston of the Globe and Mail described her recital as holding a curious rare charm quite distinctly its own. An effect of remoteness, similar to the atmospheric distance suggested in some old arras, pervaded all her playing, investing it with a quality rather mesmeric through its very lack of intensity. Indeed, he said, power from her would seem impossibly vulgar and brutal.

That this was achieved in her first group of very early classics was not so surprising, for that period was somewhat given over to a sort of romantic abstraction. But when the recitalist accompanied the same tonal re-creation of the Beethoven Sonata in E major (opus 109) it left her hearers a little breathless; it was still Beethoven, but Beethoven, as it were, etherealized, which is not what one generally expects of this most passionate writer.

Chopin, of course, lent himself beautifully to this opalescent treatment. Three exquisitely done preludes, a Berceuse rocked as if by the hands of seraphs, and even the F minor Ballade, despite its poignancy, all shimmered like some pallid cloud seen at earliest dawn. Some moderns, including Debussy, also seemed, for the time at any rate, as if made for this pastel-toned playing. And a number of encores granted by the gracious, fair, whitely draped pianist completed with flawless consistency a performance singularly distinguished for its candid and nacreous beauty.

The Evening Telegram described the artist's style as exquisite, and quite individualistic.

Hospital Auxiliary Members Discuss New Hospital Wing

One of the most important meetings yet held by the Hospital Women's Auxiliary since it started its drive for funds to provide a new wing for Nicholls Hospital took place in Trinity United Church on Monday afternoon. Presiding was the Auxiliary president, Mrs. J. G. Wharry.

The pressing need of an extension to the present hospital, and the probable cost of such an extension to the city of Peterborough, were outlined in a brief address by Mr. E. F. Mason, a member of the hospital board. He explained that the board of Nicholls Hospital Trust, which had delayed suggesting expenditure of money for any addition to the present building, badly needed though it was for over ten years, had reached a point this year where it felt it could not assume the responsibility of carrying on longer under such crowded hospital conditions and with worn-out hospital equipment.

"The steam plant, laundry, heating plant, kitchen and its equipment have been patched up year after year until now a danger point had been reached. A new steam plant and laundry must be replaced at an outlay of $18,000 to $20,000, and the following year a kitchen with an expenditure of from $12,000 to $15,000. The third year the heating plant, if it will hold out that long (which is doubtful), will have to be replaced at a cost of $40,000. These amounts would have to be met each year by a demand on the city, and would mean an average of over a mill each year on taxes, and when all this was done, we would still have an old building not even made fire proof."

A decision was reached by the board, Mr. Mason said, that all this equipment be included in one building, and to it added just such extra accommodation for patients as is actually needed. Every method possible to keep down the cost has been employed. As an example, the first estimate given by the architects was $450,000. By going over the whole problem with the architects, however, the board members discovered that it would be possible to fire proof the present old building with the new modern methods, providing the 12 heating units were removed, which would thereby make full use of nearly all present buildings. The cost was in this way brought down to $395,000, which amount would not be a hardship to the ratepayer when spread over a 20-year period.

A tribute was paid the board of trustees following Mr. Mason's address by Mrs. S. J. Graham, past president of the Auxiliary, who stated that because the Nicholls Hospital estate had been so well taken care of, practically no income had been lost during the depression years.

A general history of hospital was given by Mrs. E. M. Leeson, in which she spoke of the establishment of the first training school for nurses by Florence Nightingale.

Hospital By-law Is Discussed

A discussion of the hospital by-law via the question-box method followed, and questions submitted by Auxiliary members and other interested citizens present were capably answerd by Mrs. E. M. Leeson, superintendent of Nicholls Hospital, and Mr. Mason. Questions and answers were as follows:

1. Can a Roman Catholic doctor put a patient in Nichols Hospital and attend said patient without consulting any other doctor? Answer (Mr. Mason): A Roman Catholic doctor who is on the staff has the same privilege as any other doctor on the staff. A doctor coming in from outside, of course, will have to place his patient under a staff doctor, regardless of whether he is a Catholic or Protestant.

2. Will Nicholls Hospital accept a Roman Catholic patient? Answer: Yes.

3. Will Nicholls Hospital accept a Roman Catholic girl as a nurse-in-training? Answer (Mrs. Leeson): The hospital never refuses a nurse because she is a Catholic if she prefers to come to our hospital.

4. Are all or any of the board members paid a salary? Answer (Mr. Mason): None of the board members are paid a salary in any shape or form. Mr. E. B. Fowler, who was a member of the board, is now secretary-treasurer, and he receives $900 a year.

5. Why does the board wish to build a hospital costing so much money? A. (Mr. Mason): A hospital that would suit the people of Peterborough today would cost over a million dollars. That is easy for any one in touch with hospitalization or architecture to figure out. The cost of the building is estimated on the number of beds required, and each bed is estimated, for a city the size of Peterborough, on a basis of $3,600. The hospital requires from 160 to 170 beds. However, it is not merely a matter of putting an addition to the hospital and adding a certain number of beds, we must also provide for a steam plant—the present one is furnishing steam to 22 different sections of the hospital; a new laundry; a heating plant—the one now installed is obsolete, and is held together by 12 different furnaces. The kitchen, also, is inadequate, since it was only intended to supply facilities for preparing food for 80 people, and now is suppliyng food for about 150.

6. Why cannot Nicholls Hospital be kept for Peterborough people and Peterborough people only? A. (Mr. Mason): Good roads are built for the benefit of people around Peterborough; fire protection is provided for people outside of our city, why not hospital accommodation? There is the human element entering into it, too. Some poor unfortunate who gets hurt in an accident, for instance, is not geing to be told at the hospital door that he must go somewhere else. Surely we're not so selfish as that. However, the government demands that every hospital must be open to any patient who comes along, providing that hospital has accommodation for him.

7. Why cannot the Isolation Hospital be used as a maternity hospital or a nursing convalescent home? A. (Mrs. Leeson): If it were used as a maternity home I'm afraid there would be a lot of babies lost in the snow storms—at times during the winter the road is impassable. The need for a nursing convalescent home is not great, since we have very few convalescent patients. Aside from that, the sewerage system at the present time is inadequate.

The membership to date, as reported by Mrs. Morphet, is 2,025, with 400 names added this year. Successful progress in the drive for a ton of coppers was reported by Mrs. J. K. Hughes; Mrs. W. Tinker, treasurer, reported a special savings balance of $203.66; savings, $444.80; life membership, $357.63, and three bonds valued at $500.00 each. The Samaritan Cupboard report showed that two sets of woollen underwear and two pairs of wool stockings were purchased for a young girl just leaving the hospital. Three layettes and twenty diapers were also given out. Total proceeds of the hospital tea, held at the home of the president, as reported by the convener of ways and means, were $159.61.

Rev. G. S. Easton, pastor of Trinity Church, welcomed the Auxiliary members.

DOROTHY DIX

DEAR MISS DIX—How can a boy tell if he is in love? Are a funny feeling in your breast, forgetting yourself often, a desire to be with no other girl, forgiving her for anything she does and dreaming of her all day long signs of love? I will be so thankful if you can help me out.

SOUTH PARK.

ANSWER:

Well, son, no other complaint is so hard to diagnose as love, because so many of the symptoms are misleading and what a fellow so often thinks is a fatal heart attack is nothing more than a passing indisposition.

Now take your case, for instance. That funny feeling in your breast that you complain of may, of course, be a serious attack of love, but it is just as likely to be too much pie. Your dreaming of the girl all day long and your desire to be with no other cutie certainly indicates a slight rise of temperature, but that happens to every boy of your age whenever he thinks of the last girl he met, and isn't serious.

Your most alarming symptom is being able to forgive the girl for anything she does; letting her make a doormat out of you; letting her make you fetch and carry for her; letting her break dates with you when she meets a new man and whistle you back when she needs somebody to drag her around. But that isn't so much love as it is temporary softening of the brain. However, you will recover from that also in time.

So you see it isn't really easy to tell when you are in love, and it is no wonder that you are doubtful about the matter when you recall how many times you were certain that you had a case that you would never get over. Then in a few days—or week or months—you made such a perfect recovery that you couldn't even remember what you had, or how you cam to catch it. Some men go through life without ever being able to distinguish between the grand passion and a passing fancy. Which is a pity for them and for the women they marry.

So before you decide that you are in love for keeps, check up on a few points that will help you to reach a final decision. Is she the girl of your dreams? Is she a good-looker and a swell dresser who makes people "rubber" wherever she goes? Is she a fancy dancer? Is she an expert salve-spreader who tells you how wonderful you are? If so, put your emotions to the acid test. Dreams seldom come true, and some day you are mighty likely to wake up and wonder whatever made you think you wanted her.

But if you can think a homely girl is better looking than "Miss America"; if you like to dance with her when she steps on your toes, and if you can listen to home truths from her and like it, then that's real love. Another test of love is being able to stand unlimited quantities of a girl's society even when you are not having a petting party and she is not jollying you along. If you really pine to hear a girl talk about herself, and what Papa said and Mamma does, and the cute way the baby acts, then that's love that you can bank on.

But the best test of love is whether it makes you realize all of a sudden that there is a lot more in life than just going around and having good times, or mooning and dreaming about a girl's eyes. It is something that makes you want to roll up your sleeves and go to work for her and make a home and settle down in it for keeps. The acid test of a man's love for a woman is what he is willing to do for her.

DEAR DOROTHY DIX—I have been going with a boy for several years. He insists he is in love with me, but tells me he has no intention of marrying me or any one else. I really love him, but I don't know what to do about the situation.—BEWILDERED.

ANSWER:

Show him the door. That is the only intelligent answer to the problem of what to do with a man whose attentions are without intentions.

Face the fact that this man doesn't love you. He only loves himself. He will never love anybody but himself. If you are hanging on in the hope that some day you can make him care enough for you to be willing to give up his freedom for you and share his income with you, you are simply befooling yourself.

As long as you will let him, he will go on monopolizing your time and thoughts because it flatters his vanity for you to adore him. He gets a kick out of knowing that you would jump if he ever threw you the handkerchief. He enjoys coming to your house and eating your mother's good meals, besides which it saves him the price of a club. He likes to be seen out with a pretty girl and it is comfortable to have one whom he can date or not as he chooses.

But that is as far as he will ever go. He will hang around you until he gets tired of you, or until some younger and prettier girl comes along. Or one who has more money and social position. Then he will just simply drop out of the picture. And there is nothing you can do about it. But you have let him waste the years for you. You have let him keep you from many good times you could have had with other men and you have let him kill your chances of marrying. And you have nobody but yourself to blame for it.

A girl is lacking in common gumption if she doesn't give any man the air who doesnt pop the question in a reasonable length of time.

DEAR DOROTHY DIX—I live on a farm with my bachelor brother. I am 35 years old and unmarried. Have never even had a serious boy friend and I am lonely. I am considering answering one of those ads about what to do for loneliness and joining their correspondence clubs and writing to strange men in different parts of the country. The clubs guarantee to help one land a husband and happiness and contentment. What do you thing of the correspondent club idea?—MAY.

ANSWER:

I think it is the open door to trouble and that you will repent your folly in tears if you walk through it. Use a little common sense. Don't you know that any man who is respectable and fit for a woman to marry doesnt have to advertise for a wife, or marry a perfect stranger?

Don't you know that nobody on earth can guarantee getting a woman a husband who will make her happy and contented? Don't you know that there have been many cases of horrible murders committed by both men and women who got their victims by advertising for husbands and wives?

Believe me, sister, there are worse things than being an old maid. One of them is being married to a bigamist or a convict or a murderer who has only married you to get your little money and then desert you, or make away with you.

Choir Presents Concert At Park Street

The choir of Park Street Baptist Church gave its annual Concert last nght, singing before an appreciative and large audience that was expectant of the usual quality of vocal and instrumental entertainment offered by Stanley Northrop, director of the choir and organist. The choir was assisted by the Northrop String Ensemble, whose contributions to the program provided an attractive balance to the major choral numbers. The members of the ensemble are: Stanley Northrop and George Gatfield violins, Ross Gillespie viola, Tom Smith cello, Lloyd Boddington bass viol, and Harry Northrop piano.

Apparently the choir had gained a deeper texture in its men's section and advancement in tonal quality that was as attractive as usual in the beauty of its sopranos and altos. Its closing number "And the Glory," from the Messiah, was a striking example of the abilities of the Park Street chorus, the men's section giving an exceptionally fine support throughout with capable leadership in some of the passages assigned to them.

Two delightful numbers were given by the Ladies' quartette from the choir, composed of Misses Iva Pilling, Martha Sands, Nancy Lane and Agnes Sands. They sang "Indian Dawn" by Zamecnik, "Nearer My God To Thee" by Adams, and "Dreamin'" arranged by Mr. Northrop.

"Lullaby" by Brahms, sung by the choir, was one of the features of the program. Its choral effect was finely attuned to the theme and mood of the subject. Two novelty numbers were highly pleasing, "Mother Hubbard" by Victor Hely-Hutchinson and "Listen to the Lambs."

Mr. Northrop depended upon the resources of his choir for several soloists, incidentally sisters, Mrs. Clarence Corbett, soprano, and Mrs. George Batley, contralto.

Mrs. Corbett sang the soprano solo part in the choral number "O Lord I Come" by Bassford. Actually it was a vocal obligatto to Mr. Northrop's violin thematic part with choir accompaniment in the religious setting of "Angel's Serenade" by Braga, a beautiful number that was enhanced by Mrs. Corbett's sweet soprano.

Mrs. George Batley's number was "Beyond the Dawn," by Sanderson, displaying the development of her contralto voice in its rich texture and sensitiveness that won for her an encore, "He Shall Feed His Flock," from the Messiah.

The String Ensemble was generous with its good things, ballet suite "La Source" by Delibes; Hungarian Episode by Bendix, parts 1 and 2 of the ballet suite from Scubert's Rosamund; Pearl O'Mine by Fletcher; Oriental by Friml; and Spanish Dance No. 1 Moskowski.

Home and School Association News

QUEEN MARY SCHOOL

An exceptionally fine children's program, in which seventy-five children took part under the efficient guidance of their principal, Mr. O. M. Steer, and the teachers of the staff, was heard last night, when a meeting of the Queen Mary Home and School Association was held in the school's lower hall.

An audience of over one hundred and fifty parents was welcomed by the school principal. A brief and interesting resume of current events was given by Mrs. T. J. Carley, before the following program, with Mr. Jack Telford at the piano, was presented: Instrumental duet, Jean Hills and Nancy Berry; recitation, "Little Jack Frost," Paul Frise; Grade one presented a singing game; Tarantelle dance by Nancy Strickland and Beverly Hughes.

Grade 3, a playlet entitled "Elves and the Shoemaker"; recitation, "How Bobby Rabbit got his short tail," Donald Macdonald; Grade 2, song with action; violin solo, Llewellyn Murphy; piano solo, Vivian Martin; reading, Margaret McElroy; tap dance, Shirley Fitzsimmons; Grade 4, playlet, "Mother Goose"; Hawaiian music by Jean and Elva Gray.

Miss M. Stenton's room won the junior attendance banner; Mr. E. W. Wagar's room the senior attendance banner. Following the program the children were treated to candy, and tea was served to the parents by members of the refreshment committee.

QUEEN ALEXANDRA SCHOOL

Handicrafts for small children was the subject of a delightful address given by Mrs. J. E. R. Munro on Monday evening at a meeting of the Queen Alexandra Home and School Association.

Among the simple and essential things necessary in the first steps of child handicraft were classed brown wrapping paper, crayons, scrapbooks, paste, plasticine, and blunt scissors. As the child advances, soap carving may be taught. Cork work, done on a spool topped with four nails, which produces mats, belts, teapot stands, etc., was also suggested as an interesting work, as well as weaving by simply using three or four sticks of macaroni; paper cutting; the making of Easter eggs—and Mrs. Munro advised her listeners to allow the child's imagination full sway in the painting of the eggs. Puppets, which are so popular at present with boys and girls, were also discussed, and parents were told of the visits which a representative from the Ontario Welfare Council n Toronto makes to the Y.W.C.A., where lessons which stimulate the imagination are given in puppetry and other handicraft subjects.

Very fine examples of each of the handicrafts discussed by Mrs. Munro were on display.

Mrs. V. R. Currie, speaking on Child Psychology, issued a warning to ambitious mothers, advising them not to allow their child to be overworked by too many outside activities.

Mrs. Morrow, vice-president of the Association, presided. The meeting was opened with "O Canada" and the Lord's Prayer repeated in unison. Following a brief business period, a vocal solo was given by Miss June Wellwood, accompanied by Mrs. Wellwood, and a guitar selection by Miss Eleanor Dixon.

After the meeting, which closed with "God Save the King," the members viewed the table of display handiwork, and the handicraft sales table, which was in charge of Mrs. S. T. Wallis, Mrs. J. Bateson, and Mrs. A. W. Ray.

Outstanding at the display table were place cards, daintily painted, and appliqued with tiny sheils in pastel shades; a huge frog made of green velvet and shiny green satin, and a child's dress beautifully smocked, but fashioned at a cost of only fifteen cents.

Kate T. Munro Bride Of Francis J. Carter

Murray Street Baptist Church was the setting for a lovely wedding on Saturday afternoon, March 4, when Miss Kate Tartar Munro, daughter of Mr. E. A. Munro and the late Mrs. Munro, became the bride of Mr. Francis James Carter, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. W. Carter. The marriage was solemnized by Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe.

The bride was charmingly gowned in robin's egg blue georgette over blue taffeta, and wore a bandeau of orange blossoms and seed pearls. She carried a bridal bouquet of white carnations, narcissus and lily of the valley tied with robin's egg blue tulle, the streamers caught with bows of blue satin.

Mrs. Lyle Quackenbush, niece of the bride, was her attendant, wearing a frock of pink taffeta, and a bandeau of tiny pink velvet flowers. She carried pink roses tied with pink tulle. The groom was attended by Mr. Lyle Quackenbush.

The Danger In It

Virginio Gayda is an outstanding editor in Rome whose writings appear in La Voce d'Italia. He has been known several times to have reflected in his writings the opinions of Mussolini, and often enough he has gone in advance of the dictator. It is quite possible—indeed probable—that the people of Italy believe what Gayda writes.

His most recent contribution is to the effect that the democracies are preparing for a great war to put an end to the totalitarian states, and he bases his findings on the amount which Britain is spending for rearmament. When the British storehouse has been well filled with all that is needed for war then Premier Chamberlain will cease talking in terms of peace and will be ready for rough methods.

We do not believe one word of what Gayda writes. We are as certain as we can be that it is all wrong. Britain is not looking for war; Britain does not want war, and Britain a few years ago had gone into the business of disarmament on such a scale as the country had not known before. Germany and Italy set the pace for rearmament, and Britain had no course open but to go back into the business.

The serious part comes in here. We do not believe what Gayda writes, but that makes no difference at all. Gayda is not writing for the benefit of the people in this city or this country, but he is writing to influence opinion in his own country, and we have no doubt his readers believe what he says. And that is where the harm comes in.

What he is actually using is a very old form of propaganda; it was a favorite in Russia in the early days after the revolution when it was necessary to make the people there believe the world outside was planning an attack. No attack came. Hitler has used the same idea in rearming Germany. His country had to fight for its place against the whole world and the people of Germany had to place bullets before butter, and they have had to sacrifice to an extent of which he knows nothing. Mussolini built his great armament on the same plea, and now Gayda is busy telling the people there is danger of attack as soon as Britain has sufficient strength. It is as wrong as it can be wrong, but the trouble and the danger is in the fact that the people in Italy believe Gayda is telling the truth.

Probe Comes Too Late

Already they are probing the fire which destroyed the Queen Hotel in Halifax. At least 25 people are believed to have perished in that fire, and no one seems certain that the list is not greater. Only a few have been identified.

Possibly it is right and necessary that such a probe be held, but there is generally a serious degree of futility attached to such work. Those who could tell the most about it are no longer present, nor will they be. The exact evidence which can be secured from a mass of debris is not at any time great, nor is it accurate or convincing.

The one thing which is abundantly known is that when fire started in the hotel the people could not find a way to get out. Some of them jumped from windows thirty feet up; others tried to find safety by climbing to the roof, arriving there only a few minutes before the roof itself caved in.

It does look very much like a case where the hotel was able to give its customers meals and a place to sleep, but in the hour of danger the guests had to shuffle for themselves against odds which were too great. We realize it is easy to say after such an accident that the time for probing was before the fire started, but that is the direction in which truth is located.

Remaking The Legislature

Premier Hepburn has found it advisable to explain that any plan he may have for redistribution of seats will not affect the present members of the Legislature. They were elected for the full term—whatever that may be—and will not be disturbed. Mr. Hepburn is apparently not much taken with the plea of representation by population because such a plan, if followed closely, would mean that one-third of the membership of the Legislature would come from Toronto or within easy motoring distance of it.

For a long time we have talked of representation by population, and to a considerable extent followed that plan. In Ontario we had 82 members in the first Legislature in 1867, and in 1890 the number had increased to 90; in 1911 there were 105; in 1914 the number was raised to 111, and in 1926 to 112. In 1934 it was decreased to 90 and that is where it stands now. The movement has been more marked in a new province such as Alberta where there were 25 members in the first Legislature, and the number increased to 41, then to 55 and 58, then to 60 and finally to 63, the present membership.

It would be dangerous to follow a plan which threw a great share of representation in a province like Ontario in the hands of the larger centres of population because those larger centres are actually existing by reason of the support they receive from the rest of the province. Head offices of companies doing business all over the country may be located in Toronto for instance, and they would furnish a great deal of employment and attract a good deal of added population, but their actual business is coming from all over the province.

As things stand today it would be wise to consider that the rural section of Ontario needs attention; it needs its voice heard in a plain and emphatic way in the Legislature if for no other reason than it is not doing as well as it should. A sparsely settled county may have more need of a representative than one which has plenty of people and much activity. It would be dangerous to assume that because there are many people huddled together in one place that representation should keep pace with the extent of the huddling. It seems that is what Premier Hepburn has in mind and we believe he is right.

Keeping Up An Estate

The Duke of Northumberland is wealthy; he is a bachelor and 28 years old, succeeding to the title in 1930 on the death of his father. Alnwick Castle has been the family home for six centuries but the Duke is leaving the place. It has 200 rooms and requires a staff of 100 or more to keep it up, so he is leaving for Lesbury House, which has a mere 20 rooms. There is income of about $350,000 a year from royalties in coal mined on his property.

When the estate passed into the hands of the present Duke there were death duties of $4,690,000 assessed against it and there is a period of 12 years in which these must be paid, and that seems to be one of the reasons for abandoning the castle with the 200 rooms. He must do some keen reckoning to satisfy the government and at the same time save the estate.

Since the invention of inheritance taxation and its gradual increase the real joy of holding one of those old estates with castles and all has been on the decrease. They are great things for tradition and atmosphere, but when one looks at the way in which millions of the inhabitants of England live, there is not much actual justification for the continuance of these great estates. The trouble comes in finding something to do with them. Only a man of substantial wealth would think of purchasing one because he would know in advance that the reason which forced the former owner out indicated the very conditions which the new owner would have to face. We can think at the moment of one resident of a Western Ontario city who will shortly inherit an estate in the old Land, but he looks forward to it with no pleasure at all. He has little money in his present position, and the estate yields insufficient revenue to maintain it. He cannot sell it because it is entailed.

One might at first glance be inclined to envy the Duke of Northumberland, but we believe any sensible person would hesitate to do so. The government is relentless as a collector, and trying to live in a 20-room house and at the same time maintain a 200-room castle so it will not fall into ruin is not exactly our idea of a pleasant way to live. There are plenty of folk in cottages who probably have a more comfortable existence.

The Curse Of The Pharaohs

When Howard Carter died at the age of 66 in London, 16 years after he had opened the tomb of King Tut-Ankh-Amen in Egypt, there was temporary revival of talk about the "curse of the Pharaohs." The body of King Tut was encased in three coffins, and the inner one was of pure gold. In the tomb were priceless objects. The legend of the curse is in the words, "Death shall come on swift wings to him that toucheth the tomb of the Pharaoh."

Carter himself always scoffed at the idea, and so have a number of sensible people, but each time the death occurs of some one who was present at the opening of the Tut tomb the old story comes up for discussion. Fifteen of those who had something to do with the opening of the tomb or financing the Carter expedition have died, and in 1935 the actuarial supervisor of a large insurance company gave his opinion that the number was rather "abnormal."

Lord Carnarvon died when he was 57 of blood poisoning; George J. Gould, American millionaire, visited the tomb, caught cold and died of pneumonia; Ali Kamel Bey, 24, visited the tomb and was shot by his French bride. It is possible to go through the entire list and find that death has come often enough in strange ways. Dr. Breasted, American Egyptologist, who was present at the opening of the inner chamber, and who had always scoffed at the idea of the curse, saying he had slept in the tomb for two weeks, died of an illness the cause or nature of which was not determined. But he was 70 years of age.

Those who scoff most were fond of recalling that at the time when King Tut was reigning Moses would be leading the children of Israel through the Red Sea and the Pharaoh of such a time would have plenty to worry about apart from attending to the leaving of a curse for those who tampered with his tomb. On the other hand there have been many strange deaths for those who had to do with the opening. If it were all a coincidence one still has the word of the insurance man that the number and nature of the deaths was at least "abnormal."

Planes Can Get Lost

Second Lieut. N. A. Cowles of the U.S. Air Corps, a young man of 23 years, crashed into a barn in the north end of Middlesex county. He was instantly killed and the machine took fire and was at once destroyed.

Cowles had started from Boston to travel to the air field at Detroit and was supplied with sufficient gasoline for five hours in the air. Detroit is almost due west of Boston and the distance by air would not be over 600 miles, so the flyer should have made the trip with plenty of fuel to spare.

It was a dark night when he crashed, and how long he had been looking for a landing field will never be known. He was apparently so much off his course that he was lost.

There is something tragic and pathetic about the end of this young man of 23. He had a regular military plane, a good machine with all the newest equipment; probably a full set of instruments for determining direction, speed and altitude, and yet in darkness and fog he was as hopelessly lost as one could be. There may be something in such a death which may lead to precautions which will save others. Otherwise his death seems to have been in vain.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Ottawa is expecting 250,000 visitors during the stay of the royal visitors in May, and that would seem the right time for Ottawa to take a census.

Flock of wild geese passed over Keene, and they were headed north, so if geese actually know very much spring must be with prosperity around the elusive corner.

Another suit has been started against the estate of Mrs. Mabelle Horlick Sidley, malted milk heiress, demonstrating once more that it is often a blunder to build up a large estate and have a number of relatives at the same time.

Two dogs barked during the night at Belleville so they were put in the pound which is not generally used in the winter season. It is busier in the summer because it is against the law to allow cows to graze along the main street.

King and Queen are leaving England on May 6 instead of the 8th so they will not be delayed by fog in reaching Canada by the 15th. Perhaps they are so keen to get over here that they can't wait for the 8th to come.

Premier Aberhart approves of Herridge's new Democracy party, but is not certain that the Social Credit people will join up with it. Perhaps Mr. Herridge is hoping their decision will be to leave him alone.

Suggestion is made that amnesty should be shown to prisoners in Canada during the visit of the King. Kindly thought, but now and then we come to the conclusion it is about time to do something for the folks who attend to their own business and keep out of jail.

Postman in Kansas City had to deliver a letter which was addressed to the most beautiful girl on a certain street, and the knowing postie picked the right one. So when you see these fellows walking about the city every day you can take it for granted they are taking in all the sights.

ONE POINT

(By A.R.K.)

¶ Old Back Seat James will always rise, and be the first to criticize, on what the preacher said; he wasn't preaching strong enough, he gave the folk such fluffy stuff, and most of it he read.

¶ One day the preacher in his zest, nigh tore the buttons from his vest, and James was stupefied; he said the preacher was too loud, as though he hollered at a crowd, should be more dignified.

¶ Next Sunday on the preacher spoke, talked rather gently to the folk, and they were deeply stirred; but Back Seat James quick to complain, said on his ears he put a strain, but never heard a word.

¶ Right near the stove sits Back Seat James, says heat is easy on his pains, he suffers quite a lot; but he complains when he sits there, that he can hardly breathe the air, because it gets too hot.

¶ Some days they sing the hymns too fast, he hasn't breath enough to last, can't stand the pace they go; and then next Sunday he will find, that they are lagging much behind, they're singing far too slow.

¶ But one good point has Back Seat James, the man who rises and complains, let's give the man his due; although he chants his hymn of hate, he's never known to be late—he's always in his pew.

Our Statesmen At Their Labor

Mr. PLAXTON: What did you do between 1930 and 1935?

Mr. MacNICOL: If you were in your seat—which you are not, very often—

Mr. PLAXTON: I came in particularly to listen to you.

Mr. MacNICOL: —you would have heard me say a short time ago that in various lines of business many thousands of men were given additional employment between 1930 and 1935. If you had been here you would have heard that.

Mr. PLAXTON: I heard it.

Mr. MacNICOL: I might say, since you have said that, that if the present government wishes to do anything for unemployment, let them make, in the John Inglis Company plant, $6,000,000, $8,000,000 or $10,000,000 worth of the tractors they are importing.

Mr. PLAXTON: The plant which you wanted closed down.

Mr. EULER: Who took the duties off tractors?

Mr. MacNICOL: That is not the point. If I were the Minister of Finance I would put a duty on.

Mr. MacNICOL: And I would see that the price was not enhanced, either. Different manufactures tell me, if they could get a market for them, they can make tractors by the thousands for less than people are now paying in the United States.

Mr. EULER: Who took the duty off?

Mr. MacNICOL: The duty is meant to give employment. The government can regulate the price just the same as the Bennett government did.

To continue with the clippings: "Extra 1,000 sought relief at Owen Sound last year."

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER: I regret to interrupt the hon. member, but he has spoken for forty minutes.

Some hon. MEMBERS: Go on.

Mr. MacNICOL: I have just about finished.

Mr. CRERAR: Finish it.

Mr. POWER: This is good stuff.

Some hon. MEMBERS: Unanimous consent.

Some hon. MEMBERS: Go ahead.

Mr. MacNICOL: Well, I have just about finished. I was going to add that on January 29, 1939, the Reverend Doctor Peter Bryce, well known to a good many welfare workers in Toronto, had this to say, after making a survey:

I assert that the situation in Toronto at the present moment is the most serious I have known in my thirty years' residence.

That is the truth.

What has this government done for employment? What did the treaty of 1935 do for employment, when we know that conditions in Toronto to-day are worse than they have been for thirty years? It is all wrong for members to talk about conditions improving, when they cannot back up their statement with figures.

Then, what did the Premier of Ontario say?

Some hon. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

Mr. MacNICOL: I knew my hon. friends would like to hear that.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER: Order.

Mr. MacNICOL: He said:

I see no relief from the burden in sight. I am frank in confessing I don't know just where to head in on this problem.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER: Order.

An hon. MEMBER: You don't want to hear from him.

Mr. THOMPSON: Can't take it.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER: Order.

LET'S TACKLE OTTAWA.

Through an unofficial source the Nugget learned that Royal tour plans actually include a visit to North Bay and Callander and that this will be announced in "due time". It wouldn't be fair to give us short notice of Their Majesties being routed this way, and so, we should continue to exert pressure at Ottawa to give us as good a break, as Windsor, Brandon and New Westminster.

Ottawa should be made to tell why the T. and N.O. district is to be shunned when less important out-of-the-way points are to be favored, or reveal whether or not plans actually provide for the Royal train being routed this way.

How about a deputation slipping down to Ottawa to put the question fairly and squarely before the Prime Minister?—North Bay Nugget.

WAGES PAID

EDITOR Examiner: Sir,—I saw a short reference in the papers to the earnings of clerks employed in stores in 1937. I think the figures had been gathered by the Bureau of Statistics. I was wondering if you have that information and if it would be possible to publish it.

LOCAL CLERK

The information asked for was recently released through the Department of Trade and Commerce. It is given here:

Weekly earnings of full-time male employees in independent retail stores averaged $20.90 in 1937 compared with $20.48 in 1936, increases being general for all provinces and for about two-thirds of the individual lines of businesses for which data are available. Average earnings per full-time male employee were highest in Manitoba at $24.15 and lowest in Prince Edward Island at $16.65. Averages for other provinces follow: British Columbia, $22.87; Ontario, $22.06; Alberta, $21.58; New Brunswick, $19.54 Nova Scotia, $18.77; Saskatchewan, $18.53; and Quebec, $18.11.

The average figure for full-time female employee of independent retail stores was $13.74 in 1937 compared with $13.57 in 1936, and ranged from $15.04 in British Columbia to $9.76 in Prince Edward Island. The remaining provinces were as follows: Alberta, $14.50; Ontario, $14.43; Manitoba, $13.65; Saskatchewan, $13.62; Quebec, $12.25; Nova Scotia, $11.90; New Brunswick, $11.52.

Chain stores reported weekly earnings for full-time male employees of $21.20 in 1937 compared with $21.14 the year before. The range provincially was between $19.00 in Quebec and $24.05 in Manitoba, the remaining areas being as follows: Prince Edward Island, $23.03; Alberta, $22.83; British Columbia, $22.18; Ontario, $21.96; New Brunswick, $21.89; Saskatchewan, $20.77; Nova Scotia, $19.84.

Weekly earnings for full-time female employees in chain organizations were also practically unchanged from 1936, the average being $13.12 compared with $12.96. The figures follow by provinces: British Columbia, $14.33; Saskatchewan, $14.26; Manitoba, $14.43; Ontario, $13.42; Alberta, $13.43; Quebec, $12.46; Nova Scotia, $11.44; New Brunswick, $10.98; and Prince Edward Island, $9.09.

Weekly earnings of full-time male employees in wholesale trading establishments averaged $27.17, being somewhat lower than the $27.78 calculated for 1936. The averages follow by provinces: Ontario, $28.74; Alberta, $28.64; Manitoba, $28.38; Saskatchewan, $26.20; British Columbia, $27.80; Quebec, $26.40; Nova Scotia, $25.33; New Brunswick, $24.21; Prince Edward Island, $18.66.

ROYAL COMMISSIONS

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—Will you please enlighten me on the following questions concerning Royal Commissions in the last 10 years.

1. What qualifications are necessary for an appointment to a Royal Commission? (a member of the bar or legal profession, an authority on the commissions object, an active business man, a retired man because of his political loyalty, or any man the Government chooses to appoint).

2. What size or how many are there usually appointed to a Commission or a Board of Inquiry?

3. How would a Royal Commission or a Board of Inquire (let me say as an example The Inquirey into dealings with Grain Futures presided over by Sir Josiah Stamp,) spend $220,573.00 in one year (1931), would it be hotel, transportation, secretarial expenses, plus a nice fee to each member?

4. Is there ever a financial statement or expense sheet given along with the findings or reports of Royal Commissions, if so to whom?

A YOUNG CANADIAN.

1. There are as a rule no professional qualifications regarding the personal of a commission, although one with legal training is almost invariably appointed as chairman. The government may select any man it considers qualified, and as a rule the appointee is known as being favorably disposed toward the government.

2. There is no restricted number, although three is a number often appointed.

3. The amount spent to finance a commission would be made up of fees for the members, travelling expenses and living allowances; also by fees paid to counsel engaged.

4. The returns of all such expenses are made to parliament, and almost without exception are published in Parliamentary Reports in answer to a question placed on the order paper by a member. All such accounts come finally to the attention of the Auditor-General.

• Putting Blame On the People

IN discussion on the Government's request for permission to borrow $750,000,000 Hon. C. A. Dunning, Minister of Finance, pointed out that a great change had come about in the conception of the function of Parliament. Parliament he reminded the members, originally came into existence for the primary purpose of restraining the King from spending too much of the people's money; but now says the Owen Sound Sun-Times, the situation was exactly the reverse, with the people demanding that the King—represented by the Government—spent more and more of their money.

That gets us back to the foolish, mistaken idea that "the Government" is a modern pattern of the famous purse of Fortunatus — that it has the power of conjuring unlimited sums out of empty air to meet the demands of every Tom, Dick and Harry. Most people know —and those who do not should— that a tremendous amount of governmental spending is brought about by the demands of constituents on their representatives. It has been said, flippantly but truly, that the electors are prone to choose not the best man but the most promising—the man, that is, who can make most promises. It does give a candidate a tremendous "pull" to be able to promise a new post office, an armory, or something else, built out of public funds; and even though the candidate knows that it is not urgently needed he is likely to promise rather than jeopardize his chance of being elected.

And so the game goes on. The demand for unneeded, unjustified public works has been a factor in increasing the national debt of Canada to a dangerous figure; but, in spite of all that has been said and written parliamentary representatives are being hounded for public works by their constituents, regardless of their necessity or utility.

If the people could be brought to realize that it is their money which pays for all those fancy ornaments—that the Government's only source of revenue is by taxes — and that they, not "the Government," are carrying a staggering load of debt—the demand for public works would soon fall off. The process could be hastened if we could get a Government which would put its foot down on this indiscriminate spending — but that might savor too strongly of dictatorship. The good old "pork barrel" —patronage—has been in use too long for it to be easy to get away from it.

SNOW IS A FRIEND.

Snow storms are different. Snow is a friend, its attendant cruelties merely incidental. It protects winter wheat and the roots of all growing things. Its moisture penetrates the soil instead of eroding and destroying it.

Giving familiar objects an aspect of unreality, a snow storm is something of an artist. Bracing though it is, it certainly reduces the tension of living—slows up the pace, calls back the more leisurely ways of the horse-and-buggy age and of ages more distant.

Perhaps its greatest gift is that it masks all the ways of man and restores the ancient dominion of nature. In a manner of speaking, it is a kindly Return to the Primitive.—(Cincinnati Times Star)

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

And, behold, there was a man which had his hand withered. And they asked him, saying, Is it lawful to heal on the sabbath days? that they might accuse him. And he said unto them, What man shall there be among you, that shall have one sheep, and if it fall into a pit on the sabbath day, will he not lay hold on it, and lift it out? How much then is a man better than a sheep? Wherefore it is lawful to do well on the sabbath days.

Then saith he to the man, Stretch forth thine hand. And he stretched it forth; and it was restored whole, like as the other.—Matt. xii, 10-13.

LADY SLIPPERS.

SPRING will soon be on the way, and thoughts will be turning to the wild flowers again. A timely little pamphlet on "Our Wild Flowers" has just been issued by the Federation of Ontario Naturalists, Toronto, from which this interesting note on the "intelligence" of plants is taken:

"Not long ago we found two different kinds of lady slippers growing side by side, the pink moccasin that will die without acid, and the showy lady slipper that loves neutral or limy soil. Digging down to unearth the mystery, we found the pink moccasin had spread its roots at the surface in an acid top-stratum of hemlock and granite, but the showy lady slipper had sunk a tap root below and then spread its roots in a layer of limestone."—Toronto Star.

We commend the Star's ability to select something written in an interesting way about wild flowers. The pamphlet from which the Star quotes was written by F. J. A. Morris of Peterborough and few men possess superior qualifications for dealing with this subject.—Ed. Examiner.

The next afternoon, Thursday, the envelope was delivered to THE JOURNAL, at 1.45 o'clock. It had been about 21 hours in coming half way across the continent, this time including delivery. "Distance", as the Times-Herald says on the opening of this new air mail service, "has been eliminated." Science and invention have mastered geography.—Ottawa Journal.

DIDN'T GO FAR ENOUGH.

The League of Nations did not break down because it went too far but because it did not go nearly far enough. It perpetuated nationalism in principle and thus made anarchy the law.

I still remember what H. G. Wells said about the League of Nations in a conversation many years ago. "You can't make a motorcar out of the 'beginning' of a perambulator." You cannot make a community out of individuals who will surrender not one iota of their person l sovereignty, and you cannot make a world order out of states that will not merge a bit of their national sovereignty.

But if we do not make it freely gangs will rule us internally and externally. Racketeers can always shake down a disorganized economy.— (Dorothy Thompson)

The Danger In It

Virginio Gayda is an outstanding editor in Rome whose writings appear in La Voce d'Italia. He has been known several times to have reflected in his writings the opinions of Mussolini, and often enough he has gone in advance of the dictator. It is quite possible—indeed probable—that the people of Italy believe what Gayda writes.

His most recent contribution is to the effect that the democracies are preparing for a great war to put an end to the totalitarian states, and he bases his findings on the amount which Britain is spending for rearmament. When the British storehouse has been well filled with all that is needed for war then Premier Chamberlain will cease talking in terms of peace and will be ready for rough methods.

We do not believe one word of what Gayda writes. We are as certain as we can be that it is all wrong. Britain is not looking for war; Britain does not want war, and Britain a few years ago had gone into the business of disarmament on such a scale as the country had not known before. Germany and Italy set the pace for rearmament, and Britain had no course open but to go back into the business.

The serious part comes in here. We do not believe what Gayda writes, but that makes no difference at all. Gayda is not writing for the benefit of the people in this city or this country, but he is writing to influence opinion in his own country, and we have no doubt his readers believe what he says. And that is where the harm comes in.

What he is actually using is a very old form of propaganda; it was a favorite in Russia in the early days after the revolution when it was necessary to make the people there believe the world outside was planning an attack. No attack came. Hitler has used the same idea in rearming Germany. His country had to fight for its place against the whole world and the people of Germany had to place bullets before butter, and they have had to sacrifice to an extent of which he knows nothing. Mussolini built his great armament on the same plea, and now Gayda is busy telling the people there is danger of attack as soon as Britain has sufficient strength. It is as wrong as it can be wrong, but the trouble and the danger is in the fact that the people in Italy believe Gayda is telling the truth.

Probe Comes Too Late

Already they are probing the fire which destroyed the Queen Hotel in Halifax. At least 25 people are believed to have perished in that fire, and no one seems certain that the list is not greater. Only a few have been identified.

Possibly it is right and necessary that such a probe be held, but there is generally a serious degree of futility attached to such work. Those who could tell the most about it are no longer present, nor will they be. The exact evidence which can be secured from a mass of debris is not at any time great, nor is it accurate or convincing.

The one thing which is abundantly known is that when fire started in the hotel the people could not find a way to get out. Some of them jumped from windows thirty feet up; others tried to find safety by climbing to the roof, arriving there only a few minutes before the roof itself caved in.

It does look very much like a case where the hotel was able to give its customers meals and a place to sleep, but in the hour of danger the guests had to shuffle for themselves against odds which were too great. We realize it is easy to say after such an accident that the time for probing was before the fire started, but that is the direction in which truth is located.

Remaking The Legislature

Premier Hepburn has found it advisable to explain that any plan he may have for redistribution of seats will not affect the present members of the Legislature. They were elected for the full term—whatever that may be—and will not be disturbed. Mr. Hepburn is apparently not much taken with the plea of representation by population because such a plan, if followed closely, would mean that one-third of the membership of the Legislature would come from Toronto or within easy motoring distance of it.

For a long time we have talked of representation by population, and to a considerable extent followed that plan. In Ontario we had 82 members in the first Legislature in 1867, and in 1890 the number had increased to 90; in 1911 there were 105; in 1914 the number was raised to 111, and in 1926 to 112. In 1934 it was decreased to 90 and that is where it stands now. The movement has been more marked in a new province such as Alberta where there were 25 members in the first Legislature, and the number increased to 41, then to 55 and 58, then to 60 and finally to 63, the present membership.

It would be dangerous to follow a plan which threw a great share of representation in a province like Ontario in the hands of the larger centres of population because those larger centres are actually existing by reason of the support they receive from the rest of the province. Head offices of companies doing business all over the country may be located in Toronto for instance, and they would furnish a great deal of employment and attract a good deal of added population, but their actual business is coming from all over the province.

As things stand today it would be wise to consider that the rural section of Ontario needs attention; it needs its voice heard in a plain and emphatic way in the Legislature if for no other reason than it is not doing as well as it should. A sparsely settled county may have more need of a representative than one which has plenty of people and much activity. It would be dangerous to assume that because there are many people huddled together in one place that representation should keep pace with the extent of the huddling. It seems that is what Premier Hepburn has in mind and we believe he is right.

Keeping Up An Estate

The Duke of Northumberland is wealthy; he is a bachelor and 28 years old, succeeding to the title in 1930 on the death of his father. Alnwick Castle has been the family home for six centuries but the Duke is leaving the place. It has 200 rooms and requires a staff of 100 or more to keep it up, so he is leaving for Lesbury House, which has a mere 20 rooms. There is income of about $350,000 a year from royalties in coal mined on his property.

When the estate passed into the hands of the present Duke there were death duties of $4,690,000 assessed against it and there is a period of 12 years in which these must be paid, and that seems to be one of the reasons for abandoning the castle with the 200 rooms. He must do some keen reckoning to satisfy the government and at the same time save the estate.

Since the invention of inheritance taxation and its gradual increase the real joy of holding one of those old estates with castles and all has been on the decrease. They are great things for tradition and atmosphere, but when one looks at the way in which millions of the inhabitants of England live, there is not much actual justification for the continuance of these great estates. The trouble comes in finding something to do with them. Only a man of substantial wealth would think of purchasing one because he would know in advance that the reason which forced the former owner out indicated the very conditions which the new owner would have to face. We can think at the moment of one resident of a Western Ontario city who will shortly inherit an estate in the old Land, but he looks forward to it with no pleasure at all. He has little money in his present position, and the estate yields insufficient revenue to maintain it. He cannot sell it because it is entailed.

One might at first glance be inclined to envy the Duke of Northumberland, but we believe any sensible person would hesitate to do so. The government is relentless as a collector, and trying to live in a 20-room house and at the same time maintain a 200-room castle so it will not fall into ruin is not exactly our idea of a pleasant way to live. There are plenty of folk in cottages who probably have a more comfortable existence.

When Howard Carter died at the age of 66 in London, 16 years after he had opened the tomb of King Tut-Ankh-Amen in Egypt, there was temporary revival of talk about the "curse of the Pharaohs." The body of King Tut was encased in three coffins, and the inner one was of pure gold. In the tomb were priceless objects. The legend of the curse is in the words, "Death shall come on swift wings to him that toucheth the tomb of the Pharaoh."

Carter himself always scoffed at the idea, and so have a number of sensible people, but each time the death occurs of some one who was present at the opening of the Tut tomb the old story comes up for discussion. Fifteen of those who had something to do with the opening of the tomb or financing the Carter expedition have died, and in 1935 the actuarial supervisor of a large insurance company gave his opinion that the number was rather "abnormal."

Lord Carnarvon died when he was 57 of blood poisoning; George J. Gould, American millionaire, visited the tomb, caught cold and died of pneumonia; Ali Kamel Bey, 24, visited the tomb and was shot by his French bride. It is possible to go through the entire list and find that death has come often enough in strange ways. Dr. Breasted, American Egyptologist, who was present at the opening of the inner chamber, and who had always scoffed at the idea of the curse, saying he had slept in the tomb for two weeks, died of an illness the cause or nature of which was not determined. But he was 70 years of age.

Those who scoff most were fond of recalling that at the time when King Tut was reigning Moses would be leading the children of Israel through the Red Sea and the Pharaoh of such a time would have plenty to worry about apart from attending to the leaving of a curse for those who tampered with his tomb. On the other hand there have been many strange deaths for those who had to do with the opening. If it were all a coincidence one still has the word of the insurance man that the number and nature of the deaths was at least "abnormal."

Planes Can Get Lost

Second Lieut. N. A. Cowles of the U.S. Air Corps, a young man of 23 years, crashed into a barn in the north end of Middlesex county. He was instantly killed and the machine took fire and was at once destroyed.

Cowles had started from Boston to travel to the air field at Detroit and was supplied with sufficient gasoline for five hours in the air. Detroit is almost due west of Boston and the distance by air would not be over 600 miles, so the flyer should have made the trip with plenty of fuel to spare.

It was a dark night when he crashed, and how long he had been looking for a landing field will never be known. He was apparently so much off his course that he was lost.

There is something tragic and pathetic about the end of this young man of 23. He had a regular military plane, a good machine with all the newest equipment; probably a full set of instruments for determining direction, speed and altitude, and yet in darkness and fog he was as hopelessly lost as one could be. There may be something in such a death which may lead to precautions which will save others. Otherwise his death seems to have been in vain.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Ottawa is expecting 250,000 visitors during the stay of the royal visitors in May, and that would seem the right time for Ottawa to take a census.

Flock of wild geese passed over Keene, and they were headed north, so if geese actually know very much spring must be with prosperity around the elusive corner.

Another suit has been started against the estate of Mrs. Mabelle Horlick Sidley, malted milk heiress, demonstrating once more that it is often a blunder to build up a large estate and have a number of relatives at the same time.

Two dogs barked during the night at Belleville so they were put in the pound which is not generally used in the winter season. It is busier in the summer because it is against the law to allow cows to graze along the main street.

King and Queen are leaving England on May 6 instead of the 8th so they will not be delayed by fog in reaching Canada by the 15th. Perhaps they are so keen to get over here that they can't wait for the 8th to come.

Premier Aberhart approves of Herridge's new Democracy party, but is not certain that the Social Credit people will join up with it. Perhaps Mr. Herridge is hoping their decision will be to leave him alone.

Suggestion is made that amnesty should be shown to prisoners in Canada during the visit of the King. Kindly thought, but now and then we come to the conclusion it is about time to do something for the folks who attend to their own business and keep out of jail.

Postman in Kansas City had to deliver a letter which was addressed to the most beautiful girl on a certain street, and the knowing postie picked the right one. So when you see these fellows walking about the city every day you can take it for granted they are taking in all the sights.

ONE POINT

(By A.R.K.)

¶ Old Back Seat James will always rise, and be the first to criticize, on what the preacher said; he wasn't preaching strong enough, he gave the folk such fluffy stuff, and most of it he read.

¶ One day the preacher in his zest, nigh tore the buttons from his vest, and James was stupefied; he said the preacher was too loud, as though he hollered at a crowd, should be more dignified.

¶ Next Sunday on the preacher spoke, talked rather gently to the folk, and they were deeply stirred; but Back Seat James quick to complain, said on his ears he put a strain, but never heard a word.

¶ Right near the stove sits Back Seat James, says heat is easy on his pains, he suffers quite a lot; but he complains when he sits there, that he can hardly breathe the air, because it gets too hot.

¶ Some days they sing the hymns too fast, he hasn't breath enough to last, can't stand the pace they go; and then next Sunday he will find, that they are lagging much behind, they're singing far too slow.

¶ But one good point has Back Seat James, the man who rises and complains, let's give the man his due; although he chants his hymn of hate, he's never known to be late—he's always in his pew.

Our Statesmen At Their Labor

Mr. PLAXTON: What did you do between 1930 and 1935?

Mr. MacNICOL: If you were in your seat—which you are not, very often—

Mr. PLAXTON: I came in particularly to listen to you.

Mr. MacNICOL: —you would have heard me say a short time ago that in various lines of business many thousands of men were given additional employment between 1930 and 1935. If you had been here you would have heard that.

Mr. PLAXTON: I heard it.

Mr. MacNICOL: I might say, since you have said that, that if the present government wishes to do anything for unemployment, let them make, in the John Inglis Company plant, $6,000,000, $8,000,000 or $10,000,000 worth of the tractors they are importing.

Mr. PLAXTON: The plant which you wanted closed down.

Mr. EULER: Who took the duties off tractors?

Mr. MacNICOL: That is not the point. If I were the Minister of Finance I would put a duty on.

Mr. MacNICOL: And I would see that the price was not enhanced, either. Different manufactures tell me, if they could get a market for them, they can make tractors by the thousands for less than people are now paying in the United States.

Mr. EULER: Who took the duty off?

Mr. MacNICOL: The duty is meant to give employment. The government can regulate the price just the same as the Bennett government did.

To continue with the clippings: "Extra 1,000 sought relief at Owen Sound last year."

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER: I regret to interrupt the hon. member, but he has spoken for forty minutes.

Some hon. MEMBERS: Go on.

Mr. MacNICOL: I have just about finished.

Mr. CRERAR: Finish it.

Mr. POWER: This is good stuff.

Some hon. MEMBERS: Unanimous consent.

Some hon. MEMBERS: Go ahead.

Mr. MacNICOL: Well, I have just about finished. I was going to add that on January 29, 1939, the Reverend Doctor Peter Bryce, well known to a good many welfare workers in Toronto, had this to say, after making a survey:

I assert that the situation in Toronto at the present moment is the most serious I have known in my thirty years' residence.

That is the truth.

What has this government done for employment? What did the treaty of 1935 do for employment, when we know that conditions in Toronto to-day are worse than they have been for thirty years? It is all wrong for members to talk about conditions improving, when they cannot back up their statement with figures.

Then, what did the Premier of Ontario say?

Some hon. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

Mr. MacNICOL: I knew my hon. friends would like to hear that.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER: Order.

Mr. MacNICOL: He said:

I see no relief from the burden in sight. I am frank in confessing I don't know just where to head in on this problem.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER: Order.

An hon. MEMBER: You don't want to hear from him.

Mr. THOMPSON: Can't take it.

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER: Order.

LET'S TACKLE OTTAWA.

Through an unofficial source the Nugget learned that Royal tour plans actually include a visit to North Bay and Callander and that this will be announced in "due time". It wouldn't be fair to give us short notice of Their Majesties being routed this way, and so, we should continue to exert pressure at Ottawa to give us as good a break, as Windsor, Brandon and New Westminster.

Ottawa should be made to tell why the T. and N.O. district is to be shunned when less important out-of-the-way points are to be favored, or reveal whether or not plans actually provide for the Royal train being routed this way.

How about a deputation slipping down to Ottawa to put the question fairly and squarely before the Prime Minister?—North Bay Nugget.

WAGES PAID

EDITOR Examiner: Sir,—I saw a short reference in the papers to the earnings of clerks employed in stores in 1937. I think the figures had been gathered by the Bureau of Statistics. I was wondering if you have that information and if it would be possible to publish it.

LOCAL CLERK

The information asked for was recently released through the Department of Trade and Commerce. It is given here:

Weekly earnings of full-time male employees in independent retail stores averaged $20.90 in 1937 compared with $20.48 in 1936, increases being general for all provinces and for about two-thirds of the individual lines of businesses for which data are available. Average earnings per full-time male employee were highest in Manitoba at $24.15 and lowest in Prince Edward Island at $16.65. Averages for other provinces follow: British Columbia, $22.87; Ontario, $22.06; Alberta, $21.58; New Brunswick, $19.54 Nova Scotia, $18.77; Saskatchewan, $18.53; and Quebec, $18.11.

The average figure for full-time female employee of independent retail stores was $13.74 in 1937 compared with $13.57 in 1936, and ranged from $15.04 in British Columbia to $9.76 in Prince Edward Island. The remaining provinces were as follows: Alberta, $14.50; Ontario, $14.43; Manitoba, $13,65; Saskatchewan, $13.62; Quebec, $12.25; Nova Scotia, $11.90; New Brunswick, $11.52.

Chain stores reported weekly earnings for full-time male employees of $21.20 in 1937 compared with $21.14 the year before. The range provincially was between $19.00 in Quebec and $24.05 in Manitoba, the remaining areas being as follows: Prince Edward Island, $23.03; Alberta, $22.83; British Columbia, $22.18; Ontario, $21.96; New Brunswick, $21.89; Saskatchewan, $20.77; Nova Scotia, $19.84.

Weekly earnings for full-time female employeess in chain organizations were also practically unchanged from 1936, the average being $13.12 compared with $12.96. The figures follow by provinces: British Columbia, $14.33; Saskatchewan, $14.26; Manitoba, $14.43; Ontario, $13.42; Alberta, $13.43; Quebec, $12.46; Nova Scotia, $11.44; New Brunswick, $10.98; and Prince Edward Island, $9.09.

Weekly earnings of full-time male employees in wholesale trading establishments averaged $27.17, being somewhat lower than the $27.78 calculated for 1936. The averages follow by provinces: Ontario, $28.74; Alberta, $28.64; Manitoba, $28.38; Saskatchewan, $28.20; British Columbia, $27.80; Quebec, $26.40; Nova Scotia, $25.33; New Brunswick, $24.21; Prince Edward Island, $18.66.

The average weekly wage paid to full-time female employees in wholesale houses was $16.89 in 1937, practically unchanged from 1936, and was as follows by provinces: British Columbia, $18.75; Alberta, $18.18; Ontario, $17.80; Saskatchewan, $17.27; Manitoba, $16.57; Quebec, $15.72; Prince Edward Island, $15.68; Nova Scotia, $15.00; and New Brunswick, $13.77.

ROYAL COMMISSIONS

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—Will you please enlighten me on the following questions concerning Royal Commissions in the last 10 years.

1. What qualifications are necessary for an appointment to a Royal Commission,? (a member of the bar or legal profession, an authority on the commissions object, an active business man, a retired man because of his political loyalty, or any man the Government chooses to appoint).

2. What size or how many are there usually appointed to a Commission or a Board of Inquirey?

3. How would a Royal Commission or a Board of Inquire (let me say as an example The Inquirey into dealings with Grain Futures presided over by Sir Josiah Stamp,) spend $220,573.00 in one year (1931), would it be hotel, transportation, secretarial expenses, plus a nice fee to each member?

4. Is there ever a financial statement or expense sheet given along with the findings or reports of Royal Commissions, if so to whom?

A YOUNG CANADIAN.

1. There are as a rule no professional qualifications regarding the personal of a commission, although one with legal training is almost invariably appointed as chairman. The government may select any man it considers qualified, and as a rule the appointee is known as being favorably disposed toward the government.

2. There is no restricted number, although three is a number often appointed.

3. The amount spent to finance a commission would be made up of fees for the members, travelling expenses and living allowances; also by fees paid to counsel engaged.

4. The returns of all such expenses are made to parliament, and almost without exception are published in Parliamentary Reports in answer to a question placed on the order paper by a member. All such accounts come finally to the attention of the Auditor-General.

• Putting Blame On the People

IN discussion on the Government's request for permission to borrow $750,000,000 Hon. C. A. Dunning, Minister of Finance, pointed out that a great change had come about in the conception of the function of Parliament. Parliament he reminded the members, originally came into existence for the primary purpose of restraining the King from spending too much of the people's money; but now says the Owen Sound Sun-Times, the situation was exactly the reverse, with the people demanding that the King—represented by the Government—spent more and more of their money.

That gets us back to the foolish, mistaken idea that "the Government" is a modern pattern of the famous purse of Fortunatus — that it has the power of conjuring unlimited sums out of empty air to meet the demands of every Tom, Dick and Harry. Most people know —and those who do not should—that a tremendous amount of governmental spending is brought about by the demands of constituents on their representatives. It has been said, flippantly but truly, that the electors are prone to choose not the best man but the most promising—the man, that is, who can make most promises. It does give a candidate a tremendous "pull" to be able to promise a new post office, an armory, or something else, built out of public funds; and even though the candidate knows that it is not urgently needed he is likely to promise rather than jeopardize his chance of being elected.

And so the game goes on. The demand for unneeded, unjustified public works has been a factor in increasing the national debt of Canada to a dangerous figure; but, in spite of all that has been said and written parliamentary representatives are being hounded for public works by their constituents, regardless of their necessity or utility.

If the people could be brought to realize that it is their money which pays for all those fancy ornaments—that the Government's only source of revenue is by taxes — and that they, not "the Government," are carrying a staggering load of debt—the demand for public works would soon fall off. The process could be hastened if we could get a Government which would put its foot down on this indiscriminate spending — but that might savor too strongly of dictatorship. The good old "pork barrel" —patronage—has been in use too long for it to be easy to get away from it.

SNOW IS A FRIEND.

Snow storms are different. Snow is a friend, its attendant cruelties merely incidental. It protects winter wheat and the roots of all growing things. Its moisture penetrates the soil instead of eroding and destroying it.

Giving familiar objects an aspect of unreality, a snow storm is something of an artist. Bracing though it is, it certainly reduces the tension of living—slows up the pace, calls back the more leisurely ways of the horse-and-buggy age and of ages more distant.

Perhaps its greatest gift is that it masks all the ways of man and restores the ancient dominion of nature. In a manner of speaking, it is a kindly return to the Primitive.—(Cincinnati Times Star)

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

And, behold, there was a man which had his hand withered. And they asked him, saying, Is it lawful to heal on the sabbath days? that they might accuse him. And he said unto them, What man shall there be among you, that shall have one sheep, and if it fall into a pit on the sabbath day, will he not lay hold on it, and lift it out? How much then is a man better than a sheep? Wherefore it is lawful to do well on the sabbath days.

Then saith he to the man, Stretch forth thine hand. And he stretched it forth; and it was restored whole, like as the other.—Matt. xii, 10-13.

LADY SLIPPERS.

SPRING will soon be on the way, and thoughts will be turning to the wild flowers again. A timely little pamphlet on "Our Wild Flowers" has just been issued by the Federation of Ontario Naturalists, Toronto, from which this interesting note on the "intelligence" of plants is taken:

"Not long ago we found two different kinds of lady slippers growing side by side, the pink moccasin that will die without acid, and the showy lady slipper that loves neutral or limy soil. Digging down to unearth the mystery, we found the pink moccasin had spread its roots at the surface in an acid top-stratum of hemlock and granite, but the showy lady slipper had sunk a tap root below and then spread its roots in a layer of limestone."—Toronto Star.

We commend the Star's ability to select something written in an interesting way about wild flowers. The pamphlet from which the Star quotes was written by F. J. A. Morris of Peterborough and few men possess superior qualifications for dealing with this subject.—Ed. Examiner.

"Distance", as the Times-Herald says on the opening of this new air mail service, "has been eliminated." Science and invention have mastered geography.—Ottawa Journal.

DIDN'T GO FAR ENOUGH.

The League of Nations did not break down because it went too far but because it did not go nearly far enough. It perpetuated nationalism in principle and thus made anarchy the law.

I still remember what H. G. Wells said about the League of Nations in a conversation many years ago. "You can't make a motorcar out of the 'beginning' of a perambulator." You cannot make a community out of individuals who will surrender not one iota of their person l sovereignty, and you cannot make a world order out of states that will not merge a bit of their national sovereignty.

But if we do not make it freely gangs will rule us internally and externally. Racketeers can always shake down a disorganized economy.— (Dorothy Thompson)

Mexico Station Main Trouble Radio Reception

Seven electric heating pads innocently doing domestic duty "in various parts of the city," and a far off broadcasting station on the Texas border of Mexico have been the chief causes of the blurring of C. B. L. radio reception in Peterborough, according to an official report read at last night's meeting of the council.

The report was prepared by W. A. Rush, Controller of Radio, at the request of J. J. Duffus, M. P., to whom many radio owners in this city had complained of continuing conflict with C. B. L. broadcasts, notably the farewell address of Hon. R. B. Bennet in Toronto. Tests were made in Peterborough from January 30 until February 18. Mr. Rush found that the city's power distribution system and street lighting circuits were "in excellent condition." Only three defects were encountered, and were quickly located and cleared. Most of the local interference was caused by the operation of domestic electric appliances.

"The most serious trouble was traced to electric heating pads, seven of which were located in various parts of the city," Mr. Rush wrote. "They affected a total of 2,150 broadcast listeners. Owners of these pads agreed to discontinue the use of them or replace them with non-interference types. Various other sources which had been affecting an additional hundred listeners were also cleared.

The greatest cause for complaint has been due to interference with C. B. L. by a Mexican station, XEBA on the Texas border. It has the same frequency and five times the power of C. B. L."

On some nights when conditions are favorable this Mexican station ruins the coverage of C. B. L. Mr. Rush gave the information that the Havana treaty is intended to remedy these conditions, and until then the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation is not in a position materially to improve the situation.

Alderman Dutton said he was one of those who had complained to the Corporation about the blanketing of the Bennet speech. "During the last ten days or more reception from C. B. L. has been all that could be desired. They seem to have eliminated the interference."

Mayor Hamilton said he was acknowledging Mr. Rush's letter, which, he said, did not suggest any further need for comment.

R.C. Group To Fight Immoral Literature

HALIFAX, March 7 — (CP). — Seven hundred members of Roman Catholic Youth organizations in Halifax pledged themselves to fight against the circulation of immoral and indecent literature at a mass meeting here yesterday.

They resolved to buy, read and circulate only good, clean, wholesome literature, to refrain from buying, reading and circulating any publications containing articles, illustrations, or advertisements of an immoral, indecent or suggestive nature and to boycott all publishers, distributors and vendors who pander to the public by the same and display of vicious matter."

The meeting heard Dr. F. H. Sexton, head of Nova Scotia Technical College, describe a survey of the reading habits among unemployed men in the province. The survey showed that out of 961 men aged 16 to 25, more than 60 per cent read magazines published by "slimy, predatory men who are more dangerous than the serpent."

By MAX TRELL

"YES," Mrs. Cuckoo was saying to Knarf and Hanid, "my second cousin, Otto Owl, is the wisest bird in the whole world. He knows more than you can find in books. And the curious thing is that he can't read books and he never went to school."

"Then how can he know anything?" Knarf asked.

Mrs. Cuckoo went on with her knitting for awhile without answering. She was sitting in her rocking-chair in her little parlor inside the cuckoo clock. Finally, she said: "Cousin Owl was just born wise. And one of the wisest things he does is to hold his tongue. He hardly ever says anything but 'Who-oo-o? Who-oo-o?'"

"Why does he say that?"

"Nobody knows exactly. But it shows he is very wise. Now here am I, the mistress of this cuckoo clock. I don't hold my tongue at all. Every half hour I open my door and call out the time for everyone in the house to hear. But Cousin Owl wouldn't think of doing that. If he lived in this clock he'd just open the door and look out and say 'Who-oo-o?'"

Not Very Wise

"I don't think that would be very wise of him," said Hanid.

"No one in the house would know the time," Knarf added.

Mrs. Cuckoo smiled. "Perhaps you're right. But just the same, Cousin Owl is very wise. He just sits in one place and thinks and thinks and thinks. You'd be surprised how wise you can become if you don't do anything else but think."

"I've got a very good idea," Knarf

"Cousin Owl was born wise."

said suddenly to Mrs. Cuckoo. "Why don't you just sit here and think and think? Then everyone will think you're very wise."

Why Doesn't She?

"Yes," agreed Hanid. "Don't call out the time anymore. Just say 'who-oo-o?'"

Mrs. Cuckoo shook her head. "No," she said at last, "it won't do for me. That's only good for Cousin Owl. I'm just a cuckoo bird in a cuckoo clock. I can't be very wise. If I should call out 'who-oo-o?' instead of calling out the time, as I'm supposed to everyone in the house would think that the clock was broken. They might take it down from the wall. Then I wouldn't have any house to live in. And no one in the house would know the time."

Michigan Bars Indians Hunting Privileges

L'ANSE, Mich., March 7—(CP).—Indians have no pscial fishing and hunting privileges in Northern Michigan the Michigan Conservation Department announced to-day in a ruling it hoped would end a 20-year fued between the Indians and the government.

Many Indians arrested recently declared they were hunting on tribal lands. Others, the Department said, "seemed to feel they could hunt and fish anywhere and take anything they caught regardless of State game laws."

Conservation Department officials base their ruling on a United States' Supreme Court decision that Indians lose special fshing, hunting trapping rights once they have ceased to occupy their tribal lands.

Council Orders Men On Relief To Shovel Snow

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, March 7. —Although the relief situation in town shows little change from that of a year ago the reliefees came under fire of the council when they convened for their regular session on Monday. It all happened because eight of the men on relief absolutely refused to come out at the request of the town foreman and assist in the removal of snow according to a report made at the meeting.

"If a man gets ten dollars he owes the town three days' work, and if he refuses to come out and work we can refuse him relief," stated relief officer J. J. Lewis Hay.

"Some of them are quite willing to come out but others don't want to" put in Councillor Macmillan chairman of the Road and Bridge Committee.

"If these men deliberately refuse to come out to work its getting to the point where we will have to do something drastic" suggested Councillor McColl.

Deputy Reeve Locke suggested that in his opinion there were very few who had taken this attitude. "You don't think I'd be registering a complaint if they were turning out do you."

"I don't consider we are paying them enough" went on the Deputy Reeve.

It was pointed out that each man has six days in the week to work out his three days and if he gets $2.00 he owes the town a day's work with the maximum being three days in any week. The town foreman called on one man three times this morning and he finally came out after dinner.

"If we had all these men that should be out all the snow would have been cleared away and ratepayers would not be walking around up to their knees in slush while reliefees sit around by the fire," continued Councillor Macmillan.

Councillor McColl made a motion that the Relief Officer carry out the instructions of the Government Inspector to enforce relief labor.

Tax Arrears.

The report of the tax collector's department was presented by J. C. Birmingham. The amount of 1939 taxes collected in January was $10,345.96 and in February $1,880.23, bringing the total about $3,000.00 above the amount receieved for the same period last year. Total 1938 tax arerars collected to date, $1,261.60.

Mayor Long reported that two citizens' meetings had been held to discuss the possibility of holding an Old Home Week and that a nominating committee had been appointed for the purpose of naming chairmen of the various committees and a general committee.

"Do you think the town can afford to go one cent in the hole over an Old Home Week," questioned Councillors MacMillan.

"It depends on how much the town stands to benefit by it."

S. A. Anderson who recently purchased the shed formerly owned by St. John's United church requested the council to make the same rebate on taxes as was given on the shed formerly owned by St. Andrew's church. This request, together with free lights for the building was passed provided the owner allot the space in the first two sections of the shed for use by the public.

A request to purchase a portion of the parking lot on Front street for the erection of a service station was referred to the Property committee. "You're simply selling out the merchants of the town," stated Mayor Long who voiced strong disapproval of any action aimed at selling a portion of the lot.

A report of the sanitary conditions at the local jail was given indicating that "conditions were far from satisfactory." It pointed out that transients staying in the jail over night had no access to any of its sanitary conveniences. The matter was reported to the Police committee for action.

A by-law licensing and regulating persons engaged in the cleaning and dyeing and pressing industry was passed and the resident license fee for cleaners was placed at $5.00.

Two Reno Gamblers Terms Affirmed

NEW YORK, March 7—(AP).—The United State circuit court of appeals today affirmed the conviction of William J. Graham and James C. McKay, Reno gamblers and confidence men, who were sentenced to serve nine years each in federal prison and fined $11,000 on Feb. 17, 1938, after they had been found guilty of mail fraud and conspiracy.

The circuit court also affirmed the convictions of Boise Heed and Allen Comer, members of the swindling ring operated by Graham and McKay, who were sentenced to serve three years each and fined $900 and $800, respectively.

A number of Canadians in British Columbia and the Prairie Provinces were victims of the ring.

The gamblers were charged with defrauding 38 victims in Reno out of $750,000 in a track track swindle scheme.

DEATH AT THE MANOR

By M. E. CORNE

CHAPTER FORTY-SIX

JOHN HENRY HERMAN, the electrician, squirmed uncomfortably on the hard witness chair.

"The afternoon I got a cal from the housekeeper at the Manor to come out and fix the three electric driers whot was out of order—"

Didmore interrupted: "What time did you receive this first call?"

"Around two o'clock."

"Very well. Continue."

"Well, as I was saying, it was Sunday, and I don't usually do no work on Sunday, but the housekeeper said they had to have them driers in shape for Monday morning. And so I said I'd drive out and fix 'em. Well, before I could get started I got another call saying I wasn't to come—"

"One moment! Was this second call also from Mrs. Greely?"

John Henry wagged his head: "It was a woman's voice calling. Naturally, I thought it was her again."

"I see." Didmore nodded. "That's all."

He called Mrs. Greely to the stand.

"Now, Mrs. Greely," he said, "You have heard the evidence supplied by Mr. Herman. Do you agree to it?"

"No," returned the housekeeper flatly. "I do not. I made the first call. I know nothing whatever about the second one."

"You did, not call Mr. Herman and cancel the arrangement you had previously made with him?"

"I did not."

"And you do not know who made this second call?"

"I do not."

"Is it possible that someone in the house overheard you making the first call?"

"It is possible," she admitted. "The call was put through from the kitchen. The phone there is quite public."

"Who was present in the kitchen at the time of the call?"

"The butler, Mr. Hawkins, and Henrietta, Mrs. Horace's maid."

"I see," said Didmore again, and was about to dismiss the witness when McIntyre beckoned to him. For some seconds they consulted in low whispers. Didmore then returned to the housekeeper. "Where?" he asked, "is the main or key telephone located at the Manor?"

Mrs. Greely appeared surprised. "In the kitchen."

"How many branch phones does the estate boast?"

"There is a phone in each room."

"And these phones are all connected?"

"Connected?"

Didmore elaborated. "Is it possible for a person phoning in the kitchen to be overheard in the library or in one of the bedrooms?"

"Oh, yes."

"Are these phones, aside from the key phone, outside lines?"

"Yes."

"How do they operate?"

Mrs. Greely explained: "When a call comes through to the Manor it is taken in the kitchen. Hawkins or myself transfer it to the proper party. Outgoing calls may be made on any of the phones."

"Thank you very much." The housekeeper returned to the witness bench.

This concluded the formalities. The jury, as was expected, pronounced a verdict of wilful murder in the case of Mrs. Horace T. Witherspoon, Sr.; in the case of Mrs. Horace T. Witherspoon, Jr., and in the case of Eliza Williams. The murderer was designated as a person or persons unknown.

"And now," said Mac, when the courtroom had cleared, "and now to business!" He sounded eager and excited. I wonder what rabbit he would pull from his hat this time. But he made no further comment. He streaked from the room. The last I saw of him he was hurrying down the corridor in Mrs. Greely's wake. I saw no more of him until evening.

It began to rain that night around seven o'clock. The rain beat in torrents against my windowpanes. I dined alone and tried to shut out the sound of the ceaseless, relentless downpour.

Ordinarily I am fond of rain. There is something soothing in it. This night, however, the steady drip, drip, drip of the drops to the ground oppressed and unnerved me. Its very steadfastness chilled me.

It was an all-night rain. It would go on and on—like—like the murders and the mystery and — I forced myself to drink a second cup of coffee. I must get hold of myself. Madness lay in such thoughts. I lit a cigaret and leafed through the pages of a magazine, but the stories failed to hold my attention.

The house was terrifyingly silent for that early hour. Below dinner was being served; but the clatter of silver and china did not reach my quiet retreat. Later the guests would pack for departure. The inquest concluded, the police had no authority to detain them further. Tomorrow Della Craig, Reginald Ainsworth and Jeffrey Todington would go their separate ways. Count Orsini would, of course, remain; but it was unlikely I would see him or the others again. Tomorrow I, too, would leave the Manor. Tomorrow Kitty would return.

A footstep sounded in the corridor; the door slowly opened. Mac McIntyre crept stealthily into the room.

"I've found them, Elsie," he whispered. He came close to me. In his outstretched hand he held a thin blue packet.

"Found what?" I queried, and he opened the packet. Inside was a thin sheaf of tissues.

"Where?" I demanded. But he shook his head and would not tell me.

"Never mind, Elsie. You'll find out in good time. Benson arrived yet?"

"No."

"Damn!" He consulted a battered nickel watch. "If he comes and I'm not here, hang on to him until I give the signal."

"The signal?" He was being mysterious.

He chuckled. "Curiosity killed a cat, girl! I'm expecting a visitor. Mind if I sit down and wait?"

"No."

He sat down. Quiet descended. There was no sound in the room save the tick, tick of the battered nickel watch and the pitter-patter of the rain. We waited. Waited for what? I did not know. We simply waited.

Looking Back On This Date

It is not often that the Sovereign manifest gratification at the result of an election in Canada, but Queen Victoria did so in 1891, after Sir John A. Macdonald won his last campaign. On March 7 of that year Lord Stanley of Preston, then governor-general wrote to Sir John stating that he had received a telegram from Lord Salisbury extending the hearty congratulations of himself and his colleagues "on your victory," two days befdre. The then Bhitish prime minister also said: "We watched the contest with some anxiety and with much sympathy for him." Then Lord Stanley wrote: "I have reason to know that the Queen has expressed her great satisfaction at the result of the election."

The governor-general knew that Sir John was feeling the effects of the bitter winter campaign which he insisted upon going through despite the orders of his doctors, and he had cabled the colonial office of Sir John's condition. To this he received a reply "hoping that you would soon recover from the effects of your overwork." But John A. never recovered. He made a gallant attempt to carry on, did his daily task in the House of Commons, but had his fatal stroke at the end of May and died June 6. And the first message of regret received was from Queen Victoria. Indeed, it was in Ottawa while the bells of the city were announcing the death of the Father of Confederation and before the newspaper man had made their way back from Earnscliffe, Sir John's residence, to the Parliament building.

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Wednesday, March 8

A lively and exciting day, with much commotion and perhaps agitation, is forecast by the lunar transits. Things will move under high pressure, with a fine spurt of initiative and enterprise to bring about very desirable culminations of both a practical and romantic nature. Transactions with large interests are probable through new constructive propositions. These may best be attained by shrewd or subtle bargaining, or wire pulling.

Those whose birthday it is may look forward to a very lively and interesting year, with happy fruition of constructive effort and fond ambitions. Practical and soundly-developed projects, with energy and initiative, may find staunch supporters in big business. Co-operation is probable through shrewd or undercover agreements, rather than by direct action.

A child born on this day may have much creative talent, with aggressive and enterprising initiative, although it should not be wanting in measures of tact, diplomacy and finesse. Its versatility assures an active and successful career.

Music Valuable Aid In Mental Hospitals

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., March 7—(CP).— Karl Wecker, director of the federal music project in Michigan, said to-day music had proven a valuable aid in untangling the mental snarls of patients in Michigan mental hospitals.

Wecker, after co-operating with hospital authorities in a nine-month test program said patients have been lifted from a state of coma after many years through music.

"One patient who hadn't spoken in 12 years, stepped to the platform during a concert and asked to have a number played," Wecker said. Other mental hospitals in Michigan are considering similar plans, he added.

Bren Gun Costs $700 To Make Lions Are Told

Cost of each Bren machine gun, completely equipped, is approximately $700, Quarter Master Sergeant F. J. Frape told members of the Lion's club last night and the information caused a stir when members did some mental arithmetic and discovered that each is costing the Canadian government about $25 a pound.

"It's no wonder there was a Bren inquiry," commented Member Tony Johnston after examining the gun and venturing the opinion that on production basis they should be manufactured for less than a hundred dollars each. Q.M.S. Frape, instructor at the armouries, said that each gun is machine-tooled to perfection, said that the John Inglis company claimed each cost more than $500 to manufacture.

"That must have been for the first one," replied Mr. Johnston. "It cost more than $5,000 to make the first outboard motor but they retail for less than a hundred dollars apiece today."

The speaker reviewed improvements of the new Bren gun over old types, referring to it as "the gun that has had more publicity in this country than the Spanish war."

He said that the Lewis gun had 62 possible stoppages, whereas the Bren has none. At the outbreak of the Great War, the British Expeditionary Force had only one machine gun for each battalion. Suddenly it was realized that the Germans had far more and after two years the allies became well equipped. In the years since then, the machine gun has come to play a part of ever increasing importance in the structure of an army, he said. The Bren gun fills a great need, although the heavier type of gun is still used for its particular work.

A Humane Gun

The Bren gun was first manufactured in Czechoslovakia, he said. The particular one he was demonstrating had been made in that country at the Skoda Munitions works. So efficient have they proved that he claimed the Ethiopians would have won their war against Italy except for the use of mustard gas against them. The Ethiopians were equipped with Bren guns and they proved vastly superior to the Italian weapons, but the modern Roman conquerors had mustard gas to use.

Questioned by one member, he admitted that probably Germany had the same type of gun now. There are no secrets where the manufacture of munitions is concerned because of the close connection between the huge international firms, he admitted.

He described each detail of the gun, one of which was a switch by moving which the gun could be made to fire single shots as a rifle. "We like to be humane," he said and laughter followed. "There's no use firing two bullets where one will do the trick."

Beaver Trapping

EDMONTON, March 7. —(C. P.). —For the third year in succession, trapping of beaver in a defined Northern Alberta area will be permitted from April 1 to May 15 this year. An open season has been declared in the beaver country north of a line drawn roughly from 80 miles north of the town of Peace River to a point 50 miles north of Fort McMurray.

suggested by the Minister as a possible means of bringing about a measure of agreement on an approach to health problems.

"The tendency is that sooner or later we must see to it that every citizen of the state obtains at least a minimum of medical care and attention," said Mr. Power.

Mrs. Power was speaking on a resolution introduced by Rev. Dan McIvor (Lib. Fort William). The resolution wanted periodic medical examinations and medical treatment provided for all Canadians.

Aid For Small Wage Earner.

In withdrawing his resolution, at the suggestion of Mr. Power, Mr. McIvor said state medicine was not what he had in mind. It was some means of bringing better medical services to the small wage earner, not to the very poor who were now provided to a considerable extent with free medical services.

Dr. J. P. Howden (Lib. St. Boniface), who has sought on previous occasions to encourage establishment of some measure of state medicine, said there was no argument against the need of providing health services for those unable to obtain these services and pay for them. Nor could there be any argument advanced against the value of periodic physical examination for both youths and adults. Medical services in Canada cost approximately $300,000,000 a year, Dr. Howden said.

Periodical health examinations, particularly of children, would render a great deal of that expenditure unnecessary, and would mean a much healthier nation.

Tuberculosis was one of the diseases that would be disclosed and treated in its earliest stages by periodical examination, and possibly more important, it would disclose the presence of venereal disease, particularly syphilis. He gave details of the health provisions in the United States social security legislation, and recommendations to the committee which considered that legislation.

In Canada 60 per cent of the wage earners received incomes of less than $1,000 a year. A family man of that income class would need every cent for necessities and sickness if he endeavored to pay his doctor's bill, would put him in a precarious financial state.

It was obvious people in this class were not receiving adequate medical care and treatment.

Adoption of some such measure as that proposed would be filling a great need. Obviously it would require some form of State Medicine but it would in no way interefere with or destroy the valuable and useful health services built up in Canada by private enterprise, Dr. Howden said.

Health Action Lagging.

Much valuable public health work had been carried out by Provincial Municipal and other organizations. "But the Federal Department of Health might just as well not exist. Why not do away with it."

"Hear, hear," said eHalth Minister Power.

"I am glad to hear the Minister say "Hear, hear," said Dr. Howden, "because I know he is sympathetic to Fubblic Health.

"If he received any encouragement from the Government of which he is a member we would soon have a National Health Program."

Conservative leader Manion said he agreed with the principle of the resolution but not with the specific adequate health services were expense and the practical impossibility of getting amendments to the British North America Act.

Insurance Companies had already done much to protect the health of their policy holders who formed a considerable proportion of the total population.

"May I give a little free medical advice to the House at large," said Dr. Manion. "A periodical medical examination at least once a year and preferably every six months is desirable for all persons over the age of 50.

Crop Insurance Surprise.

Speedy termination of a debate on crop insurance Monday caught the government off its guard. George W. McDonald (Lib., Souris) was the only speaker on his motion calling for a special committee of the House to report on the possibility of introducing a crop insurance scheme in the Prairie Provinces for the 1940 crop year.

At least four more speakers were on the Whip's list as intending to take part in the debate, and Agriculture Minister Gardiner was expected to present the government's viewpoint. However, when Mr. McDonald sat down no one else rose to continue the debate. The Speaker asked if the House was ready for the question and no objection was raised. He asked if the House adopted the resolution and the only reply was silence, and then declared the resolution carried.

According to corridor gossip the government had not intended to allow the resolution to pass. It had been arranged that at Mr. Gardiner's request it would be withdrawn after it had been debated.

Monday was the last day of the session allotted to private members' resolutions. Nevt week, Monday will be taken over for government business.

Crop insurance to be successful should start with one crop and on the simplest possible basis, said Mr. McDonald. In Western Canada the crop should be wheat. In other parts of the country other crops might be made insurable.

own social reforms without regard to the other and destroys the very force of many of its efforts. He cited Old Age Pensions and Minimum Wage laws as classic examples of the stupidity of a provincial government attacking such needs. "I'm both hands for minimum wage laws," he said. "But what have we? There is no uniformity in our minimum wage laws at all, and surely such a law should apply for the whole of Canada and not just one section of it? If it is just that a girl in Ontario should not be paid less than $12.50 a week, then surely it is not less just that a girl in Quebec should be paid the same wage?"

Provinces Become Bolder

He attacked provincial governments for assuming many of the tasks that were originally meant for federal control and deplored the action of the Privy Council in upholding the provinces. "The provinces have grown bolder in the last 10 years as a result and today they are defying central government. And then you ask why there is national disunity." And because the people of this land are beginning to realize that disunity is a spectre that is striding, ever growing larger, across Canada, they are demanding more and more that provincial governments be abolished or that their powers be curbed. He did not believe the day will come when they shall be abolished entirely, yet he did see the time when their powers would be considerably curbed. Such a step was necessary before this country would recover, in his opinion.

A Federal government, nine provincial governments, and some 4,400 municipal governments rule this country, whose population is about eleven million, the speaker pointed out. "I consider our financial position so grave that drastic action must be taken immediately if we are to save ourselves from a state of bankruptcy," he said. "There is only one method of doing this, and that is by the most rigid economy in government spendings, the elimination of duplicating government services, the solving of the railway problem, and the freeing of industry from unnecessary and irksome government regulations." Government spending, he said, has now reached the appalling figure of about one billion dollars a year and this cost is increasing annually, largely due to the fact that most of the services rendered by the Federal government are being duplicated by the provincial governments."

Fears For Future

If a halt is not called, he warned, Canadians should face the future with fear and trembling. "Our national debt has now grown to the appalling figure of approximately eight billions of dollars, which means that there is a mortgage of about $3,500 on every householder in Canada."

He cited the railway problem as one of the most acute facing the country, and charged that no political party in the country has had the courage to face it. "We taxpayers are paying a million dollars a week that the railroad is losing, and it has cost us that much every week since 1930, and yet no government or political party has made any attempt to solve that problem." It is the right of every citizen to demand a solution to the railway question, he said.

Unemployment he saw as the gravest problem of all, "because it touches so vitally our national life and the character of our people." To date it has cost the taxpayers nine hundred million dollars on direct relief, relief works and projects, with the prediction that by summer it will have reached one billion dollars, he said. "No one will believe that we have had full value for this money, and yet the nation requires so many things that would be revenue producing that might have been tackled with this money and labour. Unemployment has never been dealt with as a national emergency, which it undoubtedly is. It has been kicked from municipal government to provincial government to federal government and back again. It has become a political football." And the total result of all that expenditure has been not that the scale of the country's living has been uplifted, but that men have been given a pittance, enough to keep them alive, he said, expressing fear for the result in the outlook and physical being of the children of those thousands of jobless.

Unrest Has Country

Today, he said, unrest is sweeping the country and he wondered just how dangerous it is becoming. "I think that only our love of freedom, of British principles, of democracy has saved us in the past. I am not sure even those things will save us in the future unless drastic changes are made."

He urged a united effort on the part of all the people, saying that he did not entirely blame the government, that the people of this country must share equally the responsibility for inactivity. A united, earnest appeal, a lead to the government by the taxpayers of this country, will see a speedy solution to the grave problems that confront Canada, he closed.

Warden James Milby was chairman of the meeting. Present on the platform was Colonel J. Burton, who spoke briefly, told the audience he will be in Peterborough this week to organize a branch of the organization in this city. H. B. Rye was absent through illness.

Hepburn In Command.

Mr. Hepburn, much improved in health after his recent Australian trip, will lead the House again. Behind him will be 65 Liberals. Heading the Opposition of 23 Conservatives will be Lieut.-Col. George A. Drew, first man to come into Ontario's Legislature as leader of a major party without experience in any Legislature. Col. Drew represents Simcoe East, the seat vacated for him by William Finlayson.

Premier Hepburn's leadership this session poses the question as to whether he will be at the helm for the next one. He had reserved decision on whether or not he will carry on.

Legislation to provide for expropriation of land needed for the new International bridge at Niagara Falls will be brought in by Attorney-General Conant. It is understood the Dominion government has informally acknowledged a federal charter is not needed for the span. Approval of plans from the Department of Marine and Fisheries will be obtained under the Navigable Water Protection Act, it is expected.

from Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, physician to the five famous children since birth, but Dr. Dafoe and another of the quints' guardians, Percy D. Wilson, met with Mr. Hepburn, Mr. Nixon, and Attorney-General Gordon Conant last week. It was understood they discussed precautions that would be necessary if the quints were brought here.

The trip—their first away from home—would be something of a birthday gift to the children, for they will be five years of age on May 28. The only time they ever have been moved was on September 22, 1934, when they were taken across the road from the Dionne home near Callander to their new home in the Dafoe Hospital, constructed by the Ontario Government soon after their birth.

King Would See the Girls

Strengthening the possibility that the Quints would be allowed to travel under careful supervision was the fact that they are wards of the king. As representative of the Ontario government on the board of guardians, Mr. Wilson is in turn representative of the King. In his letter, Mr. Nixon said their majesties are "particularly desirous" of seeing the five little girls.

"May I remind you that this will probably be the only opportunty your daughters would ever have to see their majesties," Mr. Nixon concluded.

Mayor Ralph C. Day and members of Toronto city council expressed pleasure at the invitation to the Dionnes. Mayor Day said the city would "do everything that is necessary to ensure their safety and comfort."

Dr. Dafoe and the other guardians have stood in the way of any attempt to have the quintuplets taken away from home for exhibition purposes. The Ontario government stepped in and appointed the board of governors when an attempt was made soon after the birth to have them taken to the world's fair at Chicago. The board of governors refused this winter to allow the girls to be shown at the world's fair in New York.

But since they first were shown to tourists in the summer of 1935, there never has been official objection to having other persons see the quints at the hospital except when they have been slightly ill. There, too, they have made moving pictures.

North Bay and Callander residents raised strentious objections when the district was not placed on the itinerary of the king and queen, in the belief that their majesties should have been given a visit with the quints.

800-Foot Channel Is Cut In Moira

BELLEVILLE, March 7—Swelling waters of the Moira River, which had been dammed by the covering of ice on the river, are now rushing noisily to the bay through a channel 800 feet long and fifty feet wide cut in the ice of the river's mouth just south of the car bridge during the latter part of last week. A basin also cut in the ice fifty feet square is assisting in the removal of the water and floating sections of the ice at the end of he channel.

Considerable frazil ice has been observed in he river, but this ice is also being drained away with the surplus water it is reported, thus alleviating to some extent blocked conditions, which may be experienced later.

Whether further cutting will be necessary in the mouth of the river will depend on any further rise in the current of the river, or any appreciable gathering of the frazil which is now floating downstream, it is reported by city engineer, Charles Mott.

Babies' Day

BRANTFORD, Ont., March 7. —(CP).—Babies by the score came out for an airing Saturday when the first fine weather in days favored an impromptu baby parade. One bystander counted 24 carriages passing him in less than an hour.

Toy Makers' "Latest" Run Into Money

NEW YORK, March 7—(AP). —Toy manufacturers turned on high voltage ingenuity in plaything creations in preparing for their first private preview which has just opened here.

The toys—familiar and novel ones —will go on general exhibition at the regular summer showing, but to-day wholesalers were offering to the trade these brand new creations:

Ten dollar table tennis paddles;

Remote control, double-header trains that stop at stations and whistle while a train announcer goes into his routine inside the depot;

"Organ-playing" dolls that sell for as low as $75 and as high as $300;

A complete line of wild animals, some as tall as a couple of feet.

DOCTORS CHECK KIDNEYS FIRST

Because they know that healthy Kidneys remove from the blood the waste matter —the excess acids and poisons, formed by the ever-changing human body as it decays and rebuilds itself. But if the Kidneys fail, illness surely follows. Backache, Rheumatism, Impure Blood, Lack of Energy, Too Frequent Urination, Sleeplessness, Headaches—all may result from faulty kidneys. As a health safeguard—as a wise precaution—regulate your kidneys frequently with Dodd's Kidney Pills—for over fifty years the favorite Kidney remedy—non-habit forming—safe. 105

Assessor's Roll Used To Check Denominations

The Peterborough Ministerial Association met in the Y.M.C.A. Monday morning, Rev. M. C. Parr, president, in the chair. Rev. F. W. Craik, secretary, introduced the business.

It was decided that the individual churches should arrange special services during Passion Week, April 3 to 6, and that two union services shall be held on Good Friday, April 7, places and time to be arranged by the executive of the association.

Rev. Dr. E. W. Young reported that the arrangements for copying the assessor's roll according to church affiliation had been carried out. This proposal was first made by L. J. Pettit at the union laymen's banquet held early in this year. The plan of the laymen has been adhered to, and the lists of families have been given to the ministers of each of the denominations in the city: Anglican, Presbyterian, Baptist, United Church, the Salvation Army, Bethany Tabernacle and the Pentecostal Church. Each group will deal with its own list, and hopes to engage the co-operation of lay workers to call upon the families that were not closely attached to any particular church.

Canvass Started.

Several ministers reported that the workers of their churches were already engaged in the canvass with encouraging results. The association hopes that the canvassers will be welcomed when they call.

A letter was read from William Derry, chairman of the program committee of the Kiwanis Club, stating that Thursday, April 6th, noonday luncheon had been allocated to the Ministerial Association, and asking that it should find the speaker and arrange the music for that day. It was decided to accept the invitation and the executive was asked to make the arrangements.

The following were appointed a nomination committee to suggest officers for the coming year: Major Warrender, Revs. R. T. Brain, F. W. Craik and J. H. Sutcliffe.

Rev. V. E. R. Zufelt will provide the speaker for the next meeting.

Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe announced that a meeting of the Christian Education Council will soon be held, and urged the need of a full attendance of ministers, and other representatives from the various churches.

"Defeatism."

Major Warrender was the speaker for the day, and took as his subject "Defeatism." Hon. R. B. Bennett, he said, had declared that the church had failed. Some people say that the past was better than the present. They point out the decline in church attendance, the lower standard of morals, the indifference of the multitude to religion. But there are certain other factors that the pessimists overlook, God has not left the world, the defeatist forgets God, and the power of the Gospel.

The facts of history are against the defeatist. The state of England at the time of John Wesley was deplorable. An unvarnished account of the British navy at the time of Nelson reveals some terrible facts. General Booth found conditions bad in 1865. Readers of the novels of Dickens in the 19th century are made aware of social conditions that would not be tolerated today.

The Church of today is doing a great work. She is upholding Christ, and He is the hope of the world. She can never be defeated.

The following joined in the discussion: Revs. M. C. Parr, C. C. Boyter, R. T. Brain, F. W. Craik, and the speaker was thanked for his stimulating address.

The following were present: Revs. E. W. Young, F. G. MacTavish, H. Wilkinson, J. M. Young, J. H. Sutcliffe, E. W. Rowland, Major Warrender, M. C. Parr, Fred W. Craik, T. Brain, Canon Paterson, C. C. Boyter.

Garage Is Damaged By Heavy Wind

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HASTINGS, March 7 — At the height of high winds here Monday noon, part of the false front of Brinklow's garage was blown off, leaving a gaping hole in the front of the building. The section toppled off in one piece and crashed down on top of a gas pump and a car, which was parked immediately underneath. The cab of the truck was damaged to some extent. The main part of the falling section draped over the gas pump but did not cause any damage to it. About 100 feet of guard rail on the main bridge here was blown over and a repair crew was immediately called out to replace it.

Motorists reported that they had extreme difficulty in keeping their machines on the road, but no accidents were reported.

Open Season On Rats

TORONTO, March 7. —(C. P.). — An open season on muskrats will start on Wednesday in seven Ontario counties, the department of game and fisheries announced today. The counties are Essex, Kent, Elgin, Norfolk, Haldimand, Welland and Lincoln.

Workmen are leaving Ireland for for Britain at the rate of 25,000 a year.

Garage Is Damaged

High winds ripped this section of a garage at Hastings from the walls and left an upper storey window looking pitifully unnecessary Monday. The boards crashed down on the gas pump seen here and on a truck, cab of which was damaged. Other damage was reported in the vicinity, none of it serious. (Examiner Correspondent's Photos.)

Mayor Cracks Down At City Council Meeting Wants No More Citizens Ordered From Parks

Mayor Hamilton assumed the magesterial manner for a brief moment last night. And the magesterial manner broadly means cracking down. His Worship has been presiding over the council for fifteen months, almost as blandly and good humoredly as W. H. Bradburn used to be when he sat in the self same seat. His official presence has been a beaming graciousness with goodwill for everybody and invariable respect for his associates in office.

But, last night he blew, if the litle incident really merits that expression of bursting impatience.

Citizen Vincent Stewart, the sole ratepayer in the gallery, would probably say it was an exceptionally mild affair, but it was the Hamiltonian way of cracking down or almost.

Alderman Stocker had suggested that applications for picnic dates at the city clerk's office to avoid conflicts that occurred last year; and that reference led on to the tourist camp at Hunter street; and then the Mayor spoke.

"I don't want to hear any more about any of our citizens being ordered out of that park," His Worship said with a flush of feeling. "I heard it last year and I don't want to hear it again. That park is for our own people as much as it is for tourists, and they have a right to be there."

Alderman Stocker said that no doubt the caretaker was working under instructions. It seems that some small picnic parties had gone for an afternoon to the park, occupying tables and other equipment.

"If tourists are charged so much a day for the use of the camp grounds they should have a table," said Alderman Stocker. "That is part of what they are paying for, and it shouldn't be taken away from them even by our own citizens who may go there for an afternoon."

"Anyway," said Mayor Hamilton, "our own people are not to be ordered out of that park."

"We might arrange to have 'reserved' signs placed on any table that are allotted to tourists," Alderman Stocker said, as his idea was adopted to the effect that all applications for picnics in city parks must be made through City Clerk Armstrong's office.

St. David's Society Attends Church

Members of St. David's Society attended divine service at St. George's Anglican Church on Sunday evening. The epidemic of influenza kept some of the members away on this occasion, including the president, Vivian Mills. Daffodils on the altar were in keeping with the traditions of St. David's Society. The rector, Rev. T. H. Floyd, welcomed the visitors, recalling that their first visit to the church aws their first visit to the church was inspired some years ago by Rev. Mr. Hughes. The meaning of the word Welsh, he said, was "foreigner, oldest allies of the English." The Welshman has a great love for his country, its mountains and valleys, and beautiful scenery.

"Christianity does not condemn love of country. We are proud of the land that gave us birth. He who does not love his home and country, how shall he love that broad humanity he has not seen? Wherever our land of birth may be we are proud of it, as was Jesus."

After the offertory the Welsh national anthem was sung, and at the close of the vesper service a social hour was spent in the basement. Refreshments were served by the choir.

Complainant Ill Case Adjourned

"The complainant has pneumonia and it will be impossible for him to appear here to-day," Magistrate Langley was told in police court this morning when A. Vallee, alias Joseph LaPearl, was charged with stealing $26 from Herbert Asselstine, Charlotte Street.

Vallee was under remand from a week ago on the charge, and in view of the condition of the complainant another week's remand was ordered by the Magistrate.

"Are you asking for bail?" the Magistrate asked Vallee. "No," was the laconic reply.

However, Magistrate Langley fixed the amount of bail at $300.

Lodges Complaint On Use Of Meters

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HASTINGS, March 7.— Alleging that some hydro users in this village were using power under one meter in places of two meters, Dorothy Parker interviewed the Hastings hydro commission Monday night and urged that the situation be investigated. Miss Parker said they were using power under three meters and cited two instances where users should have more than one metre. "I am here in the interests of every hydro user in town," she declared. "I am advised that every householder in town should be under a separate meter and that is not the case here. If I can't get any satisfaction here I will be in Toronto soon and will take it up with the higher authorities there," she added.

Dr. Wilson assured Miss Parker that the situation would be looked into and if it were found that users were in the wrong, the commission would take the necessary steps to have it remedied "I am glad you attended this meeting," Dr. Wilson told Miss Parker. "It is a good thing you have brought this matter to our attention and I feel that you are not seeking anything for yourself and have a just right to complain."

Robert Marsden, Oldest Indian In District Observes His 93rd Birthday At Alderville

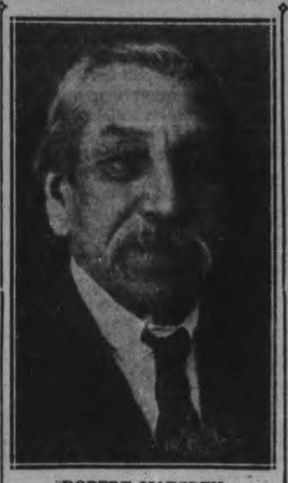
Becoming a little infirm with his extreme age, the old warrior can still enjoy life a good deal. He lives in the village where he has spent all his days, and he was often seen, bundled up, going for sleigh rides to visit his children this winter.

Robert Marsden can recall the days when mail came only once or twice a month to Alderville, by horseback in summer and snowshoe by winter. He can remember the time when wolves and beaver roamed the forest near his village in large numbers. And looking back on all that, he emphatically prefers to live in the present machine age. To him there is no comparison. The past is not veiled in romantic spirit, but in hardship and inconvenience.

He is of the Mississago tribe of Indians. His father, when eight years of age, was brought with a tribe from Grape Island, Lower Canada, by one Elder Case. Robert Marsden was born on March 7, 1846. In his youth the present village of Roseneath was known as "The Corners."



ROBERT MARSDEN

In 1887 he married Margaret Snake of Alderville, with the late Rev. Robert Brooking performing the ceremony. Thirteen children were born to them, and seven are still living. They are Robert and Ephriam of Christian Island; Norman, Thomas, Amos and Mrs. Earnest Crowe or Alderville, and Mrs. Wilfred Sunday of Newtonville.

Two of his sons are police officers. Norman is chief of Alderville, and Thomas, with whom he makes his home, is a county constable. Mr. Marsden's wife died 34 years ago.

He is an ardent church man, and a loyal supporter of the Alderville church. He has preached on more than one occasion, once on Christian Island before a large gathering.

City Council Buys New Car For Engineer

Purchase of a Hudson 1939 coach from Howson Motors at a cost of $960 for the use of City Engineer Parsons in his every-day work was authorized by the Council Monday night in accepting the report of a subcommittee of the Board of Works of which Alderman E. R. Wilson is chairman. The other two members were Aldermen Dutton and Cotton. Prices had been received from some of the local dealers, and the Board had expressed the wish that city business be distributed by buying this car from some dealer who might have been overlooked in the past.

Damage Claims.

Three claims for damages were read from citizens who had been injured by falling in streets. B. W. Trotter wrote the Council that his wife had fractured her shoulder by slipping on the ice at Brock and George Streets, on March 1. Mrs. T. McCartney, 421 London Street, fell on Reid Street, between Murray and McDonnel Streets, Thursday, February 23. Her right arm was broken above the wrist. Bert Vennatto fractured several ribs when he fell near Bond's drug store on Hunter Street Monday, February 20.

Oppose Teachers.

Opposition to school teachers being permitted to hold public office was declared in a resolution from the Council of Chatham. Alderman Bradburn agreed with it, saying teachers were public servants. The resolution was referred to the Legal Committee of which he is chairman.

"You know what they'll do," commented Alderman Gordon, referring to Ald. Bradburn's expressed opinion.

A London resolution asking that municipalities be given part of the gasoline tax funds was sent on to the Finance Committee. Another from Windsor sought permission for municipalities to apply local amusement taxes.

Charles W. Holland complained that the Examiner was presuming to dictate who should sell newspapers on the streets, and that a route his son had built up had been taken from him. It transpired that on two evenings in the week his son attends choir practice at St. John's Church and the papers are then taken by two smaller children. By selling papers the older boy was able to clothe himself and was getting a musical education. Mr. Holland proposed that the council pass a bylaw licensing all persons selling papers in the city. His complaint was referred to Alderman Glover for enquiry at the Examiner Office.

Chief Gimblett reported $175 fire loss last month, and appointment of two probationers as firemen, Budd Cruickshank and Wm. Sorrie.

The Bronx Cheer

OKLAHOMA CITY, March 7 — (AP).—An inventive motorist, tired of chronic horn-tooters, has rigged up a clown-faced gadget that sticks out its tongue and emits a hearty "Bronx cheer." The device, made by David Wilson, Santa Monica, Calif., was placed on exhibition here today at the southern district conference of the National Inventors' congress.

Council Buys 1,000 Cords Body Hardwood

Two tenders for the purchase of hardwood were accepted by the Council last night on the recommendation of a special committee appointed to consider a number of bids in response to an advetrisement for the supply of wood for relief purposes. Purchase of 500 cords of body hardwood from G. L. Tedford, Young's Point at $6.45 a cord, and 400 cords of the same quality of wood from Harold Mace of Burleigh Falls at $6.50 a cord was authorized. It was also agreed that on additional 100 cords of body hardwood might be bought later if it was required.

"Your committee considers that at present it is wise not to purchase more than 1,000 cords. Some months later it is recommended that the wood situation should be reviewed with a view to making further purchases if it is found necessary," the committee suggested.

Alderman McCannan said he understood that specifications of tender forms had been submitted to some of the local retail fuel dealers including the information that the price of hardwood was to be $6.75 a cord, and that bids had been made on that basis. Alderman Dutton said he did not think that could have happened, and City Clerk Armstrong said there had been no mention of price.

Woman Aged 93 Fractures Hip

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LINDSAY, March 7—George Bonham, a well known resident of Gooderham, was found dead in his home during the week-end. The deceased, who lived alone, was found on the floor of his kitchen by Louis Mintz, who had called to see him on his way to the village.

Mrs. S. Wasington, of Oakwood, aged ninety-three years, fell down several cellar steps at her home on Saturday and broke her hip. Owing to her advanced years grave fears are expressed for her recovery.

The unofficial announcements relative to a federal election during the coming autumn, have created a little activity in local political circles, and especially in the Conservative camp. The Examiner was informed today that there wil lbe no lack of aspirants for the honor of carrying the party standard. In case T. H. Stinson, K.C., ex-M.P., withdraws from active politics, the Conservatives claim they would have a strong candidate in the person of Roy Shields of Coboconk, ex-Warden of Victoria County. It was announced today that Sam Endicott, ex-Reeve of Ops, might loom up as a possible candidate. It has been rumored during the past few days that a well-known Toronto man might enter the fight in this riding as an independent candidate.

Lakefield Board Discusses School Project

LAKEFIELD, Mar. 7.—"I believe the school project would carry with the public, if put to a vote," Chairman J. W. Ridpath told the members of the High School Board at their March meeting held at 9.15 p.m. last night in the council chamber of the Memorial Hall here. "We can't stand still, we will either go forward or backward," he stated, replying to remarks made by Principal J. H. Harvey with regard to providing proper accommodation for shopwork and household science in Lakefield High school.

"I am confident," Principal Harvey had stated, "that by making proper provision for those classes, you will add 30 to 40 pupils to your attendance."

Visit Stouffville,

"I suggest that you visit Stouffville or Stirling and see what these two places have done in the way of providing equipment for shopwork and domestic science. Stouffville has provided accommodation at a cost of $12,000 and Stirling spent $20,000 and added a gymnasium or auditorium, Mr. Harvey said.

"It is a marvellous prospect to have a school ranking among the first. It would mean more pupils boarding in the village and there would be more money in the village.

"It it were presented to the ratepayers in the proper light, I am sure they would be in favour of it.

"I would suggest that you visit the towns I have mentioned, talk to the members of the Board and to the principals of the schools and bring back a report."

"The bonded debt in Lakefield is practically nil. There are very few municipalities in that position. In a year we will be free of debenture debt. We will never have a better chance than now," Mr. Harvey said in conclusion.

"I would suggest," Chairman Redpath stated, "that as soon as the roads are better we visit the schools mentioned and have a report put in concrete form. "We don't need an elaborate building—just a nice plain building. We have the property now, and a lot of equipment.

"Rather than have the thing fall through," Mr. Harvey stated, "I would have an addition rather than a new High school."

Call Ratepayers' Meeting.

Trustee F. L. Erskine said: "I think it is us to the chairman of the High school board to call a meeting of the ratepayers and get them interested in the project."

Chairman J. W. Ridpath and Trustees F. L. Erskine and E. H. Northey were present at the meeting.

With regard to correspondence from High School Inspector Jennings, Trustee E. H. Northey reported that all art supplies mentioned in the report had been ordered. On motion by Trustees Northey and Erskine the report of the inspector was received.

Principal Harvey recommended the purchase of books required for the library. It was moved by Trustees Erskine and Northey that Principal Harvey be authorized to purchase the books, magazines, etc., required by the school.

It was moved by Trustees Northey and Erskine that the secretary convey to the Public School Board the statement that "this Board requests the erection at her convenience of ten test boards to be placed around the blank rooms in the two upstairs class rooms so that art and project work may be properly displayed." The addition of these boards was recommended by the inspector.

Committee Named To Consider Naming Of Assistant Assessor

Applications for the position of assistant in the office of W. J. Henry, city assessor, were referred to a special committee that is to meet at 2 p.m. on Friday, on a motion by Alderman Gordon at last night's meeting of the council.

The members of the committee are Alderman Cotton, McCannan, McIntyre and Dutton and W. J. Henry. They were appointed "to recommend the name or names of applicants best qualified for the position, with the salary to be paid."

Fish and Game Aids.

In a desire to co-operate with the Peterborough Fish and Game Protective Association and also the county council, who named a special committee in January to promote the preservation of fish and game as an asset of the tourist industry, the council appointed Alderman Bradburn, Cotton, Gordon and E. A. Outram, assistant city clerk, to give their active support to both groups. The motion was proposed by Alderman Glover and seconded by Alderman McCannan.

Want Office Open.

Another motion by Alderman Gordon and Dutton appealed to the Chamber of Commerce to keep their office open Saturday afternoons until the end of this month for the accommodation of persons applying for motor vehicle licenses.

"Five men from out of town missed getting their licenses last Saturday afternoon because the Chamber of Commerce office was closed," Alderman Gordon said.

Alderman Dutton said that the closing was required by a clause in the Chamber's constitution, but he felt that the council should make its representation to the Chamber for the benefit of people who found it more convenient to come into the city on Saturday afternoon.

Council's Condolence.

Resolutions of condolence to the members of the family of the late George Evans, at one time a member of the city council, and to the family of the late James Finnie, for years a member of the Court of Revision, were passed on motions by Alderman McCannan, seconded by Alderman Glover.

Once a Grain Port

BRONTE, Ont., March 7.—(CP). —Old records disclosed here show this sleepy Lake Ontario fishing village once was a busy grain-shipping port, clearing 80,000 bushels of grain yearly. The docks now are used only by fishing craft and small yachts.

Shotgun Case Is Adjourned A Week

A local man was arraigned before Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in police court this morning on six charges under Section 217 of the Customs Act and without being called upon to plead or elect secured an adjournment for a week, the six cases to be heard on Tuesday, March 14.

He was charged with the illegal possession of two Winchester shot guns upon which no duty had been paid and on five counts of illegally selling firearms upon which the duty had not been paid, involving altogether three Remington shotguns, two Winchester rifles and a Remington rifle.

Today's adjournment was caused by the fact that T. J. Carley, K.C., who was to have appeared for the accused, had an engagement in the Appeal Court at Toronto. Corp. T. J. Woods of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, who laid the charges after investigating here for some time, had no objection to the case going over for a week.

THREE WESTERN AND TWO ONTARIO RINKS SHARE LEAD

Manitoba Rink And Hall Four Strong Leaders

By Louis V. Hunter
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

TORONTO, March 7. —(C. P.)— The luck of the draw pitted winners against losers again in the opening matches of today's play in the round-robin for the Dominion Curling championship, with the tournament resolving itself into a duel between three rinks from the west and two from the east.

British Columbia, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Ontario and northern Ontario survived easily in the first two rounds of good but not spectacular curling, leaving winless the provincial champions from Alberta, Quebec, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island.

The draw for the nine-game series was completed yesterday before the 10 sectional champions took to the ice at the Granite club. It sent five winners against five losers in the first match, shuffled them for the second but kept them on the same side of the fence and went on to do the same thing for the third round.

In yesterday's play Ross Kennedy's Winnipeg rink, defending the Brier Manitoba has won eight of the 11 times it has been played for, and Bert Hall's Ontario rink from Kitchener, stamped themselves as definite favorites to lead the pack. While Hall has the same rink he led through the Brier last year. Kennedy's men all are newcomers to Brier play.

Two Easy Wins.

Both rinks scored comparatively easy wins in the first two rounds. Kennedy, after trouncing Bob Cream's Quebecers 20-6, swept last night to a 10-4 victory over Police Magistrate Walter Limerick's "family" rink from New Brunswick. Hall topped an 11-5 win over C. W. Durrant's Nova Scotians with a 13-6 triumph over Cream.

In last night's match Kennedy dropped only three ends of the regulation 12 to New Brunswick, while Hall allowed Quebec only four, though one was a three-end as Cream pressed toward the finish.

D. H. Millar, a Brier veteran, led his Northern Ontario four to a see-saw victory over Howard Palmer's Albertans who lost 12-10 to George Dunbar from Saskatchewan in the afternoon. Trailing 8-7 going into the 10th end after a 5-5 deadlock in the seventh, Millar chalked up a two and a one for a 10-9 win.

The veteran Rolly David from Vancouver led his British Columbia rink to a brace of fine victories. He followed up a 21-4 afternoon victory over R. F. McLaine's Prince Edward Islanders with an 11-8 triumph over the Nova Scotians. The Islanders dropped a 13-8 decision to Saskatchewan's Dunbar four which had trimmed Palmer's Albertans 12-10 in the afternoon.

Northerners Squeeze By.

The Northern Ontario rink just managed last night to come out on top in its battle with the Albertans. Skip Palmer grabbed three points for his Alberta rink in the eighth to bread a 5-5 deadlock. He rallied in the 12th end after dropping five points to score one but he was on the losing end of a 10-9 score.

The two rinks bounced each other's rocks from the house in the 12th until finally Alberta lay one with a Northern Ontario stone in the rings. The rocks were see-sawed again with Palmer converting a Northern Ontario two-shot into one point for Alberta.

The 12th end in the New Brunswick-Manitoba match almost was the same, with the house still empty after six stones had been delivered. A. M. Limerick's stone laid the foundation for a three-shot completed by Skip Limerick, but an unerring Kennedy drew his just inside for one point and a match score of 10-4.

Halland Cream tussled hard and heavy in their match with Quebec pressing toward the finish. In the last end Quebec was lying two, but a good shot by Skip Hall raised both and left him with one, alone in the house. Cream's first stone lay shot on the tee line but again Hall raised it to boost his lie to two. He added another after Cream ran into the hack with a heavy shot, and won out 13-6. The rinks battled evenly at the start of the match and Hall didn't edge ahead until the sixth end.

TRAINING CAMP BRIEFS

(By The Associated Press)

LAKELAND, Fla.—Detroit Tigers, with their outfield still unsettled, are eyeing another rookie. He is Leslie Fleming, up from Beaumont, Tex. He can hit, as shown in Monday's batting practice, but the Tigers want to see if he can field, too.

NEW ORLEANS.—Cleveland Indians' second baseman Sammy Hale, and Outfielders Julius Solters and Bruce Campbell went through their first workouts today. Hale, many pounds overweight and still with doubtful throwing arm, faces a fight from several rookies for the job. Hal Trosky, outfielders Roy Weatherly and Ben Chapman and six holdouts are still absent.

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif.—Some of the Pittsburgh Pirates are bucking against the routine of steam baths at a nearby natural springs. Pitcher Jim Tobin, who heads the rebels, contends he loses strength every time he takes more than one plunge.

TAMPA, Fla.—Lefty Lee Grissom, the big question mark of Cincinnati Reds' pitching staff, had his teammates thinking today he had put his bad seasons behind him for a while. The eccentric left-hander burned in his sharp-breaking curve and prompted Catcher Eddie Lombardi to comment:

"Boy's it's like money in the bank to see that guy powdering that ball in there again."

BRADENTON, Fla. — With four other National League clubs, the Cubs, Giants, Pirates and Dodgers, interested in Maxie West, despite his puny .234 average, Casey Stengel is going to await the arrival of that Alhambra, Calif., youngster before making any decisions about Boston Bees right field berth. Stengel said West had several weaknesses but that none was too deeply rooted to disqualify him from playing regular.

Digging up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

The game is on tonight. Yessir, and ladeez, Niagara Falls and the Petes clash at 8.30 in the Brock in an O.H.A. senior "B" round-robin series final. There was a time yesterday when the Petes weren't at all fussy about continuing with the serial, and they were half-decided to call it off—and default out of the mess. On account of they felt they might lose dough on the deal, and also they couldn't get a break on some of the trips. But they decided to carry on and hope to grab off a title and will be very much in evidence before a packed house this p.m. on the Rue Brock when those bumping Cataracts collide with 'em. Meantime, the Petes are still arguing with the O.H.A. about a coupla points, and they're gonna be downright insistent on them, too.

* * * * * *

No need to boost up this game tonight. Every puck fan in the city and district knows about that thrilling series a year ago now with the Falls and Petes. We beat 'em here by a 5-3 score but lose 4-1 down in the Big Roar town, losing the round by a goal. Lots of arguments and dirty cracks back and forth, too. Petes accused 'em of putting graphite on the floor out of the locals' dressing room to the ice, to dull their skates. And suspected someone in the Cataracts' pay of turning off the juice in the artificial ice plant down there and having the ice heavy as the Petes were ganging up. Not to mention the goalie changing pads and other stalling acts.

* * * * * *

A Different Slant

Yessir, and ladeez, there is much rivalry betwixt the rough Falls' crew and the speedy Petes. Up in this neck of the woods, puck fans go for fast, clean and smart hockey. They know their hockey and they love it. None of this roughing-up, tomato-throwing and wild circus acts stuff like the uneducated fans go for in the States—and to some extent in the Canuck border towns. But down that way they play a bruising, bashing style and that's what licked the locals last year. But we doubt it if will this semester. Especially with such bashing gents aboard as Don Crowe. Jack Gardner, Red Creighton and a few more. It'll be a swell scrap and the old rink will be bulging at the sides once more tonight as the Falls and Petes tangle in this important renewal of their year-old feud.

* * * * * *

Just looking over the account in the Niagara Falls' Review, by Bill Gaynon, of the last game—the senior "B" session between the Falls and Chatham Maroons—we note that it was a rough session. Apparently what they all play, all but us. There was a general free-for-all fist fight, and "real rugged hockey with both clubs applying the weight to advantage and getting in the sly dig," to quote that writer. Referee Bert McCaffery of Toronto handed out 11 penalties, one a major, with the Falls drawing eight, including the major. They drew nine out of 10 here last season, so evidently haven't improved much since a year ago—even when playing at home. They're a tough crew and it'll be a pip of a puck battle tonight here.

He Says, Says He

Comes an item from the Niagara Falls' Review: "If the boys can repeat their display of Friday when they handed Chatham a setback they will prove real factors in their second round-robin appearance at Peterborough on Tuesday. Coach Art Smethurst was exceptionally pleased with the work of his entire personnel and, while he counts on strong opposition from the Petes, he feels the chances of his squad marking up victory number two are excellent. The defence was hitting hard and the forwards were getting in many dangerous chances. Their margin was greater than the score indicates and only phenomenal work by Haggerty in Chatham's net prevented a heavier goal total by the homesters. On the other hand, the Petes have revealed unusual strength on the offensive in games to date, and Tuesday's assignment is by no means a cakewalk for the Roar contingent.

* * * * * *

Frank Buckland was telling us yesterday that scoring averages for the senior puck loop of Alberta were released recently and showed Barney Barnes—the Petes' speedy defenceman of last winter—had 10 scoring points and served 39 minutes in the cooler. He was out of action for quite a spell with an injury. Barnes' team finished on top of the heap and may yet represent Western Canada in Allan Cup playoffs. Barney is handicapped by loss of a couple of fingers, but he sure can swish along when he wants to skate.

The Merry Rasslers

Odd angles are always cropping up out of pro rasslin' disputes and now we find the Michigan ring commissioner asking pointed questions at a meeting of rasslin' promoters and referees. The article states: "The referees freely admitted they were very much part of any wrestling show. They informed the commissioner they were expected to do their bit toward making the act go over—such as shaking fingers in the villain's face, occasionally diving out of the ring, taking socks on the chin, and otherwise being manhandled." Their only complaint was they shouldn't have to act a heel in one town, and then have a new referee brought in in their place in the next town to be a hero. It's quite a game, and there are still folks who take it at face value—instead of as an amusing and entertaining racket.

And the cage merry-go-round for the week. C.G.E. gals will not be playing off in Belleville tonight, maybe not till next week. Three Cobourg school squads play the P.C.I. teams here this Friday in the Collegiate gym, and two senior men's games are on Saturday eve at the "Y" C.G.E. vs St. John's and Heclas vs Dominions. The St. Paul's intermediate "A" gang carry a one-point margin to Toronto on Saturday for their return O.C.B.A. joust with Parkdale Invictus Club. And our St. John's juvenile O.C.B.A. band—with Port Perry defaulting the return tilt—will be idle for over a week, then meeting First Avenue crew of Toronto in Ontario semi-finals. Haven't heard when the local lasses play this week in their new Y.W.C.A. gym, probably about Friday p.m.

Hither and yawn: Waterloo Tigers must be plenty potent as they invaded Chatham last e'en and took a 6-3 senior "B" win...They haven't lost a game in 14 starts this season; Petes play 'em in Kitchener tomorrow...C.N.R. may run a special to Oshawa if any of the Petes' games have to be transferred to that town...Don Markle, Cobourg youth who was injured here in basketball last fall, is better now and working in Belleville...D. A. Houston of Toronto is referee here tonight; we hope the darn' game is started on time for a change...Ice is pretty fair up there at this writing and should hold up during the tussle...Oshawa's junior "B" bunch took a 3-0 win in Barrie last p.m., while the Lindsay-Belleville "C" contest was put over till tonight...Petes will have to leave for Waterloo, some 160 or so miles, before noon tomorrow most likely, and get home about dawn, we fear...Bill Calladine is still leading the U.S. eastern amateur hockey loop and may yet set a scoring record for the season...Coupla Brooklin lacrosse stars would like to play for Peterborough this summer...Toronto Leafs will head south Sunday for ball training in Florida...A guy with hay fever could cause a lotta damage at the Brock tonight the way they'll be packed in—every sneeze knocking 18 customers over, eh?

With The Boy Scouts

Hockey Night at the Quaker.

Scouts, alert! One minute Scout silence. Easy. Scouts, salute and repeat the Scout Promise.

So opened the hockey night for all scouts at the Quaker rink, as Assistant Commissioner Ernie Wolfe took the salute from one hundred Peterborough boy scouts before they started in friendly hockey games and races.

The first battle of the evening was closely fought with All Saints pulling through a 2-0 score over St. Luke's.

In the four-man relay many bumps were received; Immaculate Conception coming in first, with All Saints a close second.

Sacred Heart with a well-built group of youngsters such as Bill Jones and Don Corrin had it all over the tiny St. Andrew's lads with a 6-0 score, but the game losers put up a sturdy fight right to the last.

Races for boys over 12 and under 15 went to Leo. McLean who attached himself to the Immaculate Conception squad, but is of St. Peter's fame, while Jack Gaskill of the 11th troop came in a close second.

St. John's lost a close contest with the North-enders, with a 2-0 score; lack of combination being a real factor in their defeat.

The six-boy snake race proved disastrous to many team. Sacred Heart winning out from All Saints after both teams had one fall each in the final race.

The best game of the evening was between Immaculate Conception and St. Paul's South End group, which ended in a tie of 2-all.

To complete the evening, the officers present played brush hockey starting with four men aside with E. Wolfe in charge of the Bang-offs assisted by Com. Lew Grant in goal armed with a snow shovel, while Bob Baldwin captained the Whiz-Bangs with the Skipper brushing away the intended goals. Lew Grant's big fur coat was the means of staving off defeat for the winners, the final score being Bang-offs 3, Whiz-Bangs 1; the game finishing with 15 men a side.

The boys and officers join in thanking the Quaker Oats for the use of the rink for the occasion.

At All Saints

The attack of flu took its toll among the scouts and cubs; also one of the cubs is confined to his bed recovering from an operation for appendicitis.

Bob Kennedy received his first star on Friday last. There were two visitors with the pack, A. Hope and Rover Scout Fred Simmons, who told the cubs a story.

The scouts held a camp fire program under direction of A.S.M. Tomkins. J. Amyotte of the Sacred Heart group was in attendance.

P.L. Ted Smith of the Buldogs was reported on the sick list. On Saturday the troop held a paper collection.

The All Saints rover crew are holding a mixed sleighing party on Wednesday, each rover to bring a can of vegetables soup while their lady friends are asked to bring cake or sandwiches. They will finish up at the house of Charles Dobbin for the refreshments.

Sacred Heart.

The cubs are concentrating on scrap books and it is expected that the work will take up best part of the program for the next few weeks.

Scout Stamp Collectors.

It has been suggested that a scout collectors' club be formed, and any who would help to make up the membership of the club please phone Peter Dominic soon.

Rover Scout Concert.

Lack of response to the appeal for cub and scout talent to assist the suggested concert has been disappointing. We are fully aware that there are many musicians of talent among us, and surely it is for the betterment of scouting in general that you offer your service. It seems that we are all a little afraid to carry out any endeavor to raise funds. Why not phone me at 3067 or Peter Dominic at 2176-J. We are holding our rover council meeting on Monday, March 13. Your support will be weighed by your response.

Coming Events.

Rover council meeting, Monday, March 13.

Scouters club meeting, Thursday, March 16.

Local Association executive meeting, Wednesday, March 22.

Welcome St. Mark's.

On Tuesday last St. Mark's Cub pack held its first meeting. No fanfare of trumpets. No meeting of commissioners. Just a quiet opening with Akela Frank Pammett being the only visitor and helper to give them a start.

Nevertheless Acting Akela Darcy Windsor of St. Mark's was pleased with the response, and is looking forward to the steady advance of St. Mark's in the scout history in Peterborough.

Congratulations to St. Mark's and best wishes to Akela Darcy Windsor and his cubs.

Many Toll Gates For Miami Crew

A humorous tale is recounted in Bert Steel's column of the Galt Daily Reporter, concerning fou ex-Miami puckists, returning home after their hockey league folded down south recently. Bert writes:

There's a swell story going the rounds about Hank Coyston, Kenny Kent, Dint Reilly and Jim Henry (Preston) of something that happened when they were motoring home from the Miami hockey league recently. We take no credit for the story other than merely passing it along.

It seems that the four of them in the course of their drive home, came to a toll bridge. They paid their two-bits and crossed. At the far end of the bridge was a service station and they decided to call in to get some gas. They did. Then they started out once more on their drive home. They came to another toll bridge. Another two-bits. Then later another toll bridge. Another two-bits. This went on until their fourth crossing of a toll bridge. Then the story goes that the keeper of the bridge commented something about "Why don't you make up your minds where you're going" and then they pulled into a service station near-by to fill up with gas again and it turned out to be the same one they had visited earlier in the day. They had been going in circles and hit the same toll gate four times.

Remember When—

The English football league's ban on advance listing of week-end contests resulted in a 500,000 attendance drop three years ago today Less than half-a-million persons saw the 44 games. The league was trying to defeat pool promoters but came out second best, reverting to pre-arranged schedules March 9.

NORWOOD AND MADOC WIN FIRST OF T.V.L. PLAYOFF GAMES

Combines Lace Milltown Squad By 6-0

HAVELOCK, March 7—Blanking Campbellford by a 4-0 score last night at the Norwood arena, the Brennan-coached Norwood "Combines" took the first in the home-and-home series, and collected a four-goal lead to carry into the second game of the Trent Valley Hockey League semi-finals, to be played Wednesday evening in Campbellford. Over four hundred cheering fans, the season's largest crowd, witnessed a game of real play-off calibre. A last minute drop in the temperature provinded a fairly hard sheet of ice for the tussel, and both squads set a terrific pace throughout.

Campbellford were far better on their night's play than the one-sided count would indicate. Forcing the attack practically every period, they were repulsed continually by Norwood's strong defensive combination. The "Combines", playing a steady game of hockey, made few mistakes throughout, and taking advantage of every break, succeeded in running up a nice four-goal margin, which they should be able to [illegible] in the second encounter, if they continue their present brand of play.

The game was hard fought and produced some heavy checking, but on the whole was fairly clean. Only six penalties were handed out during the match by referee O'Malley of Trenton, three to each squad.

Richardson, rugged centre-ice member of the Norwood lineup, playing his finest game to date, grabbed the biggest share of the limelight, with two goals and an assist to his credit. Flanked by Toey Ibey and Bud Webb on his wings, this line was outstanding for the Combines, clicking for three goals besides doing a fine chore of back-checking. Baker, the Norwood net-minder, gave a great demonstration between the pipes to thoroughly earn his shutout.

Noticeably weak defensively, the visitors, however, made up for this with an especially strong offensive, which at times literally peppered Baker with shots. D. Couch, Phillips, C. Couch and Robinson were most effective for Campbellford, with Turner also turning in a good game in the cage. Blake, usually a high-powered member of their attacking division, couldn't seem to hit his stride at any time during the game.

Penalty Costs Goal

The visitors threatened from the face-off in the initial stanza, and continued to press the play, until a penalty to D. Couch for tripping Brennan forced them to go short-handed. While Couch was off Norwood put on their ganging attack and finally Richardson rammed one past Turner, on a pass from Ibey, at the seven minute mark.

Close checking prevented either team from accomplishing much in the first half of the second. A penalty to Brennan for hooking Robinson gave the visitors a great chance. Close to the end of the session G. Puffer, leading a rush, faked a shot at the visitor's defence, passed to C. Puffer on the open right wing, the latter went in to notch Norwood's second counter.

Protecting their two-goal lead, Norwood stuck strictly to defensive hockey during the last session. A goal by Atkinson, was disallowed on an offside. The visitors had the advantage of an extra man when R. Webb went off for kneeing D. Couch, and the Combines had some rather close calls. Shooting the puck down the ice, they continued to hold minutes left in the session the tide out till Webb returned. With three suddenly turned and before long the Richardson, Webb and Ibey line, taking the visitors by surprise, had sunk two more goals. Ibey notched the first with the others also taking part in the play, and Richardson, on a breakaway, tallied the last unassisted.

The teams:

Campbellford: Goal, Turner; defence, D. Couch, Wilkes; centre, Phillips; wings, Blake, Atkinson; alternates, C. Couch, Robinson, D. Free, Donnan, F. Free.

Referee, W. O'Malley, Trenton.

Summary:

First Period

Norwood—Richardson (Ibey, R. Webb) 8.57
Penalties—D. Couch, G. Puffer.

Second Period

Norwood—C. Puffer (G. Puffer) 9.46
Penalties—Atkinson, Brennan.

Third Period

Norwood—Ibey (W. Webb, Richardson) 10.31
Norwood—Richardson 10.52
Penalties—D. Couch, R. Webb.

Canadian Ski Champions In Slalom and Jumping

That size doesn't count for everything in skiing was more than amply demonstrated at the dominion championships held at Fort William, where Louis Georgas, LEFT, of Owen Sound, 19 years old and slightly over five feet in height, whizzed around the flags to capture the title in the slalom event, after having taken the Ontario crown a couple of weeks previously. Ole Bakkelund, RIGHT, from Temiskaming, zoomed through the air with sufficient finesse and distance to be crowned champion in the closed jumping event.

THE SPORTS ROUND-UP

By EDDIE BRIETZ

NEW YORK, March 7.—(AP)—They are wondering these days where Doc Sutherland who resigned as football coach at University of Pittsburgh will light...Here on Broadway the guessers are guessing he'll lay off coaching this year and sign with Navy in 1940...(or maybe go to Southern California if Howard Jones has a bad year)...They must be figuring on a bumper cotton crop down south if Mississippi State can offer Sutherland anything like the dough he has been getting at Pitt...Meantime, the wailing wall on the Smoky City is tottering under the strain.

The dove of peace is perched on Judge Landis' left shoulder and the laurel wreath is around the royal neck, but Watson Clark, the old southpaw, is the lad who got Van Mungo's name on that $5,000 contract...Bull Lea and Kayak II, the steeds of the moment, are booked to clash in several of the richer stakes on New York tracks this summer.

Harlan Edwards, track writer for the Columbia (S.C.) state, had to laff when they withdrew Seabiscuit from the Santa Anita...It was old stuff to him...He watched the hoss limping around Columbia last winter and on Dec. 24, wrote: "Seabiscuit is through"...Three days later, he wrote: "If Trainer Smith can patch Seabiscuit up in time for the Santa Anita, he's not a horse trainer—he's a genius"...Next day he wrote: "Seabiscuit will never go to the post in the Santa Anita"...After these columns appeared Mr. Edwards natcherly received what some sets call the horse laugh...But now he can strut—sitting down, if he wants to.

Incidentally, when the Biscuit was declared out, James J. Carroll's St. Louis future book pocketed $3,000 in gravy...The eastern team that offered Bobby Grayson $6,000 to play pro football is the New York Giants ...Mrs. F. D. R. has been invited to open the training season for the Toledo Mud Hens by hurling out the first ball when she visits Harlingen, Tex., March 16.

Tweed Terriers Lambaste Mic-Macs 7-1

MADOC, March 7.—The Tweed Terriers walloped the Madoc-Marmora Mic-Macs to the tune of 7-1 in the first game of the T.V.L. semi-finals in Madoc Monday night.

Counting twice to Madoc's lone tally in the first period, the Terriers retained that margin until midway through the third, when the game blew up and they rapped in five more counts in seven minutes to carry away a six-goal lead for the return game Wednesday night.

The game was late in starting and the Greenshirts were left to cool their heels for three-quarters of an hour due to holdups in the visitor's room.

Facing elimination in the regular schedule, Tweed has battled their way to a play-off berth and are only a step from the league title.

Most of the credit for the win goes to Reeves in the visitor's net, who played a sensational game and to his defence which covered beautifully throughout the game. By actual count in the second period, Reeves turned aside twenty-three shots, most of them hard ones, as compared with two on the local net.

Cournyea was the best offensive man on the ice, flanked by Provost and W. Leal, they accounted for all Tweed goals. The Tummon brothers on defence, along with Orr, were a stone wall while Reeves in the net was unbeatable.

As for the Mic-Macs, they spent their strength in the second and early third period and had nothing left to beat off the wave of red and white attackers as the game broke up. Playing every man up to try for the tying counts they were caught short time and again, until in the dying moments of the game with the score 7-1 they yanked the goalie in a desperate effort to get a count.

The Game

At the four-minute mark Madoc, ganging in after a face-off in Tweed territory, counted. Alexander nailed one that went through the net. Goal disputed, net repaired, goal allowed. One minute later Cournyea evened the count. Orr penalized for tripping. Hall drove through the defence, picked up his rebound and was tripped by Tummon as he missed the net on his try. Tummon off as Orr returned. Just before the bell W. Leal make it 2-1.

In the second Cournyea was chased for tripping. Hall got the gate for tripping. Alexander went through with the goalie to beat, was tripped by H. Leal, who got the thumb. Keller took the shot but missed the net as the bell went.

In the third W. Leal scored after a scramble in the corner. Two minutes later Cournyea pounded in the rebound of Provost's shot. A minute later Cournyea dangled through alone to count again. At 19 minutes W. Leal counted as Hollingsworth was slow in clearing Provost's shot from the blue line.

Madoc drew the goalie and put in six forwards during the last minute in a desperate effort to break the count. "Bouncer" Holloway of Belleville handled the game.

MacPhail's Salary Cut

CLEARWATER, Flya., March 7.—(AP).— Larry Macphail, executive vice-president announced to-day Van Lingle Mungo had signed a contract to pitch for Brooklyn Dodgers at a salary of $5,000, one-third of his 1938 stipend. He worked out with the club this morning.

Mungo, who had engaged in lengthy verbal exchange with the Brooklyn management over the salary cut, "was signed with no ifs, ands or buts," Macphail said.

The firebal lhurler won only four games and lost 11 last season.

Senior Final Here Tonight

Niagara Falls play the Petes here tonight (Tuesday) at 8.30 o'clock in the Brock St. rink. It is the Petes' first game of the O. H. A. senior "B" round-robin final, postponed from last night, and should see a packed arena when these 1938 feudists resume their hostilities. A good sheet of ice is in prospect and fans can bank on a thrilling redhot battle from start to finish this evening. Over 2,000 jamed the rink last March to see the Petes pull out a 5-3 nod over the Falls here, only to lose the round by a goal later in Niagara. Both clubs have some changes in the lineups but the old rivalry will be there again. It's a highly-important tussle with the end of the senior puck season in sight.

The Falls lineup will be: Goal, Mowers; defence, Dyte and Murray; centre, Grigor; wings, Mason and Croucher; alternates, Brenchley, Pavone, Morrison, Greenwood and Allan or steele. The Petes' crew may be: Goal, Harding; defence, Gardner and Gray; centre, Kingdon; wings, Starr and Tompkins; alternates, Coughlin, Creighton, Nichol, Crowe and Weir. Another hard-hitting and classy duel is expected when these smart outfits tangle here tonight.

Heavyweight Boxing In Sad State To Let Galento Fight Louis Claims Old Manassa Mauler

DETROIT, March 7.—(C. P.). — Jack Dempsey, the old Manassa mauler, worried to day because champion Joe Louis and challenger Tony Galento were matched for the heavyweight championship of the world.

"It's just a downright shame," the old Manassa mauler answered. "It's a shame because it isn't fair to other young heavyweights to put Galento in with the champion when the best he can be rated is 1,000 to 1.

"There are a couple of good heavy-weights who should be considered ahead of Galento. There's one right here in Detroit— Roscoe Toles. Then there are fellows like Bob Pastor, Lou Nova, Tommy Farr, and we might even include Max Baer and Red Burman, though the latter two wouldn't have much chance.

"I wonkin't say that any of these fellows actually deserve a shot at Louis, mind you," Dempsey said. "But Galento should be made to fight them before he gets a chance at the title. The whole trouble is that Tony won't fight these fellows. I honestly don't think he could lick any of them.

"Boxing, especially among the heavyweights, is in a sorry state when a fellow like Galento gets a chance at the title. It's not much of a chance—but he might get lucky. Any time two fellows start throwing punches, they each have a chance. But in this case Tony's chances are very remote.

"And what has he done to get the bout with Louis? Dempsey answered his own question in a hurry. "Just exactly nothing in a fighting way," he said. "He's going around the country getting his picture taken while he's wearing a monocle and drinking beer. That's all. Because the least said about his fights lately the better.

He Drinks Milk

Just to prove that some athletes still live on wholesome foods, despite the flood of Galento beer-drinking scenes, Abe Feldman, who meets the walking beer barrel in Miami, takes a long, healthy gulp of a bottle of milk. It must be good for the hair at least.

IN MEMORIAM

MONTGOMERY.—In loving memory of our dear Daddy, Joseph Wellington Montgomery, who departed this life one year ago today, March 7, 1938.

Time speeds on, one year has passed
Since Death its gloom, its shadows cast
Within our home where all seemed bright
And took from us a shining light.

We miss you, Daddy, and always will,
Your vacant place there's none can fill.
Down here we mourn, but not in vain
For up in Heaven we'll meet again.
—Sadly missed by his two sons, Noble and Arnold.

MONTGOMERY—In loving memory of my dear husband, Joseph Wellington Montgomery, who passed away one year ago to-day, March 7, 1938.

Put his things all away, he will never need them more
Oh the sunlight of my day passed beyond the golden shore.
Clasped his hands upon his breast, sadly round his coffin weep.
Angels bid my darling come; Oh my loved one gone to sleep.
There is stillness all around, there is silence sad and deep,
Tender ears can't hear my voice, for my loved one's gone to sleep.
Years may come and years may go, still that form I loved so well,
It has vanished from my home, how I miss him none can tell.
Angels to that starry home, bore the love I could not keep.
There he will wait until I come; there my loved one's gone to sleep.
—Ever remembered by his loving Wife.

WATSON.—In loving memory of my dear sister, Mrs. Arthur Watson, who passed away March 7, 1938.

As I loved her,
So I miss her.
—Sadly missed, Vickie McNamee.

WATSON (Edith McNamee). — In loving memory of a dear wife and mother, who departed Monday, March 7, 1938.

Every day brings sweet memories,
Every memory brings a tear,
Deep within our hearts we cherish
Thoughts of one we loved so dear.
—Ever remembered by her Husband and little Daughter.

OBITUARY

MICHAEL J. HALLIHAN

In the passing of Michael J. Hallihan, Peterborough County has lost another highly esteemed lifelong citizen.

Born in Otonabee township, son of the late Michael Hallihan and Johanna Welch, he resided there the greater portion of his life, before moving to Peterborough, and was the last surviving member of his immediate family.

His quiet and kindly disposition and one who was always ready to lend a helping hand to any who sought his aid, he had gained a wide circle of friends who wil lregert his passing. He was a member of the church of the Sacred Heart ever since it was built, and also of the Holy Name Society.

The funeral took place on Monday morning to the church of the Sacred Heart for Requiem Mass, offered by Rev. Dr. Grant, who also conducted the graveside services. Present in the sanctuary were Rev. J. J. O'Brien and also Rev. J. C. Moloney, who addressed the congregation present. Interment was made in the family plot in St. Peter's cemetery.

Active pallbearers were Joseph Fitzgerald, Vincent O'Toole, Oscar Hallihan, Alphonse Fitzgerald, Michael Hallihan and Pierce Powers.

Honorary pallbearers were Thomas O'Brien, Lawrence Killoran, A. M. Dorris, Thomas Fitzgerald, Thomas Powers, Vincent Fitzgerald, Thomas Cavanagh, Vincent Powers and John Sweeney.

Mrs. Charles J. Fagan of Buffalo, N.Y., a niece of Mr. Hallihan, was present at the funeral.

JOHN McKILLOP ARNOLD

CAMPBELLFORD, March 7—One of Campbellford's best-known and highly respected citizens, in the person of John McKillop Arnold, passed peacefully away on Tuesday last, after an illness of several months duration. Mr. Arnold, who was born on the 10th Concession of Seymour East on May 4th, 1859, was a son of the late John Arnold and Isabella McKillop Arnold, pioneer Scotch settlers.

The deceased was a graduate of the Campbellford High School and of the Cobourg Model School, at the age of 16. He was for several years engaged in the teaching profession until forced to return home after the death of his only brother. He was a man of keen intellect and sterling integrity, a most devoted husband and loving father.

In 1885 he was married to Elizabeth Craighead, who, with two daughters, Ada of town and Ona, Reg. N. of New York city, survive. One son Kenneth, who was actively engaged in the Methodist ministry, predeceased his father nearly twenty-four years ago.

The late Mr. Arnold took a keen interest in both political and municipal affairs, having served Seymour township for a number of years as tax collector, reeve, county commissioner and also served on the Board of Education in the town of Campbellford. He was a justice of the peace for over thirty years, and also served as a local representative of the Manufacturers Life Insurance Company at one time. Until his removal to Campbellford in 1913 he was a faithful member and official of Zion church in Seymour and in town he continued to attend the Methodist church and was a member of the trustee board until the time of the union, since which time he has been a regular member of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, in which he served as an elder on the session until the time of his death. The Bible, much of which he had committed to memory in his youth, was his daily guide.

The funeral, which was largely attended, was held on Friday afternoon from his late residence on Kent street and was conducted by Rev. B. Simpson Black of St. Andrew's church. Numerous and beautiful floral offerings bore silent tribute to the memory of the deceased.

The pall bearers were Messrs. J. P. Archer, Thomas Campbell, Howard Clark, William H. Gibson, Melville Petherick, Percy Craighead and Reginald Craighead. Flower bearers were Messrs. T. J. Craighead, William C. Wallace, E. Haig, W. Sweet, John Currie and Walter Lowe. The remains were laid to rest in the family plot in Mount Pleasant Cemetery.

Hendren Named Truant Officer For Lakefield Public School

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, March 7. —"Principal T. W. Chaplin's resignation has not been received by the Board," Chairman F. L. Erskine stated last night, following the Lakefield Public School Board meeting, which was held in the Council Chamber of the Memorial Hall here at 8.30 p.m. Although Mr. Chaplin's appointment to the postion of village postmaster was officially announced in February, no definite time has been set by the post office department, for him to take over his duties. "Mr. Chaplin was advised to make no arrangements," Mr. Erskine said "and therefore he has done nothing yet. It may be six months before he has to assume the duties of postmaster. In the meantime we connot advertise for a successor as the position is not vacant."

Chairman F. L. Erskine and Trustees E. W. Bailey, M. Kingdon, E. J. Millage and E. H. Northey were present.

The report of the finance committee was received and the accounts passed.

On motion of Trustee E. W. Bailey seconded by M. Kingdon, W. G. Hendren was appointed attendance officer for the year 1939 at a salary of $10.00 per annum.

Chairman Erskine stated that the Board was short of funds pending acceptance of the municipal auditors' report for 1938. This report has not been accepted and until it is, the Bank will not loan any money to the Council, Mr. Erskine pointed out. The Board is dependent for their funds to a large extent, on grants from the Council.

On motion by Trustees E. H. Northey and E. W. Bailey, the following correspondence was received:

The Hughes-Owens Co. re royal photographer; Inspector Copp re report; Mr. Buchanan, re application; Mr. Curtis, re application; Principal T. W. Chaplin, re report.

Epidemic of Flu

Principal T. W. Chaplin was present and drew the attention of the board members to an epidemic of flu in the school.

"There were about seventy pupils absent today," Principal Chaplin stated, "and two members of the teaching staff, Miss M. Comrie and Miss A. Young, are sick with flu." "I got Mrs. J. W. Ridpath to take Miss Comrie's place and Mrs. Ivan Madill to take Miss Young 's room, and I have reported the conditions to the medical officer of health. There is nothing else I can do. If there is anything further to be done it is up to the medical health officer to do it," the principal stated.

"Practically all the children in the school have been to the dentist and had their teeth examined. A report was sent to the parents regarding the condition of each child's teeth, he said. "This examination is free," Mr. Chaplin continued. "Many dentists in other towns are doing this work free.

"I have not examined these reports carefully, as yet, but there were a number of cases reported where the children had never before been to a dentist," Principal Chaplin said in conclusion.

It was moved by Trustee E. J. Millage and seconded by Trustee Northey, that "the board go on record as wishing to thank the council for coming to the school and inspecting it. (The inspection, chairman Erskine said, is made once or twice a year by the Board. It was made last night immediately preceding the regular school board meeting.)

It was moved by Trustee Bailey and seconded by Trustee Kingdon, that tenders for fifteen cords of No. 1 maple—four-foot wood—to be cut this winter and delivered to the school next July, be advertised for in the local paper. "We shall ask for tenders, that is the fairest way," remarked Chairman Erskine.

"You could get better wood if you bought it green," maintained Trustee Kingdon, and an interesting discussion re the merits and demerits of green and dry wood ensued. The question of shrinkage came up and someone remarked: "If the wood shrinks as much as John Sanderson's table, it would certainly pay to buy it dry."

The table is all right now, Trustee Bailey explained, referring to a table built for the school recently by John Sanderson.

"When Mr. Sanderson made the table he did not use kiln-dried material and the table top started to curl up," Mr. Bailey continued. "When the defect was pointed out to Mr. Sanderson, he made a top of ply wood and veneer, which made a fine job," Mr. Bailey said. "It is too damp to keep kiln-dried lumber in this village," Trustee Kingdon pointed out.

"We found everything O.K. at the school," Chairman Erskine stated, "although decorating is needed badly enough. The caretaking is being well done."

"We should go up to the school again if we are going to do anything this summer," Chairman Erskine remarked. "Since we have been in power we have tried to bring the school up to a higher standard. We are doing it, little by little," he said. "We'll have something to show for every dollar we have spent."

"Last year I made a program of work that needed to be tended to," Trustee Bailey said. "It's not hard to find things to be done," Trustee Millage intercepted.

"But it's getting better every year," Mr. Bailey pointed out.

The matter of whether or not the public and high school boards should hold their meetings on the same night, as a present, was discussed. The first Monday in the month is the public school's date, it was pointed out. If the high school board wishes to change the date of their meeting that is up to them.

On motion the Board adjourned.

Learn How To Blush Expert Tips Women

NEW YORK, March 7—(AP). — Girls, said M. Dono Edmond today, have an unfortunate habit of looking men straight in the eye.

"It is not alluring," said Edmond, former court beauty adviser to the late Queen Marie of Roumania. "It makes a man feel inferior. He feels you're trying to probe his mind."

Far better it is to look at him fleetingly, and then look away, continued Edmond.

"Yes, I believe women should be somewhat coy," he said, "but I don't mean baby talk. That's terrible! It annoys a man's nerves.

"Women should learn how to blush. It can be done by exhaling a little longer than they are accustomed."

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER
By SHEPARD BARCLAY
"The Authority on Authorities"

THE NO TRUMP GAMBLE

MATCH POINT DUPLICATE is the greatest of all bridge laboratories. Since the same deal gets played at different contracts, dependent on the tendencies of various bidders, it furnishes evidence on what can occur, much better than the mere conjecture which develops in the post-mortems of rubber bridge. One of the main points still being tested in the duplicate proving ground is the relative merit of no trump and suit contracts when the hands seem adaptable to both.

(Dealer: East. Neither side vulnerable.)

At all tables of a duplicate tournament South started the bidding of this deal with 1-Club, North responded with 1-Spade and South bid 1-No trump instead of rebidding clubs. North in all cases then rebid at 2-Spades. South then supported at 3-Spades, some Norths going to 4-Spades, some to 3-No trump, having three to the J in the two unbid suits which the partners had indicated they could stop.

Where spades were played, five-odd were made, with the loss of two diamond tricks. North's heart losers were thrown on South's clubs. Where no trump was played, the result depended on the timing. At some tables, a diamond was led because West did not like to underlead his heart K. East cashed his two diamonds and returned the suit, declarer winning and then running ten more tricks to make 5-No trump, which was top for North-South on the deal. At other tables, where a heart was led or where East switched to a heart after winning the diamond lead, East-West got a heart trick in addition to two diamonds and held North-South to four-odd, which was bottom for them.

So, as far as the evidence of this deal is concerned, the relative merits of the major suit contract versus no trump is uncertain. There is no argument, however, about the greater safety of the spade contract in rubber bridge.

Tomorrow's Problem

(Dealer: South. North-South vulnerable.)

At a heart contract, after three leads of spades, four of trumps and the ace of diamonds, why should East not play his Queen on a lead of the diamond 7?

Martin's Union May Invade Aircraft Trade

DETROIT, March 7—(AP).—The United Automobile Workers' Union convention called by Homer Martin today entertained resolutions which would, among other things, ban Communists from the union, alter the union's name, and set up machinery to push organization in the aircraft industry.

The convention, called by Martin, elected U.A.W. president, in defiance of a majority of the union's elected executive board which is supported by the congress of industrial organizations, is in its third day. The opposing group's convention is set for March 27 in Cleveland.

Fifty-three resolutions had been prepared for presentation to the session. A number of these dealt with establishing the cleavage between the union headed by Martin and the C.I.O. The proposals also included plans for:

Amending the U.A.W. constitution to forbid membership to "members of the Communist party or members of any group or organization which seeks to overthrow the United States by force."

Establishment of a special aircraft department within the union to stimulate organization in that industry, and similar attention to the farm implement industry.

Changing the U.A.W.'s name to the United Automobile and Aircraft Workers of America.

Extending "the principles and requirements of the National Labor Relations Act into the laws of every state in the union."

Boycotting goods produced in Germany, Italy and Japan.

Urging the United States government to "open the doors of trade to the democratic representatives of Spain."

Halifax Fire Toll Now Believed 28

HALIFAX, March 7 — (CP). — An official police announcement placing at 28 the number of persons "missing—believed dead" in last Thursday's Queen Hotel fire and recovery of the bodies of half that number spurred searchers today as probe of the ruins continued. Police fixed the death list after examing the hotel register, recovered Saturday.

With J. J. Fraser of the Nova Scotia Highways Department named to supervise recovery operations, workmen toiled day and night during the week-end in the tangled mass of brick and charred timber while traffic in the affected area was prohibited. The work kept up by floodlight, despite rain and wet snow that fell Saturday night.

Tokyo Looks At Russia In Levying War Costs

TOKYO, March 7—(AP). — The budget committee of the Lower House of Parliament was informed today that the Government is considering "the new situation" of Soviet Russia in planning military costs ofr the next fiscal year. The committee opened study of military outlays expected to total $2,000,000,000.

Finance Minister Sotaro Ishawata asked: "Is Japan formulating her budgets with an eye to the military preparations of the Soviet Unions?"

The minister replied: "The new situation of the Soviet Union is being taken into consideration."

(Domei, Japanese News Agency, reported yesterday 15 Russians were killed or wounded Saturday on the Manchoukuo-Siberia border, near Manchuli, scene of recurrent clashes in recent weeks).

Navy minister Mitsumasa Yonai told legislators the naval program is aimed at making the Japanese navy supreme in the Western Pacific.

Yonai said Japanese shipbuilding program would be spread over six years and would involve a total cost estimated at $350,000,000.

Son And Dad Do Some Vowing After Shooting That Nearly Kills Youth As Burglar

Detroit, March 7 (CP).

HENRY JACOBS vowed today he would never shoot a gun again and his son, Arthur Jacobs, vowed he would never again to try to steal in the house late at night.

Henry Jacobs, up early for a fishing expedition, heard someone sneaking in the back door. He sneaked out the front door, armed with a revolver, and shot at the figure. The man screamed and fled over the back fence.

Jacobs was a hero among neighbors until he found his son, Arthur, had not been home all night. Police searched the area frantically for the son, sure he was wounded. They found the youth walking the streets unharmed but heart-broken.

He thought his father had been so mad at him for staying out until 3 a.m. that he had shot at him.

Britain's Fall Army Manoeuvres To Be Greatest Since 1898

By Pat Usher
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

LONDON, March 7 — (CP). — Britain will send more than 60,000 troops into army manoeuvres next September in the biggest scale "war games" since 1898.

It will be the first large-scale test for Britain's remodelled mechanized army. The exercises will be in Yorkshire where open moors and rolling hill country provide terrain corresponding to some parts of Europe.

Detailed arrangements have yet to be made. But present plans call for concentration of a large force at Aldershot. This will move northward to engage an army defending Yorkshire.

Army manoeuvres have not been held on such a scale since the Great War. The most recent comparable year was 1898 when the Duke of Connaught opposed Sir Redvers Buller in the south-west counties. Nearly 60,000 men were in the field then.

The September games will provide the first full dress test of Britain's new war machine. They will be enacted by an army moving on wheels, not on foot.

The mechanized army will move north from Aldershot to Yorkshire travelling along parallel roads, an operation expected to take a couple of days. Never before has the high command attempted to transport mechanically such a large force over such a distance—roughly 200 miles.

"Somewhere in Yorkshire" the "invading" force will clash with a defence army. The broad valleys of England's largest county afford ideal terrain for operations of mobile units, especially tank forces, and its hills abound in first class defensive positions.

Dill In Command.

The First and Second Army Corps, stationed at Aldershot, will constitute the invading army. Lieut.-General Sir John Dill, who came back in 1937 from commanding British forces in riot-torn Palestine to head the Aldershot command, will be one of the leaders in the attack.

Yorkshire's defence will be in charge of the Fifth Division, stationed at Catterick, Strensall and York, reinforced by some territorial army units of the northern command. The Fifth Division is part of the Third Army Corps.

The attacking force, which will probably be merged into a single war-strength corps, would constitute the spearhead of an expeditionary force, should Britain be compelled to send one abroad in an emergency.

Decision to hold the manoeuvres in Yorkshire recalls that the northern command of the army was given first-class status with the appointment in 1937 of an experienced senior general, Sir William Bartholomew, to head it. Sir William was chief of the general staff in India for three years and is an expert on Imperial defence problems.

Lake Huron at Goderich was the same as January, 9¼ inches higher than February, 1938; and 18 inches lower than the average level of February for the last 79 years.

Lake Erie at Port Colborne was ¾ of an inch higher than January, three inches higher than February, 1938; and 9¼ inches lower than the average level of February for the last 79 years.

Lake Ontario at Kingston was a half-inch higher than anuary, five inches lower than February 1938; and 13¼ inches lower than the average level of February for the last 79 years.

Stowaway Remanded On Theft Charge

TORONTO, March 7 — (CP). — Loretta Eccleson of Hamilton, who returned to her home last week after crossing the Atlantic ocean as a stowaway on the giant liner Queen Mary only to be arrested on a charge of theft, pleaded guilty to the charge in police court here to-day and was remanded for sentence to March 13. A mental examination was ordered.

Miss Eccleson appeared in court here January 25 on a similar charge, laid following theft of articles from a room of a woman student at Whitney Hall, University of Toronto, and was given in charge of the Salvation Army. It was explained in court to-day she escaped custody of the army and next was heard of as on the high seas bound for England, whence she was deported.

Held As Kidnapper

Charles Mitchell was a hero when this picture was taken as he told police how he secured the release of four-year-old Mickey Katz from the hands of kidnappers for a ransom of $250. Mitchell and another man, Sol Schwartz, are now charged with the kidnapping which is alleged to have been committed to regain $7,000 lost in horse-racing bets placed with the boy's father. Incidentally Mitchell was supposedly one of the Katz family's closest friends.

Suicide Explains Girl's Murder

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., March 7—(AP) —A rambling 500-word suicide note —partly typed and partly scrawled on scraps of paper—told to-day the "terrible nightmare" of the killing of 13-year-old Haselteen Black, Oklahoma City junior high school girl.

Coroner B. W. Tadlock said William Purkhiser, portly 53-year-old insurance man, signed the letter yesterday, then put a revolver bullet through his brain.

Haselteen's mother, Mrs. R. W. Scharber, found her beaten and strangled body in her Oklahoma City home when she returned from work Thursday with her husband, Haselteen's stepfather.

Purkhiser's partly-clad body was found by the proprietor of a rooming-house here. The letter referred to financial disagreements Purkhiser had had with Mrs. Scharber, whom it said he had known since 1932.

"I went out Thursday because I did not think anybody would be home," it read, "so I would be there when the Scharbers came home, and I was going to have a talk with them and try and get things straight.

"When I found her (Haselteen) there, and that she had been turned against me, too, I lost all reasoning, and nothing but a terrible nightmare followed."

Police said Purkhiser once had been associated with the Scharbers and recently had tried to borrow money from them.

Would Bar Druggists Giving Codeine Away

TORONTO, March 7 — (CP). — Closer control of the sale of Codeine, Barbituric Acid, Amidopyrine and various derivatives and combinations of the three will be proposed to the Ontario Legislature in Pharmacy Act Amendments to be sponsored by Health Minister Kirby, it was learned today.

In 1937 the Legislature forbid the retail sale of these drugs except on prescription. The act is now to be amended by adding after the phrase "no person shall sell by retail" the words "or give". The act in its present form has been found to be insufficiently restrictive, health department officials say.

The drugs mentioned are not dealt with in the federal narcotic drugs act but are nevertheless said to be habit forming.

Mr. Kirby said the Health Department found certain druggists were taking advantage of the loopholes in the 1937 legislation and were avoiding the provisions of it by "giving" the drugs away. Requirement for such a gift was the purchase of some other article at a price sufficiently inflated to cover the cost of the drugs being "given away."

130 Hurt In Riots

A Hindu procession there was attacked by crowds of spectators.

Jews Plan Huge Invasion Of Holy Land

LONDON, March 7 — (AP). — Jewish delegates to the London conference on Palestine were reported to be developing a plan for presentation to-night as a counter proposal to the British proposal for an independent state in the Holy Land.

They were expected to present th counter-proposal to Colonial Secretary Malcolm MacDonald at a meeting he arranged in an effort to avert collapse of the conference.

The British plan for Palestine would end the League of Nations mandate which Great Britain holds over the Hold Land and would set up an independent state, allied by treaty with Britain.

Some of the Jews favored a plan whereby their race would reach numerical equality with the Arabs over a 10-year period of heavy immigration into Palestine, this to be followed by the setting up of a bi-national Jewish state (Jewish-Arab) state federated with Iraq, Egypt, Saudi Arabia, Transjordan, Yemen, and possibly Syria.

There was little prespect the Arab delegates would accept such a plan because they are solidly opposed to further Jewish immigration.

Private Members Hold Final Day

OTTAWA, March 7 (CP)—Parliament entered a busy week today. This was the last day reserved to private members in the Commons, and the Lower House planned to clean up the order paper by ploughing through private members' resolutions. Tomorrow the Senate resumes sittings after a recess of a couple of weeks.

The Commons will bear the brunt of the week's heavy program. The Radio Committee tomorrow continues the annual survey of Canadian Broadcasting Corporation affairs. Leonard W. Brockington of Winnipeg, chairman of the Board of Governors, was expected to resume his evidence, possibly detailing financial aspects of the corporation. On Thursday the Public Accounts Committee will hold a preliminary meeting before investigating the Bren machine gun contract.

In the House the main item of business will be resumption of the debate on monetary reform, considered likely to be a major issue in the next general elections campaign. The impromptu forum of monetary theories came about when Finance Minister Dunning moved the House into committee of the whole to study his resolution giving the government authority to borrow up to $750,000,000 as required to meet maturing obligations and unforeseen expenditures.

Debt-Free Money.

The Social Credit group moved an amendment urging that interest-bearing bonds be only sold to meet commitments outside of Canada and that money for commitments in Canada be provided by the Bank of Canada issuing debt-free currency.

The amendment was ruled out of order, but Mr. Dunning hoped it would be redrafted and submitted again. "I should like this committee to go on record in this matter," he said. "We want to make known to the people of Canada and the people of the world whether we want to embark on crude and uncontrolled inflation, whether we will maintain that measure of scientific control which has been made possible by the creation of the Bank of Canada and by the various statutes of this country dealing with the control of currency and credit."

Another deluge of work may descend on the Commons late in the week in the form of the supplementary estimates. Reports were that they might include a widespread public works program which might involve spending sums estimated as high as $100,000,000.

Caddy's Finder Dies

VICTORIA, March 7 — (CP). — Charles Frederick Eagles, 66, the man who discovered Victoria's elusive sea serpent Cadborosaurus, and a colorful personality of Western Canada for many years, died here yesterday. A cousin of Actor John Barrymore, Mr. Eagles was a pioneer theatre operator on the prairies before coming to Victoria 20 years ago. He was Canada's first registered osteopath.

"Great Discovery"

Elaine Barrie Barrymore, discovered and wiped off some tell-tale lipstick marks on the famous profile of husband John Barrymore, during rehearsals of the play "My Dear Children," in which both will appear shortly. Here Elaine distorts the profile by taking the evidence on her handkerchief. John stoutly denied it was anybody's lipstick but Elaine's. But she had the evidence and announced flatly "It's not my brand." We don't know what happened when the pair got home.

Government Expert Declares Nine Pelts As Those Of A "Species Of Wild Dog"

BELLEVILLE, March 7—When a wolf is not a wolf it must be a wild dog—at least so opines Delbert Reid, Tyendinaga Township hunter who had the pelts of the nine "wolf-cubs" despatched by him in a den near Marysville a few weeks ago, returned to him to-day from Ontario governments experts in Toronto, labeled as a "species of wild dog."

While Reid's application for the bounty had been refused by government officials, he will be able to take consolation in the fact that township officials will pay him the township bounty of $2.50 per pelt.

In a communication to County-Treasurer James Haggerty, who forwarded the bounty application, government officials stated that they "gave the applicant every benefit of the doubt, but in view of certain circumstances and condition of the pelts were forced to categorize them as those of a species of wild dog.'"

"The domestic dog, if left to run wild, will revert to a native state," the letter continued, "while it must be taken into consideration that wolves do not litter at this time of the year, and in any event would not bear a litter of such proportions."

Illness Affects W.M.S. Attendance

(Examiner Correspondence.)

WARSAW, March 7. — Illness knocked down attendance at the United Church W.M.S. here Thursday afternoon when only a few members were present.

President Mrs. George Taylor was well enough to attend and preside over the meeting and friends were glad to see her about once more. In the "B" group, however, Mrs. Bert Ray was ill, Mrs. Latta had illness in her home, Mrs. W. Darling could not get out because of road conditions.

The program for the fifth chapter of "Ministry in the Storm Centres" as given for the March meeting in the Missionary Monthly was followed. Mrs. Wilkinson led in prayer and presided at the piano, while Mrs. Stuart Clysdale sang solos. Mrs. Ed. Ball read the "Parable of the Great Surprise" as contained in Matt. 25, verses 31-46.

Mrs. Taylor closed the meeting at the conclusion of the reading. The quarterly tea was not held owing to the small attendance, but will be held at the next meeting.

$25 Fine For Selling Unpasteurized Cream

STRATFORD, Ont., Mar. 7 (CP). —D. A. Dempsey, manager of the Stratford Creamery, was fined $25 and costs when he was convicted before Magistrate J. A. Makins in police court today of selling unpasteurized cream and milk. It was the first such prosecution tried here since the Milk Pasteurization Act came into effect last October.

Dempsey's defence was based on the fact he had come to an "agreement" with several customers that any raw cream purchased from him was for animal consumption only. He said that several customers had been turned away empty-handed when they admitted that the cream they purchased was for human consumption. One defence witness admitted in cross-examination, however, that the "agreement" was merely a subterfuge in order to get the unpasteurized cream.

In summing up the case Magistrate Makins said that "sometimes under modern laws acts which seemed quite innocent before, become offences. I don't think any great harm was done in this particular case but Mr. Dempsey had admitted that he sold the unpasteurized cream and the only thing I can do is register a conviction."

Severe Neuritis Pains Stopped By Syntona

This Dundas Lady Says It Helped Her After Many Other Things Failed. Tells of Other Health Benefits.

"When I began taking Syntona several weeks ago I was suffering terribly from neuritis that had bothered me for the last three years," says Mrs. H. R. Dyment, Dundas, Ontario.

"I took many medicines but nothing would relieve the severe pains in my shoulder and back. There were many nights that I couldn't sleep, my nerves were so bad that I felt tired and run down and had no desire to do my work or go any place. My food soured and I suffered a lot from acid risings and a sick nauseated feeling in my stomach.

"All that has changed since I've taken a few bottles of Syntona and now I feel like a new woman. The pains have entirely gone oway, my nerves are steady once more and I have regained all my lost strength and energy. I have a good appetite, now, too, and never have any trouble with my stomach no matter what I eat. My friends all remark how much better I look and I owe this all to your wonderful Syntona medicine."

MRS. H. R. DYMENT

Clue To Uranium Secret Warms Up May Provide Power For World

By Rennie Taylor
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

BERKELEY, Calif., March 7 (AP). —Recent advances in atom-smashing have started scientists on a new and apparently narrowing hunt for the secret by which, they say, a few pounds of uranium may be made to run all the light, heat and power plants on earth.

The trail leads through a labyrinth of ifs, but it is becoming hotter.

Dr. Luis Alvarez, one of the young scientists working with the University of California cyclotron, a powerful atom-smashing device, said today he and his associates were taking up the quest anew by digging into the implications of a startling discovery attributed a few days ago to Dr. G. Hahn of Berlin.

Dr. Hahn was reported to have found an energy of 200,000,000 volts in an exploding atom of uranium.

The Hahn process was tried out with the cyclotron and similar results were obtained.

That step, Dr. Alvarez reported, opened up the possibility of developing some means of causing a 200,000,000-volt discharge to perpeuate itself and increase prodigiously by setting in motion a continuous and rapidly multiplying series of other explosions.

Splits Larger Atom.

In breaking down the uranium atom a neutron was shot into it. The speeding neutron caused the relatively large atom to fall apart and to rearrange its components into two other elements.

The original atom supposedly contained several neutrons before being shot, but during the break-up process none of them was observed flying off to become potential destruction for other uranium atoms.

The immediate problem of the researchers, Dr. Alvarez said, was to cause the atom to give up its available neutrons in such a way that each would explode other atoms and thus pyramid the resultant power.

The experimenters expressed the belief that these neutrons eventually would be singled out and put to work.

Neutrons are more effective than other sub-tomic particles in exploding atoms because they penetrate more deeply. And the neutron which set off the 200,000,000-volt discharge carried only one one-hundredth of a volt to do the trick, Dr. Alvarez said.

Worth $1 a Pound.

In one pound of uranium, worth about $1, there are 453.6 grams. Each gram contains three septillion (3,000,000,000,000,000,000,000) (21 ciphers) atoms.

If every atom in one gram could be exploded with a discharge of 200,000,000 volts it would produce energy amounting to 10,000,000 kilowatt hours.

That much energy looms large beside the 1,400,000 kilowatt capacity of Boulder Dam, which cost $108,-800,000 and Grand Coulee Dam, which cost $126,000,000 and will have a power capacity of 1,890,000 kilowatts.

Uranium is relatively rare, but if its potential energy could be efficiently exploited it could give the world virtually unlimited power, Dr. Alvarez said.

Roosevelt Opens Economy Drive

WASHINGTON, March 7.—Amid growing demands in the United States Congress for Federal Economy, President Roosevelt took personal charge today of the Government's campaign to stimulate business.

First, he called in Senate and House leaders for their weekly legislative conference. This provided opportunity to discuss the economy blocks contention that only by reducing expenditures can the government create industrial confidence.

Second, he set tomorrow for the opening meeting of the committee seeking peace between the Congress of Industrial Organizations and American Federation of Labor.

The immediate legislation sought by the Economy advocates is a revision of business taxes. Secretary Morgenthau on Saturday promised Senator Harrison (Dem-Mississippi) and representative Doughton (Dem-North Carolina) that the treasury would make recommendations as soon as possible after March 15 tax returns are convassed.

Activities of Harrison's group, however, threatened to precipitate a controversy with administration proponents of continued spending that may speedily relegate to the back-ground the Senate argument over foreign policy and the defence program.

Senator Leader Barkley hoped for a quick vote on the only major issue in the $358,000,000 army expansion measure—a proposal to fix the limit of air corps strength at 6,000 planes instead of the 5,500 approved by the House.

Tobacco Farmer Kidnapped In "Mistake" From Car, Freed 5 Miles From Home

Gang Misses $6,000 Cheque For Year's Crop Brother-in-Law Carried At Time; Grabbed at 7 p.m. Victim Gets Home 3.30 a.m.

SIMCOE, Ont., March 8 (CP).—Marcell Vandell, 38-year-old tobacco grower, whose abduction by a party of men was reported to police last night, returned to his farm-home seven miles north of Simcoe early today and said his kidnapping apparently was a case of mistaken identity.

The Belgian share-cropper was found at his home by a newspaper reporter today. Vandell said the men who ordered him from an automobile in which he was riding and bore him off in another machine shortly after 7 o'clock last night, released him later and he reached home at 3.30 a.m. today after a "long walk."

"They said they didn't want me," Vandell told the reporter. Other than saying he did not recognize any of the men and that he was forced to walk about five miles before reaching the tobacco farm he operates with a brother-in-law, Vandell did not relate his experiences during the eight-hour period he was absent from his home.

Off For An Interview

Ontario provincial police officers who had spent the night searching the district for the motor-car in which Vandell was taken away left Simcoe this morning to interview Vandell.

Only the brother-in-law, George DePauw, was at home with Vandell. DePauw was with aVndell when he was taken away last night and held a cheque for $6,500 Vandell had received for the sale of his tobacco crop. At the time the abduction was reported it was thought the men sought to obtain the cheque.

The wives of both men came into Simcoe last night to enquire of police whether Vandell had been arrested and it was then DePauw reported the incident. DePauw said he was under the impression the men who took Vandell from the car were police officers.

2 British Banks Give China 25 Million Loan

LONDON, Mar. 8 — (AP).—Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer, announced in the House of Commons to-day that the Chinese Government has formed a £10,000,000 ($46,912,500) currency stabilization fund, to which two British banks contributed £5,000,000.

"The stability of the Chinese dollar," he said, "is a matter of great importance to this country in view of our financial and economic relations with China."

He intimated that the British Treasury would guarantee the £5,000,000 subscribed by the British banks, and seek Parliaments approval of the guarantee.

Real Test For Japan.

SHANGHAI, Mar. 8 — (AP). — Japan's power in North China appeared to-day to be headed for a test in a vital fiscal battle between the Chinese Government dollar and the Japanese-sponsored Federal Reserve banknotes.

The climax is expected on Friday when circulation of the Chinese dollar will be prohibited in North China.

Upon the outcome of this contest —removed from the far-flung military battle lines—foreign observers believe hangs the decision as to whether Japan will be enabled to clinch economic domination of North China.

They believe it will decide also whether Japan can manipulate currencies and trade to an extent not only to ensure Japanese domination of markets in the future, but to force North China to pay a portion of Japan's costly martial adventure.

The money struggle was given flavor by the fact that the Chinese dollar is partially supported by the United States and Great Britain as against the yen-backed notes of the North China Federal Reserve Bank.

Africa Building 28 Million Dock

CAPE TOWN, South Africa, March 8 (CP-Reuters).—Work has just begun on the third biggest graving dock in the world. It will be large enough to hold any of the new super-battleships of the British Navy.

It forms part of the huge £6,000,000 ($28,800,000) Table Bay harbor and reclamation scheme. The dock will be about 1,200 feet long and 130 feet wide. As most ships visiting Cape Town do not need berths of such size, the dock will be capable of being subdivided so that it can take several vessels at a time.

The harbor works were started by J. B. M. Hertzog last year. It will be the largest harbor in the southern hemisphere and the material dredged from the sea bottom will be used to reclaim 360 acres of land, much of which will be sold for building sites.

Pickets Gassed At Franco Rally

LOS ANGELES, Mar. 8 — (AP). —Police tear gas, hurled as at least half a dozen persons were hurt in street fighting, broke up a belligerent line of pickets last night at a Catholic-sponsored meeting which praised the Franco regime in Spain.

The riotous demonstration occurred in front of the Wilshire-Ebell Club Theatre, where Aileen O'Brien, formerly a nurse with the Spanish Nationalist Army, spoke under the the auspices of the Roman Catholic Theatre Guild with the authorization of Archbishop John Cantwell.

Two police officers suffered eye burns from the gas bombs, some of which were thrown back at police by the 200 or more pickets.

Jostled as they tried to leave the meeting, John Ganey, 26, was struck in the forehead with a stick and Miss Marily O'Brien, 17, not related to the nurse, was knocked down and suffered a sprained knee.

71 Police Sent Out.

Seventy-one policemen answered a riot call and found the pickets assertedly jammed along the walk on private property.

Brandished to the accompaniment of boos and hisses were banners reading "Franco's Child Welfare Program: Bombarding Orphans" and "Franco Will Destroy Religious Liberty."

The first clash, police said, started when Catholic students and others tried to open up entrances through the picket line. Ignoring a police demand to disperse, the demonstration continued. Officers replied with tear gas.

Women and children were among the pickets who finally retreated to a vacant lot opposite the theatre, where they sang the Communist "Internationale." Two more gas bombs broke up this gathering.

The picketing was sponsored by the Medical Bureau of North America to aid Spanish Democracy, Friends of the Abraham Lincoln Brigade, and the American League for Peace and Democracy.

Heated Foreign Affairs Debate Looms

OTTAWA, March 8 (CP).—Foreign affairs will provide material for a sharp debate at the present session of parliament, according to indications forthcoming in the House of Commons yesterday when Prime Minister Mackenzie King and Conservative Leader Manion clashed briefly but sharply on the subject.

The clash grew out of a routine motion by the government to give government business precedence over private members' resolutions on Mondays for the rest of the session. It proved informative to the House at large, however, for it brought from Mr. Mackenzie King a revelation that he had considered the danger of war so imminent six weeks ago he had shown certain official despatches to Dr. Manion.

"Since I showed him the despatches I did, I have received others, perhaps a little less serious, but nevertheless of a character to cause the government to view with great concern matters which were hap-

3 Quebec Men Die In Plane Crash

ST. FELICIEN, Que., March 8—(CP)—Death of three men in an airplane crash was disclosed today in a brief message received at this town in the Chibougamau mining area of North-Western Quebec.

First word of the accident failed to give any details other than to say searchers had recovered the bodies of Capt. Herve St. Martin of St. Felicien, his pilot Oscar Therrien, also of this town, and John Stadler of Westmount.

The plane, a Waco, crashed into a nearby lake from which the bodies were recovered.

The trio left Sunday on a 100-mile flight to Lac de la Croix, and when they failed to report, three other planes set out in search. It was reported the St. Martin plane was found half-submerged in the ice.

Britain To Expand Her Army For Service In Europe

Powerful Independent Reserves To Be Set Up Over Empire With No Half Measures

(By J. F. Sanderson, (Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

LONDON, March 8 (CP Cable).—Far-reaching reforms for Great Britain's army, including establishing it on a basis for immediate service on the continent in wartime, were announced by Leslie Hore-Belisha, Secretary for War, in the House of Commons today.

"We are on the verge of a financial year," said the Minister, "in which we start with 75,000 officers and men in the territorial anti-aircraft units, a year during which every existing medium and heavy battery which they man will have its war complement of guns and every searchlight company its searchlights."

Introducing the army's 1939 estimates, totalling £161,133,000 ($755,714,000), a peacetime record, the War Minister declared the army will be expanded and equipped for continental service and powerful independent reserves of military power established throughout the Empire, particularly in Malta, Palestine and India.

He announced 1,000 officers and 16,000 men in the regular army reserve will be recalled for training in September when Britain holds the biggest manoeuvres of mechanized troops in her history. The idea is to give the former soldiers fresh training.

The anti-aircraft section of the territorial army will be increased. A plan has been perfected to speed up mobilization on the outbreak of war.

Recalling Prime Minister Chamberlain's declaration of Anglo-French solidarity, Mr. Horse-Belisha declared: "It makes it incumbent on us to consider and prepare for the use of a field force in certain eventualities."

No Half Measure

"If we are involved in war, our contribution, and the way in which we can best make it, will not be half-hearted, nor upon any theory of limited liability. Conversations between ourselves and the French concern always plans for defence, not aggression."

The war minister said home defence would remain the paramount consideration of his department. In the past 12 months officers and men of anti-aircraft units had been doubled, gun emplacements increased and store and mobilization depots built.

The anti-aircraft corps will be increased in 1939 from five to seven divisions. The number of batteries will be increased between 50 and 100 per cent. A new factory has been started to build 3.7 anti-aircraft guns and delivery of 40-millimetre light anti-aircraft guns will start in the autumn.

Mr. Hore-Belisha declared a start already had been made in strengthening outlying empire military posts. Wherever possible this was beng done by the enlistment of native soldiers, which left the regular army available elsewhere. He cited an instance of the recruitment of 1,100 Maltese for garrison purposes. The same principle was being followed in Cyprus, Singapore, Hong Kong and Ceylon.

"In a sentence," Mr. Hore-Belisha added, "the establishment of Indian and local troops in defended posts outside India was 3,766 in 1937 and we are raising this figure for the coming year to 9,500."

Scatter Reserves

Britain will discard the old system of having a single strategic reserve in the United Kingdom for the whole empire, the war minister continued.

An additional reserve will be established in the middle east, with the two divisions now in Palestine forming part of it. It will be held for use anywhere in the middle east but exact arrangements have not been completed pending the results of the defence survey made in India.

As a result of a recent government decision Britain's territorial army is being trained and equipped "to meet the event of war in the European theatre," he said.

The supply of light tanks is adequate, the minister continued, but larger tanks which incorporate "lessons which have been learned from other countries"—presumably the Spanish civil war—"are only coming into production. The Bren gun has been issued on a war scale to all infantry machine-gun battalions of the regular army at home and empire garrisons. The same applies to the anti-tank rifle."

Mr. Horse-Belisha said the army is being shaped along these lines:

A regular army of four infantry divisions and two armored divisions.

A territorial army of nine infantry divisions, three motorized divisions and one armored division. In addition there are two territorial cavalry brigades and a number of unbrigaded units, making more than 19 divisions altogether.

These, of course, do not include anti-aircraft and coast defence units of the territorials, which are primarily for home defence.

$6,000,000 Left By Flavelle?

TORONTO, March 8 — (CP). — While details will not be announced until members of the family return from Florida Friday, the funeral of Sir Joseph Flavelle, who died in Florida yesterday, has been tentatively arranged for Saturday.

Interment will be in the Flavelle family vault at Mount Pleasant Cemetery.

The Ontario Treasury may be enriched to the extent of somewhere around $1,725,000 through sucecssion duties on the estate of the noted financier, it was estimated to-day. This estimate supposes the estate to be in the neighborhood of $6,000,000 and to be left in equal shares to the immediate members of the family.

Five Kiddies Die In Another Fire At Halifax

HALIFAX, March 8. —(CP)— Second serious fire here in less than a week left five children, the oldest aged seven, dead today. They were burned to death after oil dropped accidentally by a child on the red-hot register of a hot air furnace last night sent flames roaring through a small wooden house in the city's west end.

On a city still reeling from shock of last Thursday's Queen hotel fire that took an estimated death toll of 28, the tragedy in the two-storey house occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Downer and Robert Bobbitt fell heavily.

The dead: Donald Downer, seven; Bruce Downer, four; Buddy Downer, three; Ruby Bobbitt, six; Cyril Macdonald, seven, only son of Mrs. Ida Macdonald, housekeeper for the Downers.

Eleven-year-old Albert Bobbitt went down the cellar to fill a bottle of oil for the kitchen stove, his brother Donald related. "He was coming back through the hall when he slipped as he crossed the register over the furnace," said Donald, 13, who escaped with Albert.

Drops Oil Bottle.

"He dropped the bottle. The oil spilled on the grating of the furnace. It was nearly red hot. The oil went puff and the flames shot up the stairs. Then the house was all on fire."

The Bobbitt children's father was at a hockey game with a son, Gerald, 18, when the fire started. Neighbors said the Downers' parents were out. Mrs. Tillie Moran, Bobbitt's housekeeper was home at the time along with Mrs. Macdonald.

Fire trapped the Downer children, sleeping in a rear, top-floor room. Neighbors tried to save them after Mrs. Macdonald rushed next door to give the alarm.

Ruby Bobbitt had been in bed in a rear room downstairs. Firemen found her body in the front of the house. It was believed the fire awakened her and in her confusion she toddled into the flames. Her sister Marion, 12, escaped with her brothers Donald and Albert.

"We tried to get upstairs to get the kids but the fire was too bad," said Donald Bobbitt.

Unemployment Insurance Bill Features Speech At Ontario House Opening

New Way Of Equalizing Assessments Coming; Governor Forecasts Higher Relief Unless Industrial Improvement Shown

TORONTO, March 8 (CP).—A bill to enable the Ontario Government to enter into any necessary arrangement with the Federal Government to provide unemployment insurance "at the earliest possible moment" will be presented at the legislative session opening today.

Forecast of introduction of the legislation was contained in the Speech from the Throne read at the opening of the third session of the 20th Legislature by Lieutenant-Governor Albert Matthews. The need for such insurance has been demonstrated forcibly and the government welcomes the proposal of the Dominion to enact legislation, the Speech said. Ontario would enact enabling legislation in order that there should be no delay.

The Speech, longer than usual, outlined many legislative proposals. It opened with a reference to the gratification felt that "this assembly will have the high privilege of expressing to His Majesty in person the loyal and devotion we all share."

"The approaching visit of Their Majesties, King George VI. and Queen Elizabeth, to this assembly will make the present session the most historic since the Ontario Legislature was constituted in 1867," it said.

It was announced a new method of equalizing municipal assessments would be embodied in legislation. Another measure affecting municipalities will be one requiring all elected municipal officials to take the oath of allegiance.

Cash Relief To Mine Areas.

Legislation, "designed to give a certain measure of financial relief to the mining municipalities of Northern Ontario will be submitted," the speech said. (These municipalities have persistently sought a larger share of taxes levied on producing mines and properties operated by the mining companies).

It will be proposed to the Legislature that the Mining Act be amended to help prospectors, to promote health and safety of mine employees, to aid in preventing the high-grading of gold and other precious metals.

The Government will ask the Legislature to pass a resolution requesting the Dominion Parliament to repeal the Canada Temperance Act insofar as it applies to Ontario.

The request to the Federal government is intended to end chaotic conditions in liquor law enforcement in certain areas, particularly Manitoulin Island, that have resulted from court decisions holding the Canada Temperance Act is more restrictive legislation than the Ontario Liquor Control Act.

Niece's Wedding Draws Queen

LONDON, March 8—(CP)—The King and Queen attended today the wedding of the Queen's 27-year-old niece, Cecilia Bowes-Lyon, and Kenneth Harington, 28. The couple's engagement had been broken two years ago because Harington considered himself too poor to marry.

The re-engagement was announced Feb. 4, after Harington left the Diplomatic Service and took a job with a metal Corporation. A year ago the bride opened a "social bureau" which advised on social events, wedding arrangements, organizing dances and so on. She plans to continue working after the wedding trip. The ceremony took place in Holy Trinity Church at Brompton.

Judge Reserves Judgment In Herman Case

Judge J. A. McGibbon of Lindsay reserved judgment in the case of Robert Nathan Herman, former manager of Pattenick's Department Store, charged with theft of money and merchandise from his employer. The case will be disposed of on Wednesday March 22, at 11 o'clock in the Court House.

The trial which started at ten-thirty on Tuesday was not concluded until after seven o'clock last evening, proceeding without interruption from two in the afternoon until after the supper hour. E. F. Singer, K. C. in arguing the case spent only a short time summing up and V. J. McElderry, K. C. Crown Attorney was also brief in his remarks. Herman, the accused was the only witness called by the defence.

"High Financing"

Highlight of the trial which attracted much interest was the explanation by Herman of how he juggled money belonging to his employer for the benefit of his friend Ralph Solerow, a customer at the store. Herman admitted "kiting cheques" that is keeping a cheque or a series of them on the move until his friend was able to provide the sum of money required to stop the manipulating. Solerow would make a purchase of merchandise at the Pattenick store, but would be short of funds and would make payment with a cheque which would be kept in the store untill payment was made. To facilitate the "high finance" Herman kept a personal account at the Bank of Toronto while the store account was at the Dominion Bank.

From November 15, to December 5 of last year employees of the store on Herman's instructions and Herman himself made deposits in his personal savings account totalling $329.00 but according to the evidence of Herman the total never exceeded $35 at any one time and Pattenick never lost one cent because of the manipulating.

Harold Stephens, assistant manager of the store was closely examined by H. S. Balfour of Peterborough who assisted Mr. Singer in the defence of Herman. Early in his testimony Stephens told of conversation between he and Herman at a lunch counter during which Herman said, "It will look bad for me if they examine the books".

He didn't say the store books.

No.

What made you think he meant the store books.

I just took it for granted.

How much does Herman owe you at present.

I loaned him $23 four weeks before the fire.

How was it paid.

I gave him a cheque made payable to W. Pattenick, which he deposited to the account of the store.

What did this indicate to you.

I believed he needed the money

Text Of Speech From Throne At Opening Of Legislature

TORONTO, March 8.—(CP)—Text of the Speech from the Throne read by Hon. Albert Matthews, lieutenant-governor of Ontario, at the opening of the third session of the 20th Legislature here today follows:

Mr. Speaker and Gentlemen of the Legislative Assembly:

The approaching visit of Their Majesties, King George VI and Queen Elizabeth, to this Assembly will make the present session the most historic since the Ontario Legislature was constituted in 1867, and I am particularly happy, therefore, on this occasion in welcoming you to your legislative duties.

As this will be the first time a British King and Queen have been in North America, and the visit will be the first paid by a reigning sovereign to any of the self-governing dominions, it is deeply gratifying that this Assembly will have the high privilege of expressing to His Majesty in person the loyalty and devotion we all share.

Since the last session, the Minister of Labor, Mr. MacBride and the member for Parkdale, Mr. McBrien, have passed away, and I join with you in paying tribute to their memory. The vacancy in the cabinet has been filled by the former speaker of this House, Mr. Hipel, and to him I extend my congratulations.

I should also like to offer my congratulations to Major Clark, K.C., whom you have just elected as your new speaker. Major Clark has had a distinguished war record, and his practice of law both here and before the Privy Council in England will fit him admirably for the occupancy of the speaker's chair.

I should also like to take this opportunity of extending my good wishes to Colonel Drew, who, as the new leader of His Majesty's loyal opposition, has an important role to fill in the deliberations of this assembly. I am also glad to welcome two other members, Mr. Hagey, of Brantford, who will now become the youngest members of the House, and Mr. Stewart, O.B.E., of Parkdale, who has rendered signal public service in the administration of this capital city of Toronto.

Although indication early in 1938 pointed to an improvement in business throughout the province, this condition unfortunately did not continue. During the year there was expended in Ontario for unemployment relief approximately $22,000,000; and unless there is a marked industrial improvement this sum is likely to be exceeded in 1939. The provincial government assumed a greater proportion of this burden, amounting to 45 per cent of the gross costs, and, in all but a few cases, the municipalities met their share of direct aid through tax levies and without recourse to the issuance of debentures which merely leaves until the future the payment of today's needs.

New Relief Farm Plan

Plans have recently been formulated for a very limited experimental farm rehabilitation program designed to assist families now receiving aid. Care is being taken to ensure that only those families best adapted to such a plan will be included.

Despite those increased burdens, the credit of the province continues to stand at the high level it has enjoyed during recent years, and its bonds are now selling at the highest point in its history. It is perhaps not wtihout significance that during the crisis last September, Ontario bonds held their position better than the senior securities of any other public authority.

The finances of the municipalities of the province have also continued to improve. Of the $104,000,000 in default in Ontario at the time the government took office, $58,000,000 has now been refunded, and there are plans awaiting approval for an additional $19,000,000.

Debt Cut 68 Millions.

The gross municipal debt at the end of 1933 amounted to $494,400,000 and at the end of 1937 to $425,700,000, a reduction of over $68,000,000. In addition, the amount levied in 1933 for municipal purposes throughout Ontario was $120,400,000, which was reduced at the end of 1937 to $116,500,000.

This radical improvement during a period of economic distress is due in large measure to the policies of the government in relieving the municipalities of all payments toward provincial highways, mothers' allowances, old age pensions, and indigent patients in sanatoria, together with a provincial subsidy of one mill and increased aid to township

Energy, Ashes, Cusses In Aiding Bogged Cars Get Whitby $55 Bill From Ex-Mayor

WHITBY, Ont., March 8—(CP). —Edward Bowman, a former mayor, has submitted to Whitby town council an account for services rendered and energy expended in assisting motorists to remove their automobiles from deep ruts and snowdrifts on town streets. He seek $55.

In a letter read to council last night, Bowman said he had helped to push a number of trucks and cars out of deep ruts while "listening helplessly to gruesome bad language."

He added: "I also got up after midnight, putting my trousers on over my pajamas and my overshoes over my slippers, and helped push out a neighbor's car by the generous use of ashes. Only today our town engineer came to investigate and he also got stuck, requiring more push and more ashes."

The letter closed with Bowman's account, itemized:

Loss of sleep (sleep after midnight very valuable) $10; three bushels of ashes, $3; listening to very bad language (terrible), $12; interrupted meals (bad for digestion), $5; energy exerted, $25. Total, $55.

Revolting Reds Surrender To Gen. Miaja

HENDAYE, France, March 8—(AP). — Spanish Communists, who had revolted against the national defence government headed by General Jose Miaja, surrendered today in response to an ultimatum threatening concentrated aerial bombardment, the official Madrid radio station announced.

The surrender was announced 45 minutes before the noon (7 a.m. EST) deadline after which, the government had declared, the rebels would have been bombed into submission.

Thus Miaja, "Savior of Madrid" who now proposes to surrender if a "worthy peace" can be worked out with General Franco, was reported to have put down the rebel lion against his peace policy.

Maija's troops had fought sporadically for 24 hours with the communists.

The General was said to have opened negotiations with the Burgos government for a three-week armistice which would end in complete capitulation. Segismundo Casado, war minister who swept into power Sunday with overthrow of the Juan Negrin government, was reported to have entered nationalist lines under a flag of truce to arrange the surrender.

Observers cited a speech by Maija yesterday as pointing to his plans.

"We do not wish to shed any more useless blood," Miaja said. "My only wish, and I speak as a man who has fought with you, is for peace to return to Spain."

Franco Just Waits

General Franco, according to advices from his capital, Burgos, is insisting on unconditional surrender. His troops on the outskirts of Madrid were reported heavily reinforced and waiting to enter the city. From their positions opposite the university city suburb, they calmly listened to the sound of fighting going on within the capital.

The civil war already was at an end on the seas. The last units of the republican fleet, three cruisers and eight destroyers, sailed into the French naval base at Bizerte, Tunisia, yesterday and were interned.

Spanish officers reported that two other destroyers were sunk in Cartagena harbor by nationalist bombing planes as the fleet put out to sea Saturday after a revolt against the Negrin government.

Lakefield House Threatened By Fire

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, March 8.—Fire at noon today threatened Ben Denis, beautiful home of Mrs. E. R. Tate in Douro Township. Adjoining the house is a garage, and next to this is a cottage occupied by Donald MacLean, caretaker. It was in the garage that the fire started, and only for the timely work of the Lakefield fire brigade the two dwellings would have been destroyed.

During the morning Mr. MacLean had been busy smoking meat in the garage, and while he was eating his dinner the fire broke out. The firemen were hampered by not being able to get a passageway to the river, so hence had to use chemicals and a hand pump and carried water from the well. The house was not insured.

Hon. Robt. Weir Dies In Mishap

WELDON, Sask., March 8—(CP). —Hon. Robert Weir, who climbed from a rural school teacher's desk in Ontario to a Dominion Cabinet Minister's post, died yesterday beneath a load of grain which upset on a snow-laden road near his beautiful Saskatchewan farm. The former Minister of Agriculture was 56 years old.

Mr. Weir was driving the sleigh from Weldon, thirty miles southeast of Prince Albert, to his farm home, accompanied by his wife's stepfather, J. E. Bedford. He was sitting with his legs over the side of the load of barley toward which the sleigh toppled as it was caught in a snowdrift and slid from the road.

His elderly companion was unable to release him from beneath the barley. Mr. Bedford summoned help to move the former Minister to his home, a mile distant, and a telephone call to Prince Albert brought Dr. E. A. Freed to the farm by aeroplane.

Mr. Weir failed to regain consciousness and was dead before the physician arrived. Dr. Freed said death was due to internal injuries.

Mr. Bedford, sitting on the opposite side of the sleigh, escaped injury.

roads. A reduction in municipal interest rates last year of more than two per cent in many municipalities, as compared with the year 1933-34, is a direct result of this improvement and reflects the confidence of the investing public in the effective control of municipal borrowing exercised by the Ontario Municipal Board.

Establishment of schools for the instruction of municipal officials each year at London, Toronto and Kingston has helped to raise the standards of municipal administration, and next year it is proposed to publish a manual of standard accounting for townships and villages.

New Assessment Plan

A new method for equalizing assessments will be presented to you for approval and also an amendment to the Municipal Act requiring all elected officials of municipal councils to take the oath of allegiance.

The necessity for some form of unemployment insurance has been forcibly demonstrated during recent years, and my ministers welcome the proposal of the Dominion government to enact legislation dealing with this question. In order that there shall be no delay so far as Ontario is concerned, a bill will be presented to you empowering the government to enter into any necessary arrangements to place the scheme in effective operation at the earliest possible momnt.

With live stock prices continuing good and excellent crops, Ontario's farm income for the year was well maintained, demonstrating the stability of our mixed farming. The demand from Great Britain and the United States for good dairy cows increased and should provide a definite outlet for some years to come, while the demand for Ontario cheese could only be partially filled.

I am glad to note that farmers generally throughout the province are taking a keener interest in organized marketing, which is so necessary under modern conditions. The campaign against the weed menace continued, and the government has developed and patented two new commercial weed killers for use this spring.

Field Crop Production.

In order to create a greater interest in the production of field crops, the Ontario Field Crop Improvement Association has been formed, and around it will be created county field crop and seed growers' associations, several of which are already in existence. The demand for agricultural information is steadily growing, and there has been a considerable increase in the attendance at short courses and lectures.

During the past year, definite progress has been made in the revision of the courses of study in the secondary schools, to provide a type of training which will enable our young people to adjust themselves more readily to the life of their communities. The government derives much satisfaction from the knowledge that it has been able to contribute a million dollars more to the support of schools throughout the province than was possible a year ago.

The conciliation service rendered by the Department of Labor has resulted in a decided reduction of losses due to strikes, while the youth training program, in which various departments cooperate, has trained 4,500 boys and girls for useful occupations, and placed 2,600 of them in employment.

Pensions for the blind have now been in operation for a year, and there are at present over 1,100 recipients. The old age pension list has grown to over 60,000; while 12,000 mothers and 26,000 children benefit under the Mothers' Allowances Act.

Fishing Assisted.

The Department of Game and Fisheries has experienced another very active and entirely satisfactory year. Through the Department of Public Works, over $150,000 has been expended in extending the facilities for hatching and rearing game fish. An extensive construction program of ponds and hatcheries is nearing completion at Sandfield on Manitoulin Island, at Skeleton Lake in Muskoka, at Deer Lake in Peterborough County, and at Charlton in Temiskaming district, and the plants at Chatsworth, Dorien, and other points have been greatly increased.

Ontario now has much greater facilities of this kind than the remainder of Canada combined, and is rapidly becoming equipped to meet the demands not only of our own citizens, but of an ever increasing tourist trade attracted here by our unequalled angling and shooting.

The Sanatoria for Consumptives Act passed last session made possible the discharge of a large number of patients for whom aftercare and pneumothorax treatment was arranged, enabling several hundred more persons to be admitted for early treatment.

A commission was also appointed to investigate cancer remedies, with the object of making available those found to be of value, and at the same time protecting sufferers from exploitation.

At the present time, the new mental hospital at St. Thomas is being staffed, and patients from institutions which are overcrowded will shortly be transferred there.

Consideration is also being given to a revision of the procedure governing the admission of patients to public and private mental hospitals and their subsequent treatment and detention.

17 P.C. Fewer Road Deaths.

It is gratifying to note that although the Department of Highways issued eight per cent. more permits and licences last year, deaths due to motor vehicle accidents wer e17 per cent. fwr, and propry damag 30 pr cn. lowr. During the last 10 years, registrations have doubled and to meet this heavy increase in traffic, a considerable mileage of divided highways has been graded and is approaching completion in Southern Ontario. In the northern part of the province, more than 400 miles have been graded to the highest standard and over 100 miles of pavement have been laid.

The Liquor Control Board revised its regulations during the year to provide more effective administration of the Act, and close and systematic inspection of all licensed premises was continued. The Board waived exemption from business assessment and taxes throughout the province, thus aiding municipal finances, and in addition 300 municipalities benefitted by the distribution of nearly $200,000, representing a percentage of their local authority fees.

There will be placed before you a resolution requesting the Dominion Parliament to repeal the Canada Temperance Act as it applies to the Province of Ontario.

New Police System

During recent months the policing of the province has been given considerable study. The provincial force has reached a high state of efficiency and in all but two counties has now taken over the duties of high county constable, but there is a great lack of coordination and of uniformity in municipal policing. Legislation almed at remedying this condition to some extent will be placed before you for consideration.

The reference made to the Supreme Court of Canada last year with respect to social legislation, designed to safeguard the interests of women and children, resulted in the right of the province to enact such legislation and to appoint the officials necessary for its enforcement being upheld.

A survey of the entire field of the administration of justice, with a view to simplifying and facilitating procedure, and effecting economies, has been instituted and is expected to be completed in the course of the next few months.

Special attention has been given to the necessity of securing adequate and uniform sentences in serious offences. The Attorney-General's department has reveiwed many cases, and has entered appeals where the sentences seemed inadequate, with salutary results.

The mining industry of the province continued to show satisfactory progress.

New Gold Record

The production of gold made a new record, its value amounting to over 101 millions of dollars, which represents an increase of 11 per cent over the previous year. Several new mines came into production during the year, and there are now 56 gold mills operating continuously. Due to this expansion in operations, there has been a marked increase of men employed in the gold mines.

You will be asked to consider certain amendments to the mining act with the object to helping prospectors, promoting the health and safety of employees at the mines, and providing for new regulations to assist in the prevention of high-grading of gold and other precious metals.

Legislation designed to give a certain measure of financial relief to the mining municipalities of northern Ontario will also be submitted to you.

Continued development of the mining industry in Ontario was responsible for an increase of 26 per cent in the primary load of the Northern Ontario properties, which are held and operated by the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario on behalf of the province.

Reduction of the farm service charge from $2.00 to $1.00 per month, continued to have its effect, and rural primary lines approved for construction during the year reached 2,660 miles, to serve 14,000 additional customers, an all-time record. At present, there are approximately 15,800 miles of rural line serving about 100,000 customers distributed among nearly 500 municipalities.

Winter Peak Up.

The winter primary peak load as supplied to the co-operating municipalities of the Niagara system this year was 6.2 per cent. higher than that the previous winter, but due to a lower demand for power by the large electro-chemical and electro-metallurgical industries in the Niagara Falls district, the winter peak of the total Niagara system primary load was only three per cent. greater. Primary peak loads on the other co-operative system increased from five to eight per cent.

By the completion of a storage reservoir on Frederick House and Night Hawk Lakes at the headwaters of the Abitibi River, the dependable capacity of the Abitibi Canyon generating station in Northern Ontario was increased by 40,000 horsepower.

Traffic on the T. and N.O. Railway has declined somewhat, particularly in the movement of pulp and paper from the Iroquois Falls mill, which is running considerably below capacity, due to the lower demand for newsprint from the United States and net earnings for the current year will, therefore, be lower than last year although there will be a considerable surplus over operating expenses.

In addition to the legislation already mentioned, amendments to the Corporations Tax Act, Highway Traffic Act, Training Schools Act, Industrial Schools Act, the Coroner's Act, the Law Society Act, the Mortgages Act, the Game and Fisheries Act, the Tile Drainage Act, and various other statutes will also be introduced.

The public accounts for the year ended March 31, 1938, have been published and estimates for the coming fiscal year will shortly be presented to you.

In conclusion, I trust that Divine Providence will guide your deliberations to the promotion of the public welfare.

Cleanse BIG BOWEL when Constipated!

DON'T UPSET ALL 25 FEET OF INTESTINES

Most constipation occurs in the lower colon or big bowel (marked X), right when body waste has travelled almost to the point where bowels should m-o-v-e.

Yet many people unknowingly take laxatives which affect other parts of the bowels first, often upsetting the whole tract. Doses like calomel go most of their work on the other end of the bowels, more than 20 feet away! Salts flush from end to end! May leave you weak and worn-out. Oils act chiefly on the small intestine.

To relieve constipation fast, a laxative should work where the waste has jammed!

That's the action you get from Chocolate Flavor Cascarets. They work on the big bowel where body waste commonly piles-up. Move it those last few inches, bringing blessed relief overnight. Chocolate Cascarets can do this because they contain cascara, said to give nearest to natural action of any cathartic, which acts to cleanse the big bowel in 10 to 12 hours!

If you've never enjoyed this sensible kind of relief, get Chocolate Cascarets now. Each foil-wrapped tablet is a gentle effective dose, and pleasant to take because the taste is that of fine milk chocolate. All druggists, or write Dept. P-9, "Cascarets," Windsor, Ont., for free sample.

in effect on Manitoulin Island. The result has been that no liquor law is actually being enforced, the Federal government contending it is Ontario's responsibility to enforce the C.T.A. and Ontario answering that it wouldn't.

The speech said early 1938 indications for improved business conditions were not continued and there was $22,000,000 spent in unemployment relief and "unless there is a marked industrial improvement, this sum is likely to be exceeded in 1939."

"Despite these increased burdens, the credit of the province continues to stand at the high level it has enjoyed during recent years and its bonds are now selling at the highest point in history. It is perhaps not without significance that during the crisis of last September, Ontario bonds held their position better than the senior securities of any other public authority."

Legislation aimed to remedy "a great lack of co-ordination and of uniformity in municipal policing" was forecast. Considerable able study has been given the subject. The provincial police force was in a high state of efficiency, and in all but two counties had taken over the duties of high county constable.

OBITUARY

MICHAEL BARNETT

The death of Michael Barnett, 186 Rubidge street, occurred in St. Joseph's hospital on Tuesday. In his 86th year, Mr. Barnett had been in declining health for some time.

Retired from active life for many years past, Mr. Barnett was at one time an employee of the Peterborough Lumber Company, and once worked in the lumbering business in Campbellford. He was born in Keene son of the late John Barnett and Margaret Gilroy and lived in Peterborough for a great many years. Then he moved to Havelock, later returning to this city where he made his home with a daughter, Mrs. Fred Whaley.

He was a member of St. Peter's Cathedral.

Surviving are ten children, John, James, and Mae, all of Buffalo, Mrs. Fred Whaley and Mrs. Thomas Lapointe, both of Peterborough, Leo of Windsor, Josephine and Don of Toronto, Tom and Anthony of Ottawa; also one brother, John Barnett, in Rochester, N.Y.

The funeral will be held on Friday morning at 8.45 o'clock from the Duffus Funeral Parlours to St. Peter's Cathedral for Requiem Mass at 9 a.m. Interment will be at St. Peter's Cemetery.

MRS. ROBERT S. WRIGHT

Interment was made yesterday afternoon at the Necropolis Cemetery in Cannington of the remains of Mrs. Robert S. Wright, 459 Albert street, Peterborough, whose death occurred here on Saturday afternoon at the age of 69.

The funeral service was conducted on Monday evening at Park Street Baptist Church, with Rev. C. C. Boyter officiating. The church was filled almost to its doors with fellow parishioners and friends who came to pay last homage to a woman whose life was spent in the service of her church and her family. Mrs. Wright had been a teacher in the Sunday school for a quarter of a century, president of the Cradle Roll for a number of years, and often president of the Women's Missionary Society, as well as being prominently associated with many other phases of church life.

There was a profusion of floral tokens, and virtually the entire congregation of the church was present at the service. Pall-bearers were all elders of the church. Rev. C. C. Boyter spoke feelingly of Mrs. Wright's service to her God, related her many activities, and said that in point of membership she was the third oldest member of the congregation. He referred to her as a most able servant of God, and a person of great charm whose life had been spent in faithfulness. Members of the Vimy Lodge, L.O.B.A. attended the service in a body and acted as a guard of honour for their fellow-members as her body was leaving the church.

The following morning a private service for her family was conducted at the Nisbett Funeral Home, 347 Charlotte street, by Rev. Mr. Boyter, and the remains were taken by motor to Cannington for interment ther.

Mrs. Wright was born in Mariposa township, and her maiden name was Elizabeth Osborne. She was a daughter of the late John Osborne and Catherine McDonald. Surviving are her husband, Robert S. Wright, and one brother, John Osborne of Manitoba.

WINNIPEG GRAIN

WINNIPEG, Mar. 8 — (C.P.). — Sustained outside selling due to weakness at Liverpool and reports that the United Kingdom is disposing of emergency wheat stocks brought substantial losses to Winnipeg wheat futures prices to-day. At the finish values were 1¼ to 1¼ cent lower, with May at 60⅞, July 61⅝, and October 62¼ cents.

A few loads of Canadian export wheat were reported worked from both seaboards on the price recession. The session was one of the most active in recent weeks.

Selling on the part of a large operator and a slow cash demand drove Liverpool prices ½ to ¾d lower, while Chicago quotations registered losses of nearly a cent.

Market Review

TORONTO, March 8 — (CP). — The current market advance was marked by a broadening out of the trade and to-day's turnover reached about 675,000 shares on the Toronto Exchange. Heavy action in the medium-price base metals and golds accounted for the time end of the trade. All indices closed higher, with the mining issues showing the widest improvement. Western oils lagged with only a minor net gain.

Stocks worked up considerable steam around the noon period, especially in the medium-price gold and base metal shares. Kerr-Addison and Sherritt were features, trading in heavy volume at higher prices.

Along with Sherritt, Nickel, Noranda, Pend Oreille and Sudbury Basin were highlight of the base metal group.

Senior oils were about the most active of the industrials. B.A. Oil at 23 was firm. The Western oil market continued dull. Home and Calgary-Edmonton were firm and Okalta slightly higher.

Wall Street Close ...

NEW YORK, March 8—(AP). — A wide assortment of stocks rose fractions to about three points today as the market resumed its climb in more vigorous fashion than previously.

With some issues at peak levels for the past year or longer, optimism spread in trading ranks. Steels recovered early losses and joined the main advance as the demand broadened. Prices near the final hour were about the best of the day.

Dealings were livelier on the upside after the hesitant market yesterday. Transactions were about 300,000 shares.

Five Irishmen Operating Lincoln Stores

A quintet of young Irishmen have chosen Peterborough as a promising city in which to enlarge their already prosperous business enterprise, the Lincoln Shoe Stores, and a branch will open here in completely renovated quarters on the west side of George Street between Simcoe and Charlotte Streets, next door to the Bank of Nova Scotia. The grand opening will be Thursday, March 9.

The first Lincoln shoe store was started in 1933 by A. H. Dancey, J. B. Stanford, R. Shannon, J. G. Dancey, and W. T. Connor, Irishmen all, and the firm continues to this day under the same management, with not a single change. That first store was opened at 544 Danforth Avenue, Toronto, and since that time other stores have been opened in Oshawa and Belleville. Peterborough will be the fourth store to come under the firm's direction, and the members of the Irish quintet feel that this city will be one of their most valuable branches.

The Peterborough store will be under personal direction of A. H. Dancey, and he will reside in this city permanently. He will have as his assistant Joe Leith, formerly of the Agnew-Surpass Company in Peterborough. Both are anticipating large crowds over the week-end, and will welcome all visitors.

The new quarters have been completely redecorated, a new and wider front has been installed, and in all this work Peterborough labor has been used for the most part. The interior has been painted in attractive tones, and all new fixtures have been installed. The complete color pattern is pleasing to the eye and is designed to make shoe shopping a pleasure.

The outstanding success of the Lincoln Shoe Stores can be attributed, its directors say, to the policy of the firm, which embraces individual attention to each and every customer, exact fitting of shoes at all times, and complete guarantee of all merchandise. "Goods satisfactory or money refunded" is the motto of the firm.

Collegiate Notes

Well, the main topic of conversation around old P.C.V.S. this week, is the wholesale epidemic of influenza or flu (or what you will) that has struck at the portals of the venerable hall of learning. For the past few days numerous students have been confined to their homes, and in quite a few forms; almost half the pupils are away. To say nothing of 10 or so teachers. Naturally, this tends to cut down on school activity but your 'umble correspondent, handkerchief in hand, will carry on. The show must go on.

Ad. the flu situation—Would it be out of line to suggest that the school discontinue activity for a week or so?

The Massacre Of '39

And, so it came to pass that on the evening of March 3, in the hall of learning that stands on the Plains of the Scugog (Lindsay to youse) the brave basket warriors of L.C.I. had gathered to defend their honor in the traditional style of all L.C.I. men. And a small but brave battalion of fighting men from Peter's borough were drawn up, ready to commence fighting. And the signal was given to commence (Dr. Worton's whistle) and lo, when the dust had cleared, the brave and true warriors of L.C.I. lay where they had fallen and the Garnet and Grey trumpeters sounded the victory. And, so this shall be known as the massacre of the Plains of Scugog. Or P.C.I. 83, Lindsay 23. Or if you will Mr Bamforth's senior lads laced Lindsay by that terrific score, thereby staying in the Lakeshore League running.

Cutting, Harle, Foster, Gillespie and Moorhead led the scoring. And on the same evening Miss Brisbin's senior girls trounced L.C.I. 28-21 to make the evening complete at two wins and no losses. Mr. Craig's senior boys were not scheduled to play, but take on Cobourg in part of a triple headed in our gym this week.

Now, it is of vital importance for our three teams to emerge victorious, from these melees. If you own seniors beat C.C.I. they go into group playoffs with Bowmanville. If they lose to Cobourg, Bowmanville are champions of our group and P.C.I. can hang up their uniforms. Our junior boys and senior girls must also win. So come Friday 10, in the evening; let's see a record attendance out there to cheer P.C.I. on their respective routes to C.O.S.S.A. crowns. Let's fill that gallery. And above all, let's win!

Opera Topics

Well, the time draws nigh. Cast of our coming opera, "Dear Brutus" is working hard these nights, preparing for opening night. Play (as you have guessed) goes right in the old Assembly Hall. Students Council has announced that to all those selling a decent number of tickets to the play, will go a free ticket. For those who sell five tickets a free rush ticket will be awarded. And to all those selling fifteen tickets a free reserved seat ticket. Seat plan is scheduled to open on March 18 and there will be a new idea in connection with this year's tickets and seat plan. Tickets may be exchanged for either Thursday or Friday instead of just being good for the one night. Formerly the tickets for the two different nights have been of two colors but this year will be the same color. Somewhere in the neighborhood of 1,400 tickets are out now but of course it is unknown as yet just how they are going. However all advance dope in regard to the play seems to indicate an unprecedented success and we wouldn't be at all surprised to see it set a record for quick sell-outs.

Camera Club Clippings

Along with everything else, 'round 'bout the old school the Camera Club has been held up no end by the epidemic of flu. But tonight (Wednesday) the Camera Club holds its weekly meeting.

Camera Club president, Warren Gamble, is still confined to his home, recovering from the bad accident he suffered while bob-sledding a couple of weeks back. But, we expect him back soon. Certainly hope so. The Camera Club is still plenty busy looking after school stationery, Echoes' pictures, etc., etc.

Echoes" Mutterings

One thing that isn't being slowed up as much as others is the preparing of the Echoes for publication. Last week we ran over the long list of prize winners in the many competitions—the art competition, literary contest, photography contest, etc. Nothing much else to tell about our year book except that the Echoes' staff is working overtime preparing pictures, literary works, etc. in order to have the Echoes "on the streets" as early as possible. An appeal has gone forth from Echoes' headquarters for more entries in the humor section—usually one of the features of our perennially good school year book. So come on all ye humorists and cracksters and get down to work on some of your best cracks and send 'em along to the Echoes' office.

Assembly Notes

Not much morning entertainment with the exception of last Friday morn. When the assembly audience (somewhat cut down by the now famous flu epidemic) but still appreciative were treated to a vocal number. Miss Olga Westbye of VA did the vocal, singing "They're Changing Guard at Buckingham Palace," accompanied by P.C.I's faithful pianist, Merrill Smith. Nothing much else—there being no motion pictures last week and none slated for the immediate future. Why not have another appearance of the Glee Club this week?

School Song

Just a note to remind all youse lads and lasses that P.C.I. is striving to get itself a new "war cry." Hope all you boys and girls have got right down to business and that one of you comes up with a song that will really wow everyone and scare the daylights out of Lindsay, Bowmanville, Cobourg, Port Hope and the rest of the neighboring schools. The old Garnet and Grey is a powerful name in this district, and we always come up with potent teams in rugby, basketball, etc., but a really fighting fight song sure might come in handy some time.

Subscription Winners' Party

winners of the Echoes' subscription contest are having a spot of trouble trying to get in their party. The original idea was to have a skiing party a week ago Friday night, but then it was mild and raining, so it was postponed 'till last Friday when once again it was mild. So in turn once again it was postponed. So right now nobody seems to know just when it'll take place. And maybe it will not be a skiing party. Who knows?

Odds 'n Ends

Orchestra is practising hard in preparation for the coming Opera.. FLASH—Just received word that Bowmanville seniors vanquished Cobourg last week thereby making it necesary for P.C.I. to do same this week...Or hang up those Garnet and Grey uniforms...Won't be so awfully long 'till Easter holidays roll around.. Yipee!...Who'd a thought Lindsay would rally and beat our seniors in the final minute last week?....Who indeed?....Anyway Lindsay didn't think of it...You feel awfully self conscious walking through the corridors all alone... Whar's that new song we been fighting for in Assembly.. In this week's triple-header with Cobourg, we'd call the seniors to win handily, the juniors to win by a slim margin and the senior girls is a toss up, but we're afraid we'll have to take C.C.I.... Don't anyone worry though, we never got one right yet...School rings are still on sale...Ditto school pins... Sorry this is so short, but own news just seems to have 'flu' out the window.—J. E. C.

SWEET CAPORAL CIGARETTES

"The purest form in which tobacco can be smoked."

North Heads List For Roads Says McQuesten

TORONTO, March 8 — (CP). — Northern Ontario today is "almost the only avenue of development" for Canadians and "certainly a most attractive and hopeful outlet," Hon. T. B. McQuesten, Provincial Highway Minister, told the 32nd Annual Conference of the Ontario Motor League Monday.

"The one bright spot in this Dominion is the growing development of Northern Ontario," he said. "The great problem is to connect and furnish reasonable transportation facilities to the widely-separated areas of population without sustaining population between them."

The situation demands more paving in the north and it should be possible to maintain a yearly program of paving until "the work is well in hand," he said.

Since his department took over control of Northern Highways little more than two years ago, there has been no talk of secession in Northern Ontario. He said 600 miles of grading and 175 miles of paving were completed in the north in that time.

"I say of this work that no more could have been done within the time. There was no more equipment in the province. Transportation is the great need of the country and this department is committed to supply it as soon as possible."

The North's Turn.

More than $600,000,000 was spent on Southern Ontario highways and now it was Northern Ontario's turn.

Mr. McQuesten suggested that the King and Queen could be paid no more suitable tribute during their Canadian visit this spring than a reduction in highway accidents.

He said the visit would result in "tremendous" traffic congestion and that an increased traffic toll "would leave His Majesty with sorrowful rather than happy memories of his visit."

The delegates ruled that Ontario motorists could not afford an increase in the gasoline tax but agreed that the Ontario Government needed additional revenue for the highways program. The majority of the delegates favored a suggestion that road construction plans be discontinued if motorists were to pay increased gas taxes.

Northern Ontario representatives, however, disagreed. Residents did not want construction of northern roads to cease, one delegate said.

A proposal as to possibility of eyesight tests for all drivers, submitted by Mrs. Margaret Hay, Sudbury, will be discussed by league executives. Inauguration of an annual national safety week is being considered, it was announced.

W. Gilbert Robertson, general manager of the league, said Ontario motorists contribute 33 per cent. of provincial revenue through gas tax and motor licenses.

Fall Down Steps While Attending Bonspiel Proves Fatal To Cannington Curler

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LINDSAY, March 8—Rock Ezra Smith, of Cannington, who suffered injuries as a result of falling down the steps at the New Royal Hotel at Lindsay a few days ago, passed away at his home in the village. The deceased was attending a curling bonspiel at Lindsay the day of the accident. He was taken to the Ross Hospital, and it was believed for a time he would recover. Mr. Smith was an ardent bowler, curler and conducted a butcher business in Cannington for many years.

New Rolling Mill

A 50,000 pound rolling mill arrived in town on Monday from Three Rivers, Quebec, for installation in the Lindsay Arsenal. A crew of twelve men accompanied the mill. It is understood that it will be about two months before the arsenal will be in operating order.

Fred Eberts an employee of the Northern Casket Company, town, was the victim of a painful accident on Monday. He was shaping a board on one of the machines when it split and dragged his hand towards the blade. A portion of his little finger was severed and the other fingers on the hand badly mangled.

Lindsay town council at its session Monday night strongly protested against an article published in the Globe and Mail on Saturday relative to the Lindsay Arsenal. A letter of protest will be sent to the editor of that publication.

Early Closing

Lindsay council is between two fires in connection with the grocers' early closing bylaw recently passed by that body and which has been effective for some weeks. All is not harmony among the grocers, as a deputation of the latter waited on the council and wanted the bylaw repealed. They found a number of supporters among the members of the council and also in Mayor Claxton. A bylaw to rescind the original bylaw will be introduced at the April meeting of the council.

Mayor Claxton has adopted an original idea with a view to instilling a deeper interest in matters of municipal among the young people of the town. The pupils of the Collegiate Institute will be invited to attend the sessions in order to get a first hand idea of the manner in which the town's affairs are handled. The Mayor will donate prizes for the best essays on civic government.

Britain To Dole Out Bomb Shelters To Public Skeptical Of Safety

By Guy Rhoades
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

LONDON, March 8 — (CP). — The Government will give steel "bomb-proof shelters to British urban families whose incomes are not more than $1,250 but the argument as to whether they will benefit seems likely to continue.

Proponents of deep bomb shelters maintain the Government's "family" refuges—some looking like conical sentry boxes, others like big dog kennels—will not provide the protection the public needs. They argue the shelters are likely to be buried, imprisoning the occupants.

Manufacturers of the conical type have placed their product through a rigorous test. In a mock village of specially constructed houses they buried two shelters. Between them they detonated a 500-pound high-explosive bomb. The shelters were intact when they were uncovered.

However, said critics, that did not prove the shelters could stand a direct hit (the manufacturers had not claimed they could) and besides no one had been inside the shelter when the bomb exploded. Therefore, they argued, the test could not be accepted as proof occupants of the refuge would not be killed by concussion.

Two Volunteers.

No one, except a girl and a war veteran whose services were not accepted, appears anxious to act as human guinea pig for a concussion experiment.

Some critics suggested an ape might be used as a substitute for a man in such an experiment. One difficulty arose at once London's ape population is confined most to zoos. The animals are friends of the people, known by their first names, Joey, Moine and the like. Any attempt to explode bombs under a pal of a large section of London would be resented.

So, in the absence of a test satisfactory to all critics, steel mills continue rolling out $100,000,000 worth of little steel huts that will hold five persons at a pinch and a growing number of civic authorities and influential individuals urge construction of deep permanent shelters that could be used as parking places for cars in peacetime.

Chimney Fire

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Mar. 8. — A high wind blew over this town on Tuesday afternoon threatening to spread sparks which were flying from the chimney of Mrs. T. S. Tait's residence on Centre Street. The Fire Department received a call to the house at 2.30 when neighbors noticed the chimney was on fire. No damage was done and the blaze was soon extinguished.

Sees Groundhog

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Mar. 8. — The second groundhog to be seen so far this season has been reported by Mrs. W. J. Dalgleish, Rear Street. Mrs. Dalgleish was driving along No. 30 Highway last Sunday when the animal was seen basking in the sun on top of a large snow bank at the side of the road. James MacDowell of Seymour Township was first to report seeing a member of the groundhog family near his farm on Monday.

5 Provinces To Seek Dairy Industry Cure

MONTREAL, March 8 (CP).—Remedial measures for Canada's dairy industry will be discussed here at a conference of representatives of the Dominion's five eastern provinces, Agriculture Minister Bona Dussault yesterday told the annual luncheon of the Quebec Holstein Breeders' Association.

Solution of the dairy problem, the Quebec Cabinet member said, can be brought about only through co-operation, starting within the provinces and extending from coast to coast. Date of the conference has not been set.

Fred Hubbs of Bloomfield, Ont., and T. R. Dent of Woodstock, Ont., president and vice-president, respectively, of the Holstein Breeders' Association of Canada, attended the Quebec association's annual meeting.

Two other members of the Quebec Cabinet, Hon. T. J. Coonan and Hon. Antonio Elie, Ministers without portfolio, also were present.

Another Bad Night Could Get No Rest

To those who sleep in a kind of way, but whose rest is broken by bad dreams and nightmares.

To those who wake up in the morning as tired as on going to bed, we offer in Milburn's Health and Nerve Pills a remedy to help soothe and calm the nerves and bring them back to a perfect condition, and when this is done there should be no more sleepless nights due to shattered nerves.

Trade Promotion Criticism Riles Euler

OTTAWA, March 8 — (CP). — No amplification was forthcoming today from Agricultural Minister Gardiner or Trade Minister Euler to an interview Mr. Euler gave yesterday taking exception to reported criticism by Mr. Gardiner of the amount of advertising of Canadian dairy products in the United Kingdom.

The interview was the backwash of an address Mr. Gardiner made last Tuesday night here before a cheesemakers' convention in which he dealt with sales promotion of Canadian produce in the United Kingdom market, suggesting insufficient effort had been made to bring the merits of Canadian produce to the attention of the British public.

After the interview was given yesterday, it is understood the two ministers got together and discussed the matter, agreeing there had been a misunderstanding and Mr. Gardiner had intended no reflection on the trade and commerce department.

In the published interview, Mr. Euler was quoted as saying: "If he (Mr. Gardiner) was correctly reported, he simply does not know what he is talking about and I avail myself of the opportunity of saying so. We do more advertising of Canadian products abroad than any other two dominions. Mr. Gardiner had better see to the supply and quality. We will attend to the advertising'"

This is not the first time the two ministers have been on the verge of a clash because the responsibilities of the two departments interlock to some extent. Mr. Euler's department is responsible for assisting in the marketing of all Canadian products, including agriculture. Mr. Gardiner's department is responsible for assisting in the production of Canadian agriculture, including the improvement in quality. Naturally production depends on marketing and marketing depends on production and quality.

Oliva Goes High Hat

The Ontario Government invited Mr. and Mrs. Oliva Dionne to come to Toronto along with their five famous children so they might visit with the King and Queen. A copy of the invitation as published makes it appear as though a cordial letter had been written; special train provided, special place for them to stay in Toronto and attendance at the luncheon to royalty. We know of no family or person who has been offered similar treatment.

But Oliva Dionne does not seem to be impressed. His idea is that if the King and Queen wish to see the quints they should come along and visit them at the Dafoe Hospital. Oliva may change his mind but that's the way he is thinking at the moment.

It does appear to be quite a change from his attitude when he was prepared to put his signature to a contract which would have sent the children off to the big fair in Chicago a few weeks after they were born and when there was scarcely enough life in them to hold from day to day. The lure of some ready money then may have loomed big to the father, but since then his fortunes have been altered and he is no longer in need. Perhaps his outlook on life and on kings and queens and all things else has undergone quite a change along with his lot in life.

The girls will be five years old by the time the proposed trip is to be made and perhaps they are due for a ride on a train. Coaches are so made today that little folk can no longer stick their heads out of the windows and get cinders in their eyes, but even so they might enjoy a ride on a train. Then too they would have opportunity to see the King and Queen, and we doubt if there are any people in the Dominion whom the King and Queen would be more eager to see than these world-famous children.

So we cannot entirely see the logic in Oliva Dionne's attitude—if they want to see the children let them come up here. The time of Their Majesties is cut rather thin; it is all mapped out for them in advance and there will be few moments which are not accounted for. Oliva it seems has gone rather high hat.

The Mind Of An Analyst

Sir Joseph Flavelle went a long way in business after he left his native city of Peterborough. He went to public school here and also to high school, but whether he completed his course there no one seems to recall. He was one of those who desired to go to work, and he did. His first position was in a dry goods store. Working for some person else did not appeal to Joseph Flavelle, and the knowledge he had gained in dry goods would not seem to be of much use in the next venture, when he launched out as the owner of a flour and feed store. Nor was that sufficient to satisfy the desire for the world and its business. He left Peterborough when he was 29. Since then he has become identified with many concerns and his ability for direction found the scope he appeared to have demanded.

Possibly his greatest asset was the manner in which he could analyze a situation. There have been few men with a greater gift in that field than Sir Joseph. The possibilities of failure or success in any given field seemed to be like an open book to him. It was that peculiar talent for proper analysis of a situation which carried him the distance he covered in the business world of the Dominion.

The Question Of Wages

Two industrial plants in Kitchener, the Dominion and Merchants' rubber companies, have had a strike on their hands for a month and 1,300 workers have been idle. So many statements have been issued that a number of the claims seem foggy, but in the last analysis it has settled down to a discussion of wages, and that is about as effective a way to produce a deadlock as we know.

The manager of the Dominion Rubber Co. has issued the most recent statement, and argues that it is not possible to pay higher wages because export trade is a large part of the business and the returns received from this export trade are low because the goods have to be sold in competition with the output of firms in countries where wages and general costs are lower than they are in Kitchener.

The manager refers to comparisons of wages in Kitchener and United States which show the rate in the States as being much higher, but he says that does not mean a thing because manufacturers in United States have a large protected home market in which they can sell much of their output at a profitable price.

That argument seems to be sound enough, but it does not answer the request of 1,300 workers in Kitchener who want better wages. It really means that if firms are going to get the bulk of their business from export trade then they must so arrange matters that they will have to produce goods here in Canada on a price basis which will meet competition from countries where wages are lower, where living standards are on an inferior basis to those which we strive to maintain, and where costs of material may also be much lower. If wages have to be placed on that level then the outlook is not particularly bright. It looks much like a condition under which there would always be the recurring demand for better pay and the recurring answer that better pay could not be provided.

Make The Round Trip

The London Economist has come to the conclusion that Italy made a blunder in conquering Ethiopia if the purpose was to find a home for thousands of Italians. That was the claim — Italy needed colonial expansion, and it did look for a time as though it were going about it in a very systematic way. Plans were made to house the new families before they arrived, and they were in a preferred position when compared to the pioneers of this country who had to make homes for themselves by hewing down forests.

Up to the end of January, 1937, there had been an exodus of 168,111 laborers to Ethiopia. During the next 11 months there were 23,938 Italians who landed in Ethiopia with the intention of remaining, and in the following ten-month period records show 6,629 leaving Italy for Ethiopia. And that makes a total of 198,678, which looks like a respectable enough start in the business of building a new colony.

But that is not the whole story. During that first period mentioned 59,997 Italians left Ethiopia for their own land again; in the second period there were 81,364 who moved in the same direction and in the third and last period for which figures are available there 47,157 more of them who returned to Italy. And that makes 188,518.

So it actually means that after all the moving here and there and back again there have been about 10,000 Italians remaining in Ethiopia. That is what first led to the observation that the biggest import and export business between Italy and her new colony Ethiopia was Italians.

As a City Looks At It

The new mental hospital erected in Elgin County is not far removed from the stage where it will be ready for use. The London Free Press, noting that development, makes this remark:

"The citizens of London will have to be on the alert to see that another move is not made to close the institution in London."

The two Ontario mental hospitals, the one in London and the newer one in Elgin County, are not more than 20 miles separated, and possibly London feels that the tendency will be to fill up the newer institutions and eventually close the one in that city. London feels the hospital is something like an asset; people who work there live in London, and probably a good many supplies are purchased in that city, and visiting relatives would also account for a number of people going to that city. So London wants to make sure its mental hospital is kept going.

But all the reasons which London could advance would be based on the central thought that the institution is and has been a good thing for London. Possibly any city would take a similar view, although in the last analysis it is a small one. London does not have to pay the bills because whatever money is required is a tax on the province. If there is no more need for the London hospital then it would be the part of good business and common sense to close it. We can think of no good reason for keeping it open if its services can be better supplied by the newer building in Elgin County.

Called Before The Bar!

Hon. Dr. Manion suggested that Prime Minister King should unite with him in taking action against the editor of the Ottawa Citizen, who had been writing some pointed material in his paper about the manner in which parliament is being conducted. Dr. Manion was inclined to have the editor called before the Bar of the House and that might also mean having him imprisoned in the Tower.

The editor of the Ottawa Journal protested. Not that he was racing toward the defence of his br'er editor, but if there were to be any such entertainment he wanted to participate. He was not willing that Hansard should record about the editor of the Citizen being made a martyr to the cause of freedom and say nothing at all of the editor of the Journal walking about on the floor of the House with the sergeant-at-arms at his side.

Nor was the Journal man alarmed about being sent off to the Tower. They don't hurt a fellow very much there; they have ceased using the thumb screw and the rack. Instead they feed the prisoner in the parliamentary restaurant, let him read books in the library and give him a cot where he can sleep. There is no prison uniform and the editor could wear his best suit if he happened to have it out of the loan shop. Nor would they cut his hair or make him rise at 6 in the morning and he wouldn't have to take a bath on Saturday night unless he'd fallen into the habit and insisted on it.

So we come to the conclusion that being called before the Bar of the House is not such a painful thing as one might imagine. The editor of the Citizen or the Journal could upon release go about a day's work without facing the handicap which generally falls to the ex-convict, and the neighbors wouldn't whisper behind the hand about jail birds. And they might get their pictures in the papers and have their names and honorable calling recorded in Hansard where in bound volumes in the archives they would be on record for years to come. On the face of it the venture looks more attractive than serving ten days in the county jail.

We Have Some Of Them

We have car drivers in Peterborough who have been demonstrating on mild days that they have poor manners. They are sadly lacking in consideration of other people and of common courtesy they possess little—if any at all.

Many of our streets have been in bad shape. There are places where water is present and there is no help for it. Some of the drivers apparently insist on the full exercise of the rights granted to them by the province of driving 30 miles an hour in the city.

It never occurs to some of the drivers that it would be the part of a gentleman to consider people who may be walking along the street which they happen to select for their exhibitions. Possibly they never thought people do not care to have slush and water pitched at them. They drive as though the discomfort of others was sufficient cause for them to make a Roman holiday out of the spring weather and the sloppy streets. Never again may they have such an opportunity to show how smart they really are so they make the most of it. They can be hauled into court and made to pay for their fool conduct, but the trick is to catch them and produce the evidence.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Britain has arranged to extend to China a credit of $23,500,000. The purse of the world seems to be permanently deposited in old London.

Dr. Goebbels claims that Germany must trade in order to live, and unfortunately that seems to be true of every nation. Right there is where much of the trouble starts.

The word rut is a noun of course, but we take the liberty of claiming we have some of the ruttiest streets in existence. They are ruttier than at this time last year.

Straw vote shows that Roosevelt has a slim chance of being president of United States for a third term. Perhaps—but who have they in sight who can defeat him?

A new seed catalogue came in today and on the cover is the picture of a man with a wheelbarrow filled with three or four potatoes. And yet there are always people jumping on politicians because they make election promises.

Studying impersonation on voting day in Toronto, it has been found that the preparation of voters' lists gives impersonators a good chance to study the field well in advance. And providing Part 3 of the voters' list for the provincial elections also gives municipalities a chance to pay for something which should be attended to by the provincial government.

Ontario government has grown tired of waiting for Ottawa to draft a program for the royal visit to Toronto, so is preparing one of its own. Toronto is likely to change the route so the procession will not pass along Eastern Avenue, described as one of Toronto's "unbeautiful areas." Looks as though Toronto was going to put all the big apples on the top of the display basket.

PROSPECTS

(By A.R.K.)

¶ I read long arguments profound, in words high sounding and profound, on money and its ways; I know I'm somewhat of a dunce, and can't digest it all at once, 'twould take me several days.

¶ And they're attacking interest hard, and making speeches by the yard, they smite it hip and thigh; the days of six per cent. are done, and driving on it's just begun, it's got a blackened eye.

¶ Likewise I read where it would pay, to start and give some cash away, for now it's going to seed; you'd just call in each week or two, and tell them what you are and who, and tell how much you need.

¶ They say it might take several years, to get his system on its gears, so it would really run; and yet new faith still seems to spring, in those who advocate the thing, they say it can be done.

¶ I hope the men who know this plan, are guided by some busy man, who takes things in his stride; so he won't quit before he's through, or find some other things to do, and get this laid aside.

¶ I'll never chant a hymn of hate, because I think the thing is great, and then I'll work no more; I'll call the money office then, and bid them send along their men—and bring mine to the door.

Let's Give Them $25 Per Month

(From Parliamentary Reports).

Mr. BLACKMORE: In exchange, they are giving consumption. Men are coming to realize that a person who can consume is an asset to a country. Let any agent to-day, representing any company, go out and try to sell his product. What is the first thing he does in the community in which he is trying to promote sales? He looks for men who might be able to buy.

Mr. LAWSON: Effective buyers; that is, those who have something to give in exchange.

Mr. POOLE: That is why we need purchasing power.

Mr. LAWSON: But when someone is not an effective buyer and consumes anyway, he is not an asset but a liability.

Mr. BLACKMORE: Let us study the question calmly—

Mr. LAWSON: I did not mean to interrupt the hon. gentleman.

Mr. BLACKMORE: We welcome interruptions. That is what we want. Let us take the questions point by point, answering one at a time even if we have to stay here all night—because we can answer all these questions.

Mr. McLean: (Melfort) What about the resolution?

Mr. BLACKMORE: Suppose the dominion government creates a five dollar bill and puts it into the hands of a widow, enabling her to buy a pair of shoes. The government is not exactly compelling the shoe factory to give her a pair of shoes.

Mr. LAWSON: But we are making the people of Canada give it to her the people from whom we take five dollars by way of taxation.

Mr. BLACKMORE: You are not making the people of Canada give it so long as you have not created more purchasing power than there are goods and services to justify the giving of that five dollars.

Mr. LAWSON: I cannot agree with your premise.

Mr. BLACKMORE: It is true whether you agree with it or not. When you have in the United States $15,000,000,000 worth of consumers' goods which you cannot sell, those goods are a justification for the creation of more money, and the state can create more money up to the extent to which it can enable the people to consume or distribute the $15,000,000,000 worth of goods. And there will not be any inflation, according to the definitions of that word which I have read from Sir Basil Blackett. If there is no inflation you take nothing from the people because there is no rise in prices as a result of which there is any indirect taxation. If new money results in a rise in prices, creating an indirect tax, then you are taking something from the people.

Mr. DUNNING: Then why should anyone work if he can get something without working? Why should any man work if he can get purchasing power for what he needs without having to go to work? And what would happen to production if everybody said, "There is no need to work because we can get purchasing power without doing so?"

Mr. BLACKMORE: That is an excellent question.

An hon. MEMBER: Answer it.

Mr. BLACKMORE: Hon. members will notice that we have changed our point of discussion from inflation to an altogether different aspect of the subject.

Mr. LAWSON: I was never on inflation; that is not a bugbear to me.

Mr. BLACKMORE: Now we are on the question, how to get the people to work under the system that we propose. My time has already gone, and the chairman has been considerate enough to give me some latitude, I must hurry. That is a legitimate question and it must be answered. Suppose the government gave $25 a month to everyone—I mention that figure because everyone hears about $25 to-day—and that there were jobs to be had. Now take any young couple, a married couple, say. The young woman gets $25 and her husband gets $25.

Mr. DUNNING: For nothing.

Mr. BLACKMORE: Yes, simply because they belong to society. Let me say right here that to-day we are giving something to all the people who are on relief, so that when we balk at this suppostion about giving $25 to everybody we are simply straining at a gnat and swallowing a camel. We are allowing thousands of returned men who should be receiving munificent treatment from the country, who have already earned it, to go on suffering in misery:—

Mr. LAWSON: That is not fair.

Mr. BLACKMORE: I am prepared to modify that statement to the extent that is necessary.

The CHAIRMAN: I must remind the hon. member that he has exceeded his time, and the questions and interruptions have not counted in his time.

Mr. LAWSON: I will talk for a couple of minutes and you can start again.

Mr. BLACKMORE: May I just finish the point I was making about the supposititious married couple? Does anyone here suppose that if a young married man had a chance to make $25 a month in addition to the $25 that he was receiving he would not take that chance? I venture to say that if he were disinclined to take it his wife would very soon make matters so uncomfortable for him that he would be willing to change his mind. The point that we overlook is that under our relief arrangement when a young man is energetic enough to get a job we take away his relief. Under social credit we propose to continue giving him his relief. Under social credit we propose to continue giving him his relief so that he will have an additional incentive to obtain work if work can be had at all.

THAT HAPPY DAY.

COLONEL DREW laid it down at Midland that municipal taxation should be adjusted so that real estate would only bear the actual cost of its services. That would mean police, fire protection and a few other things. It would be too good to be true. Certain it is, it was never intended that property should bear the burden of all the socialization, which has developed in recent years.—St. Catharines Standard.

• Let the States Take Palestine

ALTHOUGH members of the U. S. Congress from time to time suggest that Britain should turn over some of her insular possessions in payment of the war debt, so far there has been no proposition from Washington looking to the wiping out of all outstanding scores on the surrender to Uncle Sam of Britain's mandate over Palestine. If such a switch were suggested notes Toronto Telegram, it could be supported by the fact that about one-third of the world's Jews are resident in the United States—4,228,000 according to figures collected in 1933—while the British Empire numbers less than three-quarters of a million among her population.

For a moment it appeared that the United States might be inviting such a transfer. It was reported that Ambassador Kennedy had told Lord Halifax that British ideas on the Palestine question would have an unfavorable effect on United States opinion. If that were so, it would have come as a magnificent gesture from one great democracy to another for Britain to have turned the mandate over to permit Uncle Sam to solve the puzzle of how to bring Jew and Arab to lie down together. But it has been denied that Mr. Kennedy made any such implied criticism of British ideas, and it is added that he saw Lord Halifax merely in the guise of a reporter to get an ampler version of the British suggestion than had been revealed to the public.

Science has managed to split the actom, but so far it has not succeeded in making it possible for two bodies to occupy the same space at the same time. While that remains impossible, it looks at present as though peace in Palestine will be merely relative.

• An Editor Breaks Into A New Song

THIS may be the first robin in what perhaps is the early springtime of recovery.

We have just read an invitation says the New York World-Telegram from the promoters of a club—and a brand new club at that.

Clubs flourished throughout the land in years that led up to the big wind. Well-stocked clubs, city clubs and country clubs. Even unto the nine-hole course out at the edge of Bingville-on-the-Pike. And on up to New York, where membership not only involved a two or three thousand-dollar initiation fee and a whale of a lot of annual dues, but also a careful look at your tonsils and your family tree before you were admitted at all.

Came the cyclone. And now the restrictions were lifted! From being exclusive, the clubs beat the bushes along the human highways and byways for new members, and no questions asked. Exclusiveness was thrown to the dogs of expediency and self-preservation. Getting into a club became no more difficult than getting into a railway station.

As for new clubs—nothing doing.

Yet now, so help us, a new club is being formed. Talk about the return of confidence, about putting capital to work — this may be it.

And listen to the language of the invitation: "This club is being organized for a small, selected group, . . . Its purpose is to serve its members a cuisine that will surpass anything in the city. . . . Dishes from New Orleans, Boston, Charleston, Virginia, as well as many French dishes. . . . Never has there been a club that offers as much in the way of rare delicacies, foods and liquors", etc.

To The Editor

THE WAR IN SPAIN

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—For two and one-half years now, we have been hearing through the daily press, so much about democracy and the Spanish war that the ordinary reader, having no other medium of news, has really believed the Red government of Spain to be democratic. A writer in last night's issue of your paper has made some remarks, which show more clearly than anything I read to date just to what extent the real truth has been kept from the people by our unpurchased and uncontrolled press.

He refers to Christian nations like Britain, France, and U. S. A. Well we will take France for example.

Leon Blum, an atheistic Jew, was premier of France during the greater part of the war in Spain, and what did his Communist controlled government do with the help and approval of the Chamber of Deputies who are all communists, but allow 50,000 French volunteers to cross into Spain, allowed the Soviets to maintain a large recruiting station in Paris with stolen Spanish gold. Of course you would not call that an invasion.

This paper published a photo some time ago of a train of 100 large transports all ready to leave France for Spain. They were supposed to contain only food. Now would that be invasion or intervention?

Then we were treated with a wonderful story about a daring character called "Potato Jones." Casey was a piker compared to this guy. He brought the "murphies" to Barcelona. And yet they say the Reds got no help. Gen. Franco today has enough Russian tanks and heavy field guns on his hands to fill a hundred-acre field to say nothing at all about machine guns, rifles, and planes all made in atheist Russia, the country "Durham" failed to classify as anti-Christian.

And he calls it an invasion by Italy and Germany. Well listen to this. Here are just a few things which he omitted entirely. For instance. 15,000 men were recruited by Soviet agents in Czecho-Slovakia and all Jewish at that, who were told if they went to "Loyalist" Spain they could strike a blow at Hitler. Well, over 7,000 have been killed the remainder have been rendered useless for any further fighting. Now they have no country to return to.

Then we have over 8,000 Americans and a lesser number of Canadians along with Moors-Germans, Italians, Belgian, British, Russians, Mexicans and even a few Chinese all sickle and hammer men fighting for Red democracy.

Now Just as soon as they landed in Spain they were obliged to assume a Spanish name, in order to fool any agents of the non-intervention committee. Prisoners taken by the Nationalist Army were obliged to speak their own language because they could not ask for bread in Spanish. Those were International brigade recruits.

The war that was began with the avowed intention of wiping out forever the Catholic faith in Spain, even with all that help, failed miserably, although it destroyed over 13,000 churches, chaples, and monasteries, along with some 10,000 nuns, priests, bishops and of course every wealthy Spanish Catholic, at the same time robbing them of evcrything they possessed.

Catholic Spain today owes her very life to the Catholic soldiers of Italy, whose blood has been shed unsparingly in that unhappy land that there may be established forever the peace of Christ in the reign of Christ.

UNGRATEFUL MOONEY.

Mrs. Tom Mooney has a job with the federal music bureau in California and it is being urged she be dismissed, yet if her husband persists with his intention of divorcing her, she will need the job more than ever. It does seem strange, however that she should be holding such a job when her husband is able to use private planes on trips all over the country, wear the finest clothes, be paid for making public appearances and live in great style. There probably are many now who regret their efforts for the freedom of Mooney when they see how he is treating the wife who stuck by him for more than twenty years of his imprisonment, doing everything possible to have him released. Not many people like an ungrateful man. — (Niagara Falls Review)

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

Now when he came nigh to the gate of the city, behold, there was a dead man carried out, the only son of his mother, and she was a widow: and much people of the city was with her. And when the Lord saw her, he had compassion on her, and said unto her, Weep not. And he came and touched the bier; and they that bare him stood still. And he said, Young man, I say unto thee, Arise. And he that was dead sat up, and began to speak. And he delivered him to his mother.

And there came a fear on all: and they glorified God, saying, That a great prophet is risen up among us; and, That God hath visited his people.—Luke vii, 12-16.

24-YEAR-OLD CAT.

OLD TOM of Seneca Falls, New York, is a cat whose 24th birthwas a civic celebration, sponsored by the Mayor and heads of all village departments. Perhaps not since an ancient Egyptian cat was worshipped at Bubastis; or since Dick Whittington was Lord Mayor of London, at least, has municipal government made so much of mouser; and well may Seneca Falls take note of Tom's birthday, for it is probably the oldest one a cat ever arrived at with or without press agent.—New York Sun.

Garage Employee Arrested In Cavan

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MILLBROOK, Mar. 8. — Richard McConkey, formerly employed at the Tinney garage at Cavanville, was arrested at the week-end by Police Constable E. C. Richards, charged with the theft of goods from the garage, his attempt to sell a heater for an automobile leading to suspicion on the part of the constable, and to his being apprehended and taken to the Cobourg Gaol.

Goods to the value of about one hundred dollars, including batteries and other car accessories, were found about the home at the west-end of the village where the accused has been living; this fact being also a feature that culminated in his arrest.

McConkey came up for trial before Magistrate Campbell at Cobourg on Monday, and because of its being his first offence, he was allowed to go on suspended sentence.

Arthur Langton and Sid Mitchell, who were arrested at Peterborough on Sunday by Constable Richards, in co-operation with the city police, also came up for trial at Cobourg on Monday, and were remanded until Saturday for sentence.

Bridge Party Held At Barringer Home

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MILLBROOK, Mar. 8. — A number of friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Barringer, Anne Street, at the week-end and enjoyed three tables of bridge, the occasion being a birthday anniversary of Mr. Barringer.

During the course of the evening the guest of honor was presented with a handsome radio lamp, in an informal manner, the service of a dainty lunch and further play round the card tables, following suitable acknowledgment of the gift by its surprised recipient, before good-nights were spoken and the guests left for home.

Birthday Party.

Beverley Patton, little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Patton, of the Zion Line, west of the village, entertained a number of her friends at a party marking her fourth birthday anniversary, on Monday of this week.

Games of various kinds, under the supervision of the little hostess' mother, were played previous to the tea hour, when the eight little folk, with the guest of honor, were seated at a low table, centred with the birthday cake, bearing its four candles.

As was fitting the small hostess had the honor of lighting the candles and of blowing them out again at the conclusion of the dainty meal.

A happy hour followed before the guests made their adieus, and were conveyed to their several homes.

Substantial gains in passengers and freight last year have been reported by the two national aviation companies in the Netherlands.

BRITISH COLUMBIA, MANITOBA AND ONTARIO REMAIN UNBEATEN

Two Rinks Fall In 5th Round Of Brier 'Spiel

TORONTO, March 8 (CP).—Saskatchewan and Northern Ontario were tumbled today from the ranks of unbeaten rinks in the Macdonald's Brier Curling Bonspiel for the Canadian championship as British Columbia, Manitoba and Ontario posted their fifth consecutive victories.

Falling in a great last-end rally, the George Dunbar rink from Prince Albert, Sask., suffered its first defeat after four straight triumphs at the hands of Ontario's representatives, skipped by Bert Hall of Kitchener. The score was 9-8.

Northern Ontario's D. H. Millar rink from Haileybury was outplayed steadily, dropping a 14-10 decision to the British Columbians of Rolly David.

Manitoba's defending champions, led by Ross Kennedy of Winnipeg, scored decisively over Prince Edward Island, 16-7, for their fifth straight victory to keep pace with British Columbia and Ontario.

Alberta recorded its first win in five starts at the expense of Quebec, scoring a dramatic four on the 12th end for a 10-9 triumph. In the other fifth-round match Nova Scotia defeated New Brunswick 13-11. Neither of the Maritime rinks had won a match prior to clashing.

Fifth Round.

Score by ends:

New Brunswick	0	2	0	0	0	0	5	1	1	—11
Nova Scotia	4	0	3	1	1	2	2	0	0	—13
Ontario	1	0	0	3	1	0	2	1	0	—9
Saskatchewan	0	0	1	0	0	3	0	0	1	—8
Quebec	1	0	2	1	2	0	0	2	0	—9
Alberta	0	1	0	0	2	1	1	0	4	—10
Manitoba	3	3	0	2	1	0	3	0	2	—16
Prince Edward Is.	0	0	1	3	0	0	2	1	0	—7

Northern Ontario	1	0	0	1	0	3	0	3	2	—10

Manitoba, almost a perennial winner of the Canadian curling championship, will be host next year to the Macdonald's Brier competition. It will be the first time the Brier, inaugurated 12 years ago, has been held outside of Toronto.

The announcement was made last night at the annual banquet as the 10 championship rinks competing in this year's tournament rested after four rounds that saw five rinks advance without a defeat, leaving the others winless.

The competition will be held at Winnipeg for only one year, Chairman Thomas Rennie of the Brier Trustees said. Peter Lyall of Montreal, Eastern trustee, said the Brier will return afterward to Toronto for "many, many years." The invitation was extended by the Manitoba Curling Association.

Manitoba has won the Tankard eight times and this year is defending champion. With a rink tasting Brier play for the first time it entered the fifth round to-day without a defeat. Also unbeaten are British Columbia, Saskatchewan, Ontario and Northern Ontario.

Through four rounds the luck of the draw consistently sent winners against losers and the unbroken winning streak of the leaders constituted curling history.

Two favorites, Ross Kennedy's Manitobans and Bert Hall's Ontario rink, met in an afternoon match. The match was high-lighted as the day's feature with an evening match between Northern Ontario and Manitoba. Observers are picking one of these rinks to cop the title with the balance in favor of either Manitoba or Ontario.

In the fourth-round matches yesped by Ross Kennedy, trounced C. W. Durrant's Nova Scotians, 16-5, while Northern Ontario, led by Dan Millar, laced Bob Cream's Quebec rink 14-9. Rolly David skipped his British Columbians to a 10-7 triumph over Howard Palmer's Alberta four. Bert Hall and his Ontario quartette drubbed Prince Edward Island 18-9 and the Limerick rink of New Brunswick fell before George Dunbar's Saskatchewan crew 10-7.

Westwood Cuts Albions Down By 3-1

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HAVELOCK, March 8.—Eliminating the Havelock "Albions" by a 3-1 score, in a sudden death playoff game at the Norwood arena last evening, Westwood won the right to meet Indian River next Saturday to decide the East Peterborough Rural League championship. Elgin scheduled to play the latter squad also last night, in the semi-final round, forfeited the game to the Indian Riverites, by failing to ice a team. A number of the Elgin players were reported to be suffering from an attack of the flu.

Favored with a good sheet of ice, the teams displayed a fast brand of hockey, with plenty of action throughout the whole three stanzas. The game, though rough in spots, was quite clean, only three minors being handed out, two of which went to Westwood.

With two well-balanced lines and a strong defence, every member of the Westwood squad turned in a great game. Richardson in goal had very few shots to handle throughout the entire session. Gill, B. Mortlock, Chaplin and Sargent were especially effective for the winning squad.

Excellent work by Hill, local netminder, prevented Westwood from piling up a larger count. At times he was fairly bombarded with shots, but he somehow succeeded in turning most of them aside. The line composed of Hagerman, E. Ellis and F. Ellis, and defenceman E. Gordon went best for the losers.

Westwood went into the lead early in the initial frame, B. Mortlock putting them one up on Sargent's play. The Albions disorganized at first, regained themselves towards the latter part of the period and began to show more power on the attack.

The locals started strong in the second. A penalty to Chaplin for tripping E. Ellis gave them a chance to tie it up, but fine work by Buck and Gill kept them off th score sheet. Breaking up a Havelock play, Chaplin shot one from the blue-line, the bounding puck hopping right over Hill's stick for Westwood's second counter. Five minutes later Gill notched another one for them on a pass from Morris. Penalties to Gill for tripping E. Ellis, and to E. Gordon failed to give either side the advantage, and the session ended with the count standing 3-0.

Havelock pressed hard in the final frame ,and Hamilton finally banged one in, with E. Ellis assisting. There was some dispute over this goal, the referee finally allowing it, although the goal judge said it didn't cross the line. Morris received a bad fall during the first half of the final session and was forced to retire for the rest of the game.

The teams:

Havelock: Goal, Hill; defence, E. Gordon, Lade; centre, Hagerman; wings, E. Ellis, F. Ellis; alternates: Green, H. Gordon, Pollock, Varty, Williams, Hamilton.

Westwood: Goal, Richardson; defence, W. Mortlock, B. Graham; centre, Morris; wings, Gill, Buck; alternates: Sargent, B. Mortlock, S. Ross, Thompson, Chaplin.

Referees: R. Ennis, Norwood; L. McMullen, Havelock.

Summary.

1st Period—
Westwood—B. Mortlock (Sargent) 8.10
2nd Period—
Westwood—Chaplin 8.45
Westwood—Gill (Morris) 8.50
Penalties: Chaplin, Gill, E. Gordon.
3rd Period—
Havelock—Hamilton (E. Ellis). 9.30

Digging up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

And that's one peanut we won't put in the bag. That 5-3 lemon the locals were handed about a quarter to 11 o'clock last night at the Brock by the burly Big Roar boys. It was doubly bitter when the Petes had a 3-1 margin on the game halfway through the third period—the Falls scoring all five goals in the final frame. Ouch, but it hurt! Some 1,800 fans viewed the joust and liked it fine, till that late drive by the Cataracts changed the whole complexion of the contest. Looked like a local win most of the way, but the Petes didn't have enough to stop Niagara Falls from pouring over the top in the dying minutes. A tough one to take, but the Petes aren't out of the O.H.A. senior "B" round-robin series yet by any means. They still hope to finish second and make the playoffs; top two playing off.

* * * * * *

Looked to us like the Falls had a bit more experience and knew how to cash in when they finally got going. They're easily as fast as the Petes, plenty rugged and shade the Buckland boys on savvy in around a rival cage. No wild banging away at the goalie, but snap shots at the corners or tricky stick-work to pull the net-guardian out. The Petes muffed several swell chances in the first half to score, but the Falls took advantage of every break. And finished a little stronger than the Petes. That's how it looked to us—though we thought the Petes had it won till that final blowup.

* * * * * *

Then It Happened

A 1-0 edge in the first frame and a 2-0 score going into the third looked like money in the bank to the home rooters. And a 3-1 bulge halfway through the third still looked sweeter than roses in springtime. But then the Cataracts started clicking on their power-play and they had it tied up and won before the dazed Petes could untrack themselves. Swept in fast with heads up to earn several goals and get a bit of a break on two. Once a guy was knocked over, but picked himself up just in time to grab a wild forward pass by a buddy—with no one to beat then but the goalie. And again they counted a soft one on a breakaway as the locals ganged up. But that's hockey, one supposes. Grrr!

* * * * * *

They weren't the same rough Falls' squad that came here a year ago. They are husky and play rugged hockey, but the Petes easily held their own in stiff checking this time, and there wasn't the same high-sticking and cutting going on. One fight broke out but no damage was done, and the penalties were fairly evenly divided. On their own large ice, the speedy Niagara outfit will be tough to take, but the Petes still have a fair chance. Given a few more breaks and they'd have come through this one. At any rate, this week's tough trio of tilts—in Waterloo tonight and back here with Chatham—will about show the Petes' chance in the round-robin series. So we won't count 'em out till they've dropped three tussles, and we doubt if they'll do that this week.

* * * * * *

Not Goalie's Fault

Couldn't blame Ray Harding in the home net last night, as he had little chance on those that beat him. First one didn't leave the ice but caught a far corner at a sharp angle, and the others he couldn't get in front of, at all. He blocked a bunch in a good showing, and this Goalie Mowers also appeared as good as his press notices claimed all winter. We liked the work of Doc Nichol up front best of all the Petes, while our defence clicked good till the last part of the third. Team became a bit disorganized with the Falls ganging up at the finish, and they gradually tired under the strain. But they made a fair job of it, at that. A nice game to watch all the way. Brenchley, Mason, Grigor and Dyte were the pick of the winners.

* * * * * *

Final two games of the Church Hockey League playoffs will be tonight at the Brock. At six, the third bantam final betwixt George St. and St. John's is billed, each having copped one nod. At eight, All Saints and St. Paul's tangle in their seventh junior playoff, tonight's victor taking the title. Each has won and tied two, St. Paul's having a 12-8 scoring edge in the long serial. These games must start on the dot. And so the big Church Loop has dwindled down to these four teams, champs having been declared previously in the other sections.

Up In Lakefield

Cy Hopkins tells us there will be a big ice carnival by the Lakefield Legionnaires this Friday p.m. in the Lakefield rink. A feature will be a mile race open to the district, plus races for young and old, gals and guys. Also a complete card of novelty races, with prizes for fancy and comic dress, as well as other prizes. Sounds like a large evening, and we hope they draw a big crowd from Lakefield, Peterborough and district. The Legionnaires had a good puck season, reaching the semi-finals in their first year back in the O.H.A. hockey wars.

* * * * * *

And a quickie on baseball prospects here—ere we dash off for Waterloo. Three Petes of '38 would like to line up with Oshawa GM-men this season, and may yet, these being Starr, Calladine and Burton. And Starr has an offer of a job in a power house to play ball and hockey in Niagara Falls—though he doesn't know it as yet, but will in a few days. A coupla more of the Petes, Whitehill and Mowry, have been mentioned as possibly taking a crack at the intermediate game in the Lakeshore League. The GM-men will be in a Toronto loop, paying Toronto teams' expenses to Oshawa—and the Petes wouldn't guarantee this. O.B.A. suggested the Petes and Oshawa have an interlocking schedule with some intermediate clubs, but neither town will go for this. So what? So unless the locals can tie up with the Eastern Ontario circuit, and import several good players, we'll have no senior ball in '39.

Dese, dose and dem: 'Tis said the local Aces meet Markham in an O.H.A. intermediate "B" pladown series—Aces having cleaned up in the Omemee loop—but we dunno when or where....Lindsay Midgets lost a 5-4 junior "C" tilt in Belleville but won the round 10 to 5....St. Paul's cagers will meet Parkdale Invictus at nine Saturday eve at the Parkdale collegiate....Drafting and Tool Room clash at seven tonight in the Brock in the final game of their C.G.E. shop puck finals, secondary division....Three Cobourg school hoop outfits meet P.C.I. teams here on Friday....When are the gals' teams playing this week in the new classy Y.W. gym ....Cal Nicholls, injured Monarchs' player, came through his facial operation okay and can now see friends; dunno about a benefit game....Toronto ball clubs aren't fussy about coming this far in a regular schedule, even if expenses were guaranteed....On second thought, don't ya think a senior "B" team like the Petes did well to hold a senior "A" team like the Falls to a 5-3 count?....Recalling that the Big Roar boys twice tied Goodyears and beat St. Catharines the past season....Is senior football about to fold here?....Tonight's senior score will be 'phoned back from Waterloo....Wonder how the German lager and pretzels are up in that district; they used to be okay once!

CURLING

By HERB. MARTIN

The final game of the leads' and seconds' competition for the "R. L. Dobbin" cup will be played some night later in the week. The rinks will be skipped by A. Robinson and A. Gibbs.

To-night we commence the vice-skips' bonspiel with two games—6.45 p.m. and 8.45 p.m. These games will continue each night until the finals have been reached. The games will be played under the same rules as last year—the vice takes charge of the rink, with the regular skip leading All games will be 10 ends. It is up to the boys to get away in good time as the bell will be rung at five minutes to nine.

A lot of the boys are getting all hot and bothered about the season coming to a close. We looked up a lot of records and the average date for last curling over a number of years is March 18th.

Aberdeen In Tie

LONDON, March 8.—(CP Cable).—Aberdeen moved into a tie with Hearts for second place in the Scottish Football League's first division Tuesday by playing a 1-1 draw at Clyde. The Dons and Hearts each have 33 points and trail the pace-making Rangers by 12 points.

In an English League, first division, game, Grimsby Town defeated Stoke City 3-1.

Just Another Close Squeak For the Goalie

Goalie Ray Harding is shown flat on the ice during a hectic moment in the second period of last night's thrilling O.H.A. senior "B" puck playoff here between Niagara Falls and the Petes. The disc was deflected in Harding's dive and is shown at the feet of Dyte (No. 2), who was unable to score. Morrison is also down in the scramble, pictured above, while Allen (No. 10) stands at the side of the net waiting a pass—which did not come. A torrid third-period drive, which netted five goals for the Falls, gave the speedy visitors their 5-3 win over the locals before a big crowd. (Examiner Staff Photo.)

Dempsey Swings His Fist To 'Color' Bout

WINDSOR, Ont., March 8—(CP).—Jack Dempsey headed for New York today after refereeing a wrestling match here last night in which Bull Montana defeated Cowboy Hughes.

During the match the former heavyweight champion of the world added color to the show by hitting Montana as the wrestler made motions of attacking him.

The same act Monday night at Detroit earned Dempsey a reprimand from Detroit's prosecutor McCrea, who objected to him hitting wrestlers.

"I was paid $1,500 to put on a show and I did," Dempsey replied. "Nobody was hurt and everybody seemed to enjoy the show."

McCrea also objected to wrestlers throwing their opponents out of the ring.

"If you keep up this sort of thing there may be a murder warrant, through some spectators being killed," he said.

NIAGARA FALLS RALLY IN THIRD TO BEAT THE PETES, 5 TO 3

Cataracts Count Five In Third After Trailing Two Frames In Exciting Senior Puck Fray

A last-period drive gave Niagara Falls a 5-3 win over the Petes here last night in an O.H.A. senior "B" round-robin final series struggle before 1,800 fans. Trailing 3-1 halfway through the third stanza, the Cataracts roared through the locals to come out on top for their second straight series victory.

The Petes looked the better team for over two periods, racking up a goal lead in the initial inning and making it 2-0 to end the second. But they fell before a furious Falls' drive in the final ten minutes, with the visitors ganging up hotly to tie the count and then tally two more to make it safe.

Play was fast and exciting throughout, rugged but fairly clean. A fight broke out in the middle heat between Allan and Nichol, with several other players joining in, the police coming out on the ice to halt hostilities—and both offenders drawing major penalties. Of the 11 penalties passed out by Referee Houston, the Petes drew five.

Both Speedy

There was little to choose between the squads most of the route, both showing fast, smart hockey, with the Petes having a slight bulge on their rivals for two frames, but the Falls cashing in on their senior "A" experience during a power-drive in the third. They notched all five in the final eight minutes of play, a couple coming on partial breakaways. The Petes muffed several fine scoring chances the first half of the game, as the big crowd roared at the heart action of the opposing squads.

Nichol went best of the Petes' forwards over the entire route, while Tompkins, Kingdon and Creighton showed good hockey in spots. Gray and Weir proved steadiest of the defencemen and Harding went good in goal, having little chance on those scored in the hectic third heat. Mowers shone in the winners' cage, with Dyte, Grigor, Mason and Brenchley all flashing fine hockey most of the fixture.

Petes Get One

It was fast and hard hockey in the first frame, with some heavy checking at the start, the Petes pushing play a bit. Nichol scored the only counter on a neat try, faking a pass to open up the defence and step in on Mowers. Grigor came close, and then Gardner got the gate for charging, Brenchley scoring after the bell. The Falls tored in hard till Dyte got the air for tripping. A Coughlin-Nichol rush was close and the latter later had his leg hurt when Murray charged him and got a penalty. Harding robbed Morrison and the Petes looked a little better, Gray and Creighton pulling a dangerous drive. Weir was waved off for boarding at the finish.

The Petes' first line outplayed the Cataracts early in a hot and close second frame, but both goalies had some tough ones to boot out. Starr sifted through for a nifty crack and, when Murray was chased for tripping, the locals swarmed in dangerously, but Mowers was hard to beat. A fight broke out betwen Allan and Nichol and both drew majors when order was restored. Tompkins almost notched one on a fast rush and the Petes kept boring in. Tompkins got credit for a goal, being the last local to touch it, when Dyte kicked it into his own net when trying to clear. The latter got the finger for boarding and the Petes pressed till Tompkins was sent over the boards for tripping near the end of the canto.

Go To Town

Grigor made Harding hop to open the exciting third chapter and Mason came close on another try. The Falls ganged up most of the period but play was even till halfway through. Murray scored their first one on an angle shot on Morrison's pass, just picking a corner of the twine. Murray drew a penalty then for boarding and the Petes tore in hard, Gardner scoring in a scramble. The Falls protested it and changed the goal-umpire. With all back again, the Cataracts put on the power and had Harding and his buddies on the jump in a furious frame. Gardner went off for slashing and the visitors scored, Dyte driving in a sizzling angle shot on Brenchley's pass. With Gardner back, the Falls continued to press and Mason nearly beat the goalie. Nichol tore down and had Mowers on the jump but Grigor came right back on a fine lone rush to go in close and tally the tying marker. A Starr-Gray drive was dangerous but the visitors went ahead late in the period when Brenchley, knocked over, got up in time to take Morrison's forward pass pull Harding out for a neat one. The Petes ganged up but Mason scored on a breakaway just before the gong.

The teams:

Falls: Goal, Mowers; defence, Murray and Dyte; centre, Grigor; wings, Mason and Croucher; alternates, Allan, Benchley, Pavone, Morrison and Greenwood.

Petes: Goal, Harding; defence, Gray and Gardner; centre, Kingdon; wings, Tompkins and Star; alternates, Creighton, Coughlin, Nichol, Weir and Crowe.

Top Notch Bowlers Of Peterborough City League

Top notch bowlers at the Duffus Bowling alleys this season is the Knights of Columbus team, whose members are shown here. These stalwarts have led in scoring over every section of the city league, and have handed in consistently bigger scores than any other team that ever bowled in Peterborough, officials claim. They average, as a team, close to 3,700 points for three games, an have never yet fallen below 3,300. From left to right the members are Tommy Miller, Frank Wood, Len Anthony, Vince Anthony, Bud Weese, and Fred Martin, captain. Martin is topping the others in scoring with a current average of 250 a game, with Weese second at 241. All are over 230. Weese is the bowler who had eleven straight strikes at the alley the other night for a score of 441. (Examiner Staff Photo.)

TRAINING CAMP BRIEFS

(By The Associated Press)

NEW BRUNSFELS, Tex.—Merril May, young third sacker from the Newark club of the International league, has made a hit with Doc Prothro, the Phillies new manager. "Looks like he's the one to fill the hot corner," said Prothro.

LAKE CHARLES, La.—The only new comers to the Athletics camp who have caught Connie Mack's eye so far ,the old manager says, are Joe Gantenbein, rookie from Toronto, and Bill Lillard, brought in from the Pacific coast. "It's early, of course," Mack says, "but they both look good." They're third base candidates.

LAKELAND, Fla.—Detroit Tigers' first casualty of the season is Roy Cullenbine, young outfielder getting his second trial in the big time baseball show. Cullenbine has some trouble with his leg muscles, but the Tiger trainers say it's not serious and he is working out regularly.

BRADENTON, Fla.—With six new Boston Bees in the swarm, Casey Stengel today ran his charges through the first "scrimmage" of the season because his boys have been doing so well. The newcomers in the lineups were outfielders Al Simmons and Jimmy Outlaw, shortstop Eddie Miller, third baseman Johnny Hill, first baseman Buddy Hassett and catcher Al Todd. "They've been working hard and I want to see them in action," said Casey.

Bruins Shut Red Wings Out By 3-0 To Close Cup Chances; Canadiens Hold Rangers 2-2

By Jack Calder
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Even Detroit Red Wings, among the hottest of the late-season bidders, couldn't put a temporary halt to Boston Bruins' dash towards the National Hockey League championship when the Bears smelled the melon.

The Bruins trod to the title last night with a 3-0 victory over the Red Wings, who had won their last three starts and were beginning to threaten the fourth-place Toronto Maple Leafs and the third-place New York Americans. The result removed any mathematical chance that the Bostons would miss the Prince of Wales Cup, which most people conceded to them long ago.

Last year, under the old two-group set-up, the Bruins won the United States division handily but were upset in the league title series by Toronto's Canadian division champions. Some club may spill them in the six-team playoffs for the Stanley Cup and the world championship, but Art Ross' skaters have proved themselves best in the league over a stretch.

Bill Hollett

Bill Hollett, not one of the club's more prolific scorers, led the way to the clinching victory with two goals. It was ironic, perhaps, that Tiny Thompson, a mainstay of the Bruins when they won the Prince of Wales Cup in other years, was playing goal for Detroit.

Tenth Shutout

Hollett pushed a long shot past the old master in the second period and added another goal in the third, after Porky Dumart had made the score 2-0. In Boston's nets, Frank Brimsek recorded his tenth shutout of the season.

Now the main scrambling will be for the rest of the playoff positions. New York Rangers are the only other team to have made sure of a place in the Stanley Cup series.

The Rangers were held to a 2-2 at New York last night by the driving Montreal Canadiens, who came from behind twice to force the game into overtime. The Habitants, clinging to the sixth and last playoff spot, made their margin over the last-place Chicago Black Hawks 3 points.

Armand Mondou

The league's leading point-maker, Toe Blake of the Canadiens, added to his total by punching a third-period goal that matched Lynn Patrick's score in the first. Dutch Hiller gave the Rangers a 2-1 lead midway through the third but three minutes later Desse Smith tied it up again with the aid of Armand Mondou.

Remember When—

Manager Leo Dandurand of Montreal Canadiens set a National Hockey League precedent 16 years ago to-day by suspending Sprague Cleghorn and Billy Coutu, two of his own players, for rough tactics following a game with Ottawa Senators in which Lionel Hitchman suffered a concussion. Ottawa won the league title and the Stanley Cup that year.

Yanks Limber Up Looking Bigger, Better

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 8 — (AP). — New York Yankees are here again, gradually limbering up their swelling muscles and preparing to put on their annual rabbit drive in the American league. It may just be an illusion, but they look bigger even than they did last fall while they were belting Chicago Cubs about in the world series.

Joe McCarthy isn't much worried about the prospects of winning his fourth straight world campionship although he says he would do a certain amount of worrying even if his club was 30 games in front of the field.

As a matter of fact, Joe does have one slight problem to iron out before the season starts. He must decide whether Charlie Keller, the superrookie from Newark, should take over left field entirely or divide the position up with George Selkirk, the veteran outfielder from Hamilton, Ont., who played it most of last season.

The best opinion around camp is that Keller, who hit .365, in the international league last year, will open the campaign as a result and add punch to the Yankee batting array. If that's not murder it's at least manslaughter. Keller is a husky kid, the "Yankee" type, with big joints. He bats left-handed, but is a dead left-field hitter.

The remarkable Lou Gehrig, possessor of the consecutive game record and on the verge of eclipsing several "total" marks for runs and hits set in the long ago by Ty Cobb, is romping around first base every day and working himself nearly to exhaustion.

Rotary Offers Spirit Of World Amity

CAMPBELLFORD, Mar. 8. — "To be abruptly bundled out of those countries where it was so important that Rotary be represented was the experience we have suffered in the totalitarian states," declared N. Alex McColl in an address on "International Understanding" delivered at the luncheon to Rotarians here on Monday. "We have frequently said that there is little or nothing that we can do to further this object of International Understanding since we are but a small organization, too far from all foreign boundaries to have any opportunity to give any assistance in improving the spirit of friendship with nationals of other countries.

As two-thirds of all Rotary Clubs have an average membership of less than fifty, the speaker suggested that it would be possible to establish a relationship with half a dozen of the clubs in the various parts of the world and exchange ideas interesting pictures, editorials, etc. The language problem itself would not be so difficult since the English language is spoken by some 500,000,000 people in the world and many others have to use it to do business with the countries within the Empire and the United States. "It is my belief that we would get a hearty response to this especially in Canada since it is still a young country filled with romance about which the rest of the world is eager to learn.

Cruelty Incredible.

"During the last couple of years I have frequently expressed my total inability to understand anyone ordering mass cruelty and even murder for other human beings. In our own daily life we find there are few who would not nearly run into a ditch to avoid running down some silly old hen which decides it must get over the road before you pass. Who are these men in the totalitarian states who have so little of that feeling we thought common to all humanity? The 'who' is not so important as the 'why.' A certain powerful faction of the population of their respective countries must have thought why they helped these dictators to seize power. It may have been that the respective leaders were the less of two evils.

Few of those who put these dictators in power ever expected them to arrogate to themselves so much power to take such drastic measures to continue themselves in power, or to add territory to their nations. It may be that it is all done for love of country, suggested Mr. McColl, who reminded his listeners of how many did their best to kill Germans twenty years ago as they fought in the trenches, while "fair feminine hands at home were making shells with a fervent prayer they would cause death and maiming to the Germans and our other enemies." Can we deny that this "love of country" can be the motive which is fostering these tyrannies, murders, and cruelties by the dictators, no matter how insane that belief may be.

Speaking of the occupation of a part of Germany by Canadians following the Armistice in 1918, the speaker claimed that the people they found there would not betray their friends and murder them in cold blood; thy would not beat women and children and torture them in cold blood. "They who so frequently shared their food with us who came as conquerors to take over the best parts of their homes, would not allow others to starve let alone deliberately deprive them of food. If they have had any part in the present policies of the Government it has been because they were forced to do so as part of a huge machine welded together by fear and force, lies and propaganda, fanaticism and ignorance.

Contacts Essential.

In our own community we have people of many different races represented and we are all friends together. Their friends and relatives in countries of their origin are just the same as they are. By the same token we could be friendly with the people in these various countries if we had the chance to meet them. There lies the solution of international strife and disagreement.

"Talk as man to man," urged the speaker, "and if given a chance at all you can solve problems by the application of common sense and good feeling. In a recent article in the 'Rotarian,' Paul Harris wrote:

"Friendliness is the motive power of Rotary. Friendliness is more powerful and smooth running than any Deisel engine ever built. Friendliness is a virtue in its own right; it begets other as well. Neighborliness, kindliness, tolerance, and usefulness are children of friendliness; they attack enemies of the social order, not only banishing care, worry, envy, greed, suspicion, fear, and anger, but also stimulating hope and courage. They are the solvents of labor problems, and given a chance, would be solvents of international problems as well.' And this spirit must walk hand in hand with that sound advice of John Nelson when he was president of Rotary International: 'Rotarians should leave their yardsticks at home when travelling abroad,' or as Mr. Neville Chamberlain puts it: 'We are not concerned with the form of government or the other countries.' If we maintain in our hearts fellowship for the individuals of all other nations, we crush down enmity on our part and are prepared to proceed with that advancement just as soon as we have an opportunity to communicate that friendship to them.

"I believe that democracy was never tried out in any of the totalitarian states, and that the present is only a stage in the progress from tyranny to democracy. Keep a friendly spirit toward the citizens of those countries for some day and it may be nearer than we expect, they will be offering th hand of friendship and then Rotary will justify itself by advancing international good will and peace through a world of fellowship, of business and professional men united in the ideal of service."

Judgment Is

to make up a deficit in the store cash.

Stephens went on to tell that on the night of December 12, when a fire took place in the Pattenick store, some one had attempted to break into the store from the rear, and had apparently succeeded. A slipper had been found in the alley next morning. He told the court he had slept in the store for two nights following this break-in.

Book-keeper Testifies

Gerald Butler, Toronto, bookkeeper for the Pattenick chain of ten stores described the shortages that had occurred in the store stock.

"I believe the shortage existed from November 16 on and Herman kept juggling cheques from his personal account to store account to balance the shortage, at the same time taking money from the store till".

"Robbing Peter to pay Paul" commented the Judge.

Yes.

Has Pattenick ever received the $308.00, receipts from the store for the Saturday before the fire, and which were said to have been burned, asked Mr. McElderry.

Not yet.

But Monday's receipts hidden in the cellar by Stephens were found intact.

Yes.

Herman Takes the Stand.

Called in his own defence Herman said he had worked for Pattenick with interruptions from 1931. He became manager of the local store in June, 1937. Up to that time he had been assistant manager. An inventory had been taken of the stock in January, 1937, but the figures were never made known to him. On January 10, 1938, another inventory had been taken and revealed that during 1937 there had been a stock shrinkage of $1,378.00.

What happened then, said Mr. Singer.

Mr. Pattenick marked off $1,000 and I had to assume responsibility for the payment of $300 of the $378 balance, said Herman.

Did you pay it back?

Yes.

In August, 1938 there was another inventory taken. Was there a shortage or a surplus then?

I never knew. I wasn't told until the preliminary hearing that there was a shortage of $200.

There is another shrinkage now?

Yes.

How do you explain these shortages?

Our gross turnover in a year approximates $45,000, and this would mean about 60,000 individual sales. If times are good, the shrinkage is small, people can afford to buy and won't shoplift. Business was good in 1937, but in August of that year we had a bad strike in the city, many were out of work, and our shrinkage grew steadily extending into 1938. On Saturday we have as high as eight extra girls, and I would suggest that some of these might not have been honest. I took losses on damaged goods so as not to lose customers. In this way I lost over $200 a year.

Was there any suggestion of dishonesty when the big shortage occurred?

Well, we had an awful argument, and they thought any shrinkage over a thousand dollars a year was outrageous.

Herman explained that he was annoyed by letters from the bookkeeper about petty errors and held back making deposits until he was sure everything tallied. Pattenick, he said, knew we kept money on hand to cash workmen's cheques on pay nights. He said he had a wife and two children, a girl 6 months old and a boy 4 years. His wife worked at the store making alterations to clothing and earned about $7 a week. His salary was $24 a week.

Admits Untruth.

Under questioning of the Crown Attorney, Herman admitted he had made an untrue statement under oath to Inspector Saville of the Fire Marshal's Department about who opened the store in the morning.

"In other words you committed perjury so that Stephens would not be reprimanded for doing work you should have done?"

Yes.

Why did you assume responsibility for the paying of the $300 of the $378 shortage, in January of 1938?

When I came to Peterborough I had nothing, but with a steady job I was able to furnish a home, and keep my family as they should be kept. If I had refused to pay the $300, Mr. Pattenick might have fired me, and I would have lost everything. As it was, he helped me by giving me a raise in pay to $30 a week, and I repaid the money by only taking $24 a week out of the receipts.

Herman maintained his stand despite strong cross-examination, that he had put $306 in the cellar of the store on the Saturday preceding the fire and was unable to find it after the blaze. He was positive, too, that Pattenick had not lost a cent through his manipulation of cheques for the benefit of his friend Sofarow, who he said had always came through with money in time to retrieve floating cheques pening in other parts of the world," the Prime Minister said.

Heated Foreign

"I am happy to say that, more particularly in the last day or two, the skies seem to have cleared very considerably.

"During the earlier period it was still doubtful how the civil war in Spain would end. In all the capitals of Europe there was, I believe, very great fear as to how the situation might develop over the whole of Europe. But certainly, since that situation has cleared up to the extent it has, there has been very great relief in, I believe, all the foreign offices of Europe."

Just Strategy?

Dr. Manion said Mr. Mackenzie King had simply called him to his office in order that he would be able to say he had done so. He should have called in all Opposition party leaders at the time of the Munich crisis last September as Premier Chamberlain had done in England. He charged Mr. Mackenzie King with trying to frighten the House with a "phantom of war" last Wednesday when there was no basis for such a fear, in order to avoid answering questions as to whether he approved the granting of defence contracts to Government "pets."

The Prime Minister, he argued, had lectured the Opposition for holding up Government business, and was now proposing to shut off discussion on private members' proposals which were more important than the Government measures before the house.

Such "futile arguments," he said, led to "stirring up of feeling against democracy," to the Leadership League of C. George McCullagh, publisher of the Toronto Globe and Mail, and to the "new demagogism" of Hon. W. D. Herridge, former Minister to Washington.

Characterizing Mr. Mackenzie King's plea for progress in the session as "clap trap and humbug," the Conservative Leader challenged the Government to introduce some important legislation touching the problems of youth, unemployment, debt and taxation.

Private members had been allotted more time this session than since 1932, said Mr. Mackenzie King. The United States Trade Treaty and the Defence Purchasing Board Bill were highly important measures, and the Government was anxious to get them through, but until the treaty was adopted there was no necessity of introducing other measures.

The Prime Minister said he had never used the word "war" in speaking about the business of the House last Wednesday. But he had nothing to retract from his assertion that members should get on with their business as they might have more serious matters to consider.

Difficult Position

"I suppose there is no more difficult position in which a leader of a government can be placed to know just how far it is advisable to go in warning members of parliament or the country of a situation as it exists, and how far it is wise to remain silent," said Mr. Mackenzie King.

"I remember last September that Members of the Conservative Party in this country were pretty strong in their attack upon myself. They said that knowing that a situation which was coming along was going to be very critical, I did not take the country more into my confidence and tell them to be prepared for an emergency.

"As I say, it is a very difficult position in which a leader of an administration is placed, because one has great responsibility. However, there are ways of seeking to meet it. While one cannot always take the entire House into his confidence, Parliament has provided a means of courtesy whereby the leader of the government, should he regard a situation as being serious, may call in the leader of the opposition.

"I did that with my Hon. friend the leader of the opposition since this house opened this year. Some dispatches which I was receiving were of so serious nature that my colleagues and I felt that they ought to be shown to the leader of the opposition. I asked him if he would come to my room and allow me to show him what the government and I had received with respect to conditions as they were developing in Europe, and what we must be prepared for in the event of matters taking a certain turn.

"How my Hon. friend, in the light of the information he then had, could chide me for having made the remark that I did the other day to Hon. members with respect to hurrying on with business because we might have some more important matters to consider, I have yet to understand.

"I say to my Hon. Friend, the Leader of the Opposition that I question very much if he would have wished to receive dispatches which were more serious than those which I showed to him."

Just a Red Herring.

In reply, Dr. Manion said Mr. Mackenzie King had mentioned the international situation, "supposedly critical," in order to "draw a red herring across the trail," in the Defence debate last week. The situation was no more critical then than for months past.

"I will now say what I intended to say on some other occasion when the question of the September crisis comes up," said Dr. Manion. "I think it should be discussed in the near future.

"The right hon. gentleman neglected his duty to this country in not calling in the leaders of all parties. He should have invited the leader of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation and the leader of the Social Credit party: We should all have been called in, to share the responsibility if for nothing else.

"In that regard I was more fair to him than he was to me. I offered no criticism of him at that time. I played the game fairly and well as a Canadian and offered no criticism. But he waits until January; the date is given from memory, but I think I am right.

'He called me in one day and showed me some of the despatches. He has not called me in since. I know his tactics. He wanted to be able to stand up in this House and say that on one occasion he called me in. That is his slippery way. I know his tactics, his slippery tactics; I know them just as well as he knows my tactics."

Rumanian Church Loses Patriarch

BUCHAREST, Rumania, Mar. 8—(AP). — Death of Miron Cristea, Premier and Patriarch of the Rumanian Church, brought a period of national sorrow to-day—and a new Premier who was hailed as a political "strong man."

Three hours after the death of Dr. Cristea at Cannes, France, last night, King Carol named as Premier, Armand Calinescu, lawyer, educationist, and vigorous champion of law and order in government. Calinescue had been Vice-Premier, Minister of War and Interior. He retains the latter two posts.

To more than 10,000,000 Rumanians the 69-year-old patriarch was Christ's Vicar on earth. Another 8,000,000 in Rumania did not recognize him as religious leader, but venerated him for the moral authority he brought to the government.

Farm Products Control Act To Have Teeth

TORONTO, March 8 — (CP). — Legislation for the greater effectiveness of the Farm Products Control Act, Ontario's substitute for the ultra vires Federal Natural Products Marketing Act, will be introduced at the session of the Legislature opening tomorrow, Agriculture Minister Dewan said today.

In line with a recent Privy Council decision upholding the British Columbia Marketing Act where it authorized Boards to collect licence fees at stated periods from growers and processors under marketing schemes, the Ontario Act will be amended to enabel local boards to impose and collect such fees.

The Act will also be changed to provide that the amount to be levied on products coming under the Act may include an appropriation for advertising, something about which there has been doubt.

Penalties under the Act will be stiffened to prevent processors of products coming under it, profiting from its disregard.

A test case lats year in which the price-fixing clause for cherries was upheld resulted in a fine being imposed on a canner who purchased cherries at a lesser price than that fixed under the marketing scheme.

However, the maximum fine was not as large as the difference between the fixed price and the price paid for the cherries, leaving the processor profiting from his violation.

An amendment to be sponsored by the Government will provide that in addition to any fine, a processor must pay into the court the difference between the fixed price for the product and what he paid for it.

Hon. Robt. Weir

1882, son of Robert and Jane Weir, the one-time school teacher turned to farming in the Canadian West, because of ill-health and became one of the Dominion's most successful farmers. He was a leading breeder of hogs, Percheron horses and Hereford cattle and one of the best known scientific agriculturists on the prairies.

He turned to politics in 1930, when on July 28 of that year he was elected to the House of Commons as member for Melfort. Right Hon. R. B. Bennett made him Minister of Agriculture in his Conservative Government.

The Natural Products Marketing Act, which provided for a government-controlled marketing organization, was introduced in the House of Commons by Mr. Weir in 1934, but the act was found unconstitutional when, with other Bennett legislation, it was tested before the Privy Council.

Throughout his career he persistently fought the drought menace on the prairies. One of his schemes called for tree planting to protect live stock and to shelter ponds, lakes and other water reservoirs. When he was defeated in the 1935 general elections by N. McLean, Liberal, he turned again to active farm work.

From the topmost limbs of a tall pine tree on Armour Hill Tuesday three crows sent their raucous calls floating out across the city. DUCKS INCREASING

The colony of small ducks in the Otonabee River near the Hunter street bridge has been increasing during the last few days. Many people have stood for a time to watch the ducks frisk in the icy water along a rim of shore ice during the freezing weather of the past few days, wishing perhaps that they were as immune to the cold as the ducks.

MINOR IMPROVEMENTS

Dr. G. Murray Fraser, M.O.H., in his annual report to the Board of Education, recommends that minor improvements be made in several of the public school toilets and wash rooms, and that daily attention be given to the conveniences to ensure cleanliness. The report was referred to the property committee, who will report back to the Board on any changes which they may recommend.

MONTH OF MILD WEATHER

March is the month of contradictions according to grocery store owners who must protect stocks of chocolate bars from the hot sun with newspapers or the candy would melt, while outside a biting wind gives a genuine Wintry touch. It was noticed Tuesday that anyone sitting in the sun inside a south window found Old Sol's rays so warm, they had to move.

At a meeting of the Belleville council this week the Softball Association asked for permission to hold a tag day to raise funds. Would Show Kinsmen To General Public

A preview in London of the Fife wheat film "The Kinsmen," is appreciatively mentioned by Mary Goldie, correspondent of Saturday Night in a recent issue of the Toronto weekly. It was shown in Peterborough several months ago, and was highly commended by the local audience at St. Paul's Church. After briefly outlining the story of "The Kinsmen," Miss Goldie continued: "I came away wishing that the picture could be shown throughout the British Isles to the general public, and not just to the members of Bakery Industry in this country. If this could be done, it might serve as a lead for more and more of the same sort of films finding their way over here."

School Board Is Held Up Hour To Get Quorum

In the old days if a schoolboy was late he was given a taste of the old hickory to cure him of his tardiness, and today it is not unusual for a pupil to get a few swipes from a stout leather strap, but alas no fine nor penalty exists when members of the Board of Education fail to attend meetings on time as was the case last night. The meeting was scheduled for 7.45 and at exactly twelve minutes to nine the session finally got underway as Dr. G. R. Scott arrived to make a quorum.

Trustees Craw and Melton arrived at the Collegiate on time and a reporter was next in line. Then A. W. Richardson came under the wire two minutes late followed quickly by Secretary Harry Thompson who had been first on the scene but who had broken his glasses and had to get a second pair and another reporter. Three more were needed before business could proceed. V. J. McElderry, K.C. exhausted after a battle of words with one Herman who was being tried for sundry offences and which lasted from two in the afternoon until after seven at night was the next through the door.

Business lagged and the members put their overcoats back on but Dr. Moir took the steps in high gear as some were leaving to bring the total up to five and the hands of the official school time piece pointed to 8.15. Messrs Craw and McElderry edged towards the door, aided and abetted by two reporters who wanted to see the hockey match and as they stopped for a minute at the entrance, Harry Thompson hollered from the top of the stairs, "I've located Dr. Scott and he's on his way up".

Off For Third Time

So off came the coats for the third time and the members took their places around the table, while the scribes scowled their displeasure, Secretary Thompson who'se hustling was responsible for this postponement cupped his chin in his hand in the same pose as the "Thinker" at the window to watch for Dr. Scott. In the meantime the other five discussed everything from high speed engines to rutty roads, coughs, colds, march winds, and finally settled down to an argument on horse-power.

"Well" said Inspector Wightman from his seat in the corner, "the next most valuable thing to having knowledge is knowing where to find it" as he reached on the bookcase for an encyclopedia." A horsepower is the amount of energy required to lift 33,000 pounds one foot in one minute.

"You don't mean 33,000 pounds surely, said Dr. Moir.

Sure, sixteen and half tons, and, added Dr. Kenner it equals 748 watts, as he came to bat with a smaller edition of the encyclopedia, also plucked from the bookcase.

It's a good thing the people don't know how ignorant the members of the Board are on horse-power, remarked another member.

"Well we are not veterinarians" said Dr. Kenner with a grin.

The conversation then switched to sculpture and the fine pieces of work which adorned the library and had been fashioned by Katherine Wallace of this city.

"Who have you got lined up" interjected Mr. McElderry to the Secretary.

Dr. Ray Scott, he should be here any minute.

In less than a minute Dr. Scott breezed through the door, to make up the required quorum.

"Sorry gentlemen I am only an hour late.

Move Dr. Scott be chairman, said Trustee Richardson, second the motion added Mr. Melton . . . . and they were away. The meeting started at 8.48 and adjourned at 9.15 with all business transacted and not one decent story in the whole business for the disgruntled reporters, who had already missed more than a full period of the hockey match.

Justice must be done, and there still remains the the question of some punishment for tardy trustees . . . Suggestions will be welcomed.

CASES ADJOURNED.

Several charges of theft of trees from Crown lands in Dummer township which had been scheduled for hearing before Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C., in Norwood Tuesday were adjourned until March 21. They will be heard in Norwood.

Foreign funds are expanding Colombia's petroleum properties.

The Rambling REPORTERS

A SICK RADIO.

A week ago an Ashburnham man fell ill with the flu, and heeding the advice of his doctor, went to bed and stayed there. He had the radio moved beside his bed and obtained a good supply of reading matter, determined to combine a little pleasure with the enforced captivity. The first half day the radio worked fine, but on the following day when the man's temperature registered 101 he reached out and turned on the radio. No music came. His wife called to investigate said the tubes were glowing but still the radio refused to work, and for the balance of the week the house of gloom was minus any musical entertainment. On Monday morning as he was ready to go to work he switched on the radio from force of habit and, presto, the music swelled from the loud speaker. . . Radio men may have a perfectly simple explanation for the situation but the invalid is satisfied with his own theory that this flu germ is one powerful bug, and if it could put him hors de combat for a week, it could have the same effect on the music box.—McG.

Youth Sentenced 2 Months In Jail

Pleading guilty to a charge of committing an indecent act in the presence of a young girl, Henry Cummings, 20-year-old Young's Point laborer, was sentenced by Magistrate E. A. Gee in Police Court this morning to two months in jail.

Another charge of indecent assault was dismissed when the Crown offered no evidence.

Cummings told the Magistrate that he could write, but could not read and that his education had stopped at the second book in the Public School.

In his behalf H. S. Balfour pleaded for leniency. He said that the accused had had two serious illnesses and as a result his education and his mental development had been retarded.

Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry told the court that the case might easily have been more serious, only the arrival on the scene of an uncle of the five-year-old girl involved in th case preventing grave developments.

Rev. E. C. Moore of Young's Point addressed the court and stated that what was desired was not the punishment of the boy, but the protection of the public. He thought that the condition of the accused could best be improved by treatment in a proper institution.

Magistrate Gee expressed the opinion that the best course would be to send the youth to jail for a term, pointing out that he would be under the observation of the jail physician and could be given treatment if there were physical defects that required attention. He gave the accused a strict warning to behave himself when he had finished his sentence, remarking that a repetition of the offence would mean a term in the penitentiary.

Attendance Is Below 90 p.c. In City Schools

For the first time in several years attendance figures at the Peterborough Collegiate and for the public schools of the city dropped below the 90 per cent mark during the month of February, according to monthly reports from Inspector Wightman. In some schools the percentage figure was as low as 89 and Dr. G. R. Scott remarked that the totals would drop below that mark during March.

The Board approved action of the Property committee in granting an increase in salary to Fred Finnie, the increase to date from January 1st of this year. He will receive $100 more every year until a maximum of $1800 is reached and the allowance of $20 a month for the upkeep of his car will be carried on as usual.

Contracts Awarded.

In the absence of H. G. Walker, chairman of the Property committee, the report was read by W. A. Richardson and it set forth that a contract for alterations to the heating system at Queen Mary school had been let to P. G. Wallace of this city. A. J. Smith was given the contract to paint a portion of the interior of King George school.

Six contractors tendered figures on the work to be done to the heating system at the Queen Mary school it was learned to-day and the tender of P. G. Wallace, amounting to $1,300 was the lowest and he was given the job. The work consists of necessary alterations to the existing heating system to bring it up to the point of greatest efficiency. The other tenders submitted ranged from the low of $1,300 to the highest $1,848.

The contract calling for the painting of a portion of the interior of King George school attracted three tenders with the figure of $426.00 submitted by A. J. Smith of this city being the lowest and he received the contract. The highest tender received was $498.00.

More adequate dental service for children in the schools and more stress on the teaching of oral health was urged in a letter from the Peterborough Dental Association. The letter suggests that the dental survey now conducted once a year should be done twice yearly.

The Board decided to take no action on several letters advertising souvenirs and flags for the observance of the Royal visit to Canada next May.

Boys Honor Memory Of Late Principal

LAKEFIELD, March 8—(Special). —Flowers banked the little chapel at the Grove School north of Lakefield on Sunday last, when the student body and teaching staff of the school attended early morning service and communion on the first anniversary of the death of the beloved headmaster, the late Rev. Dr. A. W. Mackenzie, who passed away March 5, 1938.

Marking Visit Of King And Queen Is Discussed By Business Men

Peterborough's reflection of the welcome that is going to be blazoned along the royal route through Ontario next May when King George and Queen Elizabeth visit Canada was discussed speculatively last night by the Business Men's Association. Although this city is not on the itinerary Their Majesties will follow in eastern Ontario, the members felt that on such an historic occasion some special effort should be made by the community as a whole to participate in the spirit of loyal welcome to the King and Queen.

"It is going to be a very important affair for the children," Col. R. T. E. Hicks-Lyne said, "and while I would not wish to see the business men make undue expenditure for public decorations, still we should be careful in deciding what we are going to do especially in these times when our people are thinking so much more than ever about the freedom of their country, its traditions and so on."

Consult City Council

J. W. Geraghty suggested that the Business Men should consult the city council, enquiring whether they had any plans for Peterborough's celebration of the royal visit.

"Two-thirds of the city will likely go to Port Hope or Cobourg if there is going to be any reception at either place." G. W. Watson president, said.

Lacking definite information it was decided to find out what the council might be planning, and also whether any arrangements had been made with the authorities of Port Hope or Cobourg for the people of Peterborough to be given the opportunity of co-operating in their welcome.

The association has two or three other projects under way. One of them is a barbecue on Burnham's Point, but lack of experience in that form of outdoor entertainment is likely to lay it on the shelf. A day of aquatic sports in July is also getting attention, and it was said that if the city council is going to seed the Crescent street bank the spectators could be accommodated on the Ashburnham shore.

Award Plaintiff $34

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Mar. 8. — Owen Hoey, the plaintiff in an action brought against Roy Walker for the recovery of his salary, was awarded $34.25. The plaintiff claimed he had been engaged by Mr. Walker to assist him in purchasing cows for export to the United States, and was to have been paid at the rate of $2.00 for every animal purchased. His Honor Judge L. V. O'Connor disallowed the counter-claim of $22.60 entered on behalf of the defendant by his counsel, J. F. R. Douglas. Plaintiff's counsel was N. Alex McColl.

Plan Reorganizing Of Fish And Game

Ardent members of the Peterborough Fish and Game Protective Association are appealing to all sportsmen of the city and county to attend a general meeting that is to be held next Monday night. Election of a new president to succeed Fred Marshall, whose resignation was recently accepted, is probably the main business of the meeting, but it carries with it the possibility of a general reorganization, and a strengthening of the Association.

The county and city councils have appointed representatives to the Association, and it is confidently expected that they will be present for the first time next Monday night.

J. W. Geraghty recommended the Association to business men of the city at their meeting last night, and emphasized the importance of the conservation of fish and game to the lake district around Peterborough, and its attraction for tourists. He said that he had not heard where the meeting would be held, but further announcement would be made during the week.

In Prices Of Bacon, Eggs And Butter Peterborough Citizens Fare Well

The retail prices for food stuffs as reported in the Labour Gazette show strange differences. For instance sirloin steak is quoted from Belleville at 20 cents a pound while the price in Peterborough is given at 28 cents, in Kingston at 24.6 and in Oshawa 23.1. On the other hand pork prices were lower in Peterborough, breakfast bacon here averaging 31.9 cents a pound while the Belleville price was 32.2 and Oshawa 33.9. Kingston however, was the lowest of the four with an even 31 cents for breakfast bacon.

In the matter of eggs and butter according to the Gazette, Peterborough citizens fared better than the average for the district. Fresh eggs were quoted in Belleville at 35.3 a dozen and in Oshawa at 39.1 while the Peterborough price was 33.2. Dairy butter sold here at 22.9 cents and creamery at 24.8 while the corresponding prices in Belleville and Oshawa were 27.1 and 25.6 and 23 and 26 cents a pound.

150 Masons Attend Winter Picnic

Combatting against illness and a hockey game, the annual Masonic picnic drew nearly 150 men to the Y.M.C.A. last night to take part in a program of varied sports and entertainment.

G. H. Roper, general superintendent of the Y.M.C.A., said interest had been high and every contest keenly fought. The Royal Arthur Lodge teams seemed to have the edge over other branches of the Order in most events, but the Corinthians downed them in a volleyball contest that was so close a play-off game had to be played.

In bowling competition, Dr. A. M. Weldon's crack Royal Arthur team was victorious, with a score of 991. Its members were: E. L. Sackville, S. Cann, J. Cooper, B. Graham and Dr. Weldon. The same lodge captured first honors in billiards, and members of the squad were: Frank Phillips, Dr. A. M. Weldon, Bert Cutmore and Dr. G. R. Scott.

There was high interest and good playing in the volleyball contest, which ended a three-all tie between the Royal Arthur and Corinthian Lodges. In the play-off game the Corinthians won after close competition. Prime unusual factors of one game was the victory of the Corinthians over the Royal Arthurs by a score of 15-0. Seldom is one team blanked by another, particularly with such a high score by the winners. Spiking by Stan. Payne, Russ Kitchen and Jim Wharry was outstanding for the winners.

Bridge attracted a considerable number of Masons, but play was not in the form af a tournament. A ping pong exhibition was also featured without being in tournament form.

Prizes were presented by W. L. Ferguson, and refreshments were served. Motion pictures had to be called off when it was found impossible to operate the projection machine because of a break-down.

Motorist Runs Down A Jack Doing Forty Then Has Rabbit Pie For His Dinner

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HASTINGS, March 3—Although Jack rabbits are quite uncommon in this section of the country, Jack Brinklow chased one in his car one night this week and eventually ran over it. The next day, the rabbit was served as a delicious morsel for dinner.

Jack explained that he was motoring to Campbellford, and about half way on his journey the rabbit appeared in front of the car and kept running ahead of it. The race kept up for a quarter mile at forty miles per hour, until the jack decided there were lots other places to run than in front of a fast moving car.

When the jack started to take the side of the road, Brinklow stepped on the gas a little harder and pronto he had next day's dinner within his grasp with little effort and no expense. The animal weighed eleven pounds and dressed a little better than six pounds.

Defeat Of Dunkin Act Believed Turning Point In Career Of Flavelle In Peterborough

In a recollection of the late Sir Joseph Flavelle as superintendent years ago of the George Street Methodist Sunday School, W. H. Bradburn told the Examiner today that one Sunday afternoon Sir Joseph caught him eating an apple while the teaching of the young class was in progress. "He called me up to the front, and sent me outside to finish the apple. It was a dignified little reprimand, but he was quite firm about it."

"The defeat of the Dunkin Act was possibly the turning point in the business career of St. Joseph Flavelle," Mr. Bradburn suggested in a reminiscence of the Canadian Baronet and financier who died in Florida Tuesday morning. The Dunkin Act was a proposed legislative measure along the lines of the Scott Act, and directed against the liquor business.

"Sir Joseph Flavelle was an ardent temperance man," Mr. Bradburn said. "And he was an active temperance worker. But, just to go back a bit to explain how it eventually reacted against his business interests. He had a store on Simcoe street where the offices of the Utilities Commission are located, where the light and water consumers pay their bills. At that time Sir Joseph was a young man dealing in grain, oats and wheat and straw and hay. He also bought dressed hogs from the farmers, and firkins or tubs of butter. He had one of those things the cheese buyers use, something like an apple corer only longer. He'd push it down into a crock of butter and it would come out with a long round sample that he would pass along under his nose as he smelled it, and then he would take a bite of it to make sure of the flavor. The dressed hogs he bought were taken into the back of his shop where they were salted, or cured, I don't know exactly what the process was, and of course he would resell them.

Used Hotel Stables

Well, farmers used to come into town in those days in sleighs and wagons and buggies, and they used to put up their horses in the stables of the hotels. Every hotel had long stables for that purpose. Some of them are still standing, but they are put to some other use nowadays. Sir Joseph, I think, had the most of the business of selling hay and straw and oats to the hotelmen for feed for farmers' horses. I believe he sold quite a lot of the salted pork to the shanties.

When the Dunkin Act was before the people, Sir Joseph didn't hesitate to declare his temperance principles and took such an active part in that campaign, that after it was over the hotelmen cut him off and he couldn't sell them any more grain and feed. They said, I suppose, that he was trying to close up their business.

At any rate it meant a big sacrifice of the business he had been building up in those lines. His income declined as a consequence, and he finally decided to go to Toronto where he got a job with William Davies in the meat packing business. Senator George A. Cox had left Peterborough before him for the city, and as they had been friends here, and both prominent members of the Methodist church, it may be that Mr. Cox had something to do with Sir Joseph's move."

Started In Back Shop

In going to Toronto, the young Flavelle was not inexperienced in the curing of pork, and it seems now in retrospect that the business in which he became eminently successful actually had its foundation in the back shop of the Flavelle feed and grain store on Simcoe street, when the buying of dressed hogs from Peterborough farmers might have been regarded as merely a side line.

Probably, Mr. Bradburn did not intend this Flavelle story for publication, but the human interest attaching to that experience of a young earnest Peterborough business man who wasn't afraid of jeopardizing his immediate business future by advocating the principles of temperance to which he was devoted seems well worth quoting as a revelation of that time of the sturdy character of Sir Joseph Flavelle as a young man, who was no pussy-footing adherent of the temperance cause, but so loyal to his principles that he didn't hesitate to put them first even at the risk of serious loss of business.

Vatican City, March 8 (AP)

VATICAN officials said today that more than 250,000 persons are seeking admission tickets to the coronation of Pope Pius XII on Sunday.

One source said Cardinals were limited to three tickets each on account of the demand. Engineers estimated 150,000 persons would fill St. Peter's Piazza, and L'osservatore Romano said the Pontiff decided to be crowned on the balcony of St. Peter's in order to accomodate as many as possible.

School Festival On Friday Night

Some seven hundred Peterborough public school children will take part in the annual spring festival to be held in the Collegiate Institute Auditorium on Friday night, and it is expected the seating capacity of the hall will be taxed to the utmost to accommodate all who wish to be present at this most interesting event. The children have been working hard on the details of the program and are anxious to have their parents see the progress they have been making. The program will be largely vocal in nature, but will include as well some folk dancing, piano numbers and selections from the little orchestra that has been organized at Central School.

Urges Telephone Tolls Cut 20 p.c.

OTTAWA, March 8—(CP).—A request by Wilfrid Lacroix, Liberal member of the House of Commons for Quebec-Montmorency, for a 20 per cent reduction in telephone tolls throughout Canada has been entered with the Transport Commission.

In his submission to the board, Mr. Lacroix recalled that from 1930 to 1937 the active assets of the Bell Telephone Company had increased from $244,396,000 to $285,845,000. In the meantime the company had renewed its equipment to the extent of $103,627,000. Dividends paid by the company ranged from eight per cent to 7½ per cent.

The net revenue of the company in 1937 was $13,747,802, or approximately 17 1/3 per cent of its paid up capital, Mr. Lacroix said. Of that amount $7,634,863 was transferred to reserve and $6,122,939 made available for dividends.

In 1930 the company's pay roll for 14,509 employees was $21,688,004, while in 1937 these figures had been cut to 10,163 employees and $16,738,188 in salaries and wages.

Despite the depression, said Mr. Lacroix, the net assets had increased progressively from 1930 to $1937 by more than $32,000,000 while equipment replacements had totalled $103,000,000.

DEATH AT THE MANOR

By M. E. CORNE

CHAPTER FORTY-SEVEN

SOMEONE tapped lightly at the door. I started forward, but the detective forestalled me. "Sh!" he said. He opened the door and Daphne Witherspoon entered.

"Well?" she said. "Well?"

He motioned her to a chair, but she remained standing. He said: "Will you answer a question?" She regarded him warily. "Perhaps."

"You must answer it!" His blue eyes blazed into hers.

She said again: "Perhaps."

"Who was the man or the woman who suggested to your mother that she have a permanent wave?"

He shot the question at her and she moved backward. One hand flew to her throat. She grew deathly pale.

"I can't answer that," she said finally.

"So?" His lips curved into a faint smile. "Why did you take the bottle of beauty mask from the salon?" he asked softly. "Why?"

"I—I can't answer that."

"You have answered," McIntyre said. "You have answered."

"No!"

"Yes. You may go, Miss Witherspoon."

"You aren't—" she began and stopped. Her hand fell limply to her side. She had reached, I thought, the limits of her strength and endurance. "Very well," she said. She dropped her head upon her breast. She went away.

I faced Mac angrily. "Why must you keep on torturing her? Hasn't she borne enough?"

"You don't understand, Elsie. It was necessary to do as I did."

"Understand?" laughed mirthlessly. "Why should I understand? No one tells me anything!"

"Quiet!" he commanded. The door was reopening. Phil had arrived.

"Everything set?" he greeted Mac.

McIntyre nodded. "Where's Ellis?"

"Waiting downstairs."

"Good!"

I demanded, exasperated: "Will someone kindly tell me what this is all about?"

McIntyre placed his hands on my shoulders. "Phil and I have a job to do, Elsie. It's a serious job. You can't help us. You can only remain here in this room until we send for you. Is that clear?"

My annoyance increased. "Clear like mud!" I grumbled.

"Don't run a temperature, girl! We aren't trying to put anything over on you." He lowered his voice to a whisper. "There may be danger! Will you promise to stay here?"

"Oh, all right!"

"Good girl! Ready, Benson?"

"Ready! Sit tight, sweetheart." He kissed me lightly. "So long!"

I returned to my magazine. It was raining harder now, and the wind was blowing wildly. The clock on my bed table chimed eight.

I could not sit still. I threw the magazine into a corner and began to pace up and down the room. Where were Mac and Phil? What was the job they had to do? The serious dangerous job?

Eight-thirty! I could stand the suspense no longer. I moved toward the door. It was opening! Slowly! Opening! Mac McIntyre slipped into the room; Phil followed behind him.

"Well!" I exclaimed crossly, my heart bumping like a girl's in the first throes of puppy love, "if you have to come into my room every hour or so, the least you can do is knock!"

"Sorry, Elsie," Mac apologized. His forehead was moist and perspiring.

"We've been places, baby!" Phil added. "And we've been doing things!"

I was slightly mollified. "What places and what things?"

Mac wiped his forehead with the back of his sleeve. "We have the gun, Elsie—and the glove!"

"The gun? The glove?"

Phil drew something from his pocket. A glove with the end of the thumb out. There was a gun wrapped in the glove.

"What—what's it all about?"

"Never mind now, girl!" Mac refused to explain. "We have the missing pieces! Now for action!"

"Action!" I snorted. "This place is as quiet as a churchyard!"

"And will be quieter before it gets noisy," Mac said cryptically. He was doing something to the gun. He was taking bullets from the gun. He was putting other bullets in.

"What are you doing?"

"Playing games, Elsie." He wrapped the bullets in a piece of paper. "Take care of these, Elsie." He handed them to me and I dropped them gingerly upon the bed. "Ready, Phil!" he said, and folded the gun back into the glove. "Be sure you put it back exactly as you found it!"

"O. K., Mac." Phil slipped the glove into his pocket. He crept cautiously from the room.

"I'm going now, Elsie," Mac said some five minutes later. "Remember what I told you! Sit tight and don't leave this room!" And before I had a chance to complain of this command the door opened and closed and he had gone.

Nine-thirty! Ten! Ten-thirty! I had read every advertisement in every magazine in the place. I knew how to cure bunions, indigestion, halitosis, enlarged pores and athlete's foot, but I did not know the answer to the riddle of the gun and glove, or what Mac and Phil were up to in the silence.

Midnight! I was batty as a bedbug! My fingernails were but a memory! Promise or no promise, danger or no danger, I made up my mind to find out what was going on. I changed my pumps for moccasins. I sneaked the length of the hall. The policeman on guard at the head of the stairs regarded me dubiously but did not halt my progress. I crept down the stairs. The lower hall was as empty as the upper.

As I stood uncertainly, one hand poised on the banister, a man approached from the direction of the kitchen. At the entrance to the library he paused. I knew the man. I went forward. The man did not see me. He was opening the library door. He was intent upon something beyond that door. He looked inside the library. He looked inside for a long, long time.

Now I was quite close to him. I could see the cords in his neck. I could see the cords swell and swell until they stood out against his neck, red and angry. Still the man did not see me.

No warning bell of danger tolled in my brain. I knew the man. He was my friend. I moved behind him. I, too, looked into the library. A man and a woman were standing in the centre of the dimly lighted room. They were kissing. The man was Reginald Ainsworth and the woman was Della Craig.

The man breathed heavily. He breathed as if he had been running. As if he were choking. As if—his hand, his right hand, moved from his pocket upward. There was something black and shiny. He pointed the black thing to face the broad back of Reginald Ainsworth. Then, suddenly, the black thing made a noise. A loud noise like—like a bag bursting—like a gun going off! The noise sounded in my ears. My head began to swim. Round and round and round. The world went black. I knew no more.

The Stars Say . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Thursday, March 9

A PERPLEXING day, with some adverse configurations, is found in the ruling aspects. There may be peculiar or strained relations on the sentimental, domestic or social side of life, with much to overcome by patience and tact. Hard work may be required to move happily in all directions. It is probable that there may be distractions from workaday activity by anxiety in the purely private affiliations.

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves confronted by a year calling for restraint, patience, persistency and diplomacy to wrest harmony and happiness from certain harrassing or adverse conditions. These latter are mainly in the social, domestic or romantic relations.

A child born on this day may have a rather difficult disposition, with many conflicting sides. While inclined to be industrious and steady, it also may be restless, tempestuous and indulgent.

Dreams Contain Clues to Personal Problems

Interpret Every-Day Dreams

"I just had the craziest dream," you say.

"I was taking a bath, and suddenly the tub was on wheels, scooting down the busiest street in town, with me still in it!"

Disconcerting, yes. But who hasn't dreamed of appearing in public partly clothed? Curiously enough, this dream is fair proof that you're a very modest person, maybe a little too much afraid of not saying or doing the right thing.

Or some one may have entrusted you with a burdensome secret. Your dream takes this fantastic way of dramatizing your fear that you may accidentally betray a confidence.

Each of your dreams has a special meaning for you. Some are significant warnings from your unconscious mind. Others are just a harmless way of letting off steam after you've been under nervous strain.

Our 32-page booklet explains dream language, shows you how to interpret your dream adventures constructively.

Send 15c in coins for your copy of THE MEANING OF DREAMS to the Examiner Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

Looking Back

On This Date

On this date (March 8) in 1866 an incident took place at Fredericton without which union of the Provinces of Canada with Nova Scotia and New Brunswick could not have been possible. Hon. A. J. Smith resigned the Premiership and Hon. Peter Mitchell formed a new ministry. The change was to a certain extent a surprise because when Leonard Tilley, who had headed the New Brunswick delegation to the Quebec conference, asked for endorsation, he was swept out of office, all his ministers being defeated save one, and only three counties, Carleton, Restigouche, and Albert returning men pledged to the union cause. It looked as if New Brunswick had definitely rejected the proposed union.

Albert J. Smith formed an anti-union ministry with T. W. Anglin (father of the late Chief Justice Anglin and of Margaret Anglin, the noted actress) as his chief lieutenant. It soon became evident that the new Cabinet was not as opposed to union as believed. Meanwhile, Tilley and his supporters had been "educating the electors."

Hon. J. C. Allen, Mr. Smith's attorney-General was named judge—(he was afterwards Chief Justice of the province) and it was necessary to elect his successor in York County. Hon. Charles Fisher, who had been a member of the Tilley Cabinet as well as a delegate to Quebec, won a surprising victory.

The effect upon public opinion was immense. When the Legislature met in March, 1866, Governor Arthur Hamilton Gordon, who had been in England, told in the Speech from the Throne that the British Government, and indeed Queen Victoria herself, wanted New Brunswick to join Canada. That was enough for the Loyalist province and the Legislative Council passed resolutions favoring union. So many members of the Assembly changed their minds that Premier Smith resigned. The Governor dissolved the Legislature; Peter Mitchell, of Northumberland, formed a ministry, with S. L. Tilley as Provincial Secretary, while R. D. Wilmot, until then an anti-confederate, was given a portfolio.

Elections in May and June gave the Mitchell ministry a good majority, and the Quebec resolutions were ratified. Mitchell went to the Westminster conference which drew up the B.N.A. Act, as Premier of New Brunswick, although most historians give the credit to Tilley.

Peter Mitchell was one of thet original senators for New Brunswick and the first Minister of Marine and Fisheries of the Dominion. In 1872 he left the Senate for the House of Commons where he sat, with intervals until 1891. He died at Montreal in 1899, few of that generation, and fewer still of this, remembering that it was Peter Mitchell who brought New Brunswick into the Dominion.

Guests At Rectory

CAMPBELLFORD, Mar. 8. — Members of the Anglican Young People's Association were guests of Rev. T. S. Gault and Mrs. Gault following a tobogganing party held on Monday evening. More than twenty-five members gathered at the rectory early in the evening and after spending a joyous time in coasting on a neighboring hill returned to be provided with a delightful supper by the hostess, Mrs. Gault. An entirely informal evening was spent and concluded with a period of parlor games.

DOROTHY DIX

HALF the married couples in the world are bad husbands and wives because they do not know what qualities a good husband and wife should possess. They sin against each other through ignorance, not intent. Realizing this, a man and woman who have been married twenty-six years have worked out this code of the flaws and virtues for the guidance of married people.

According to them, the wife's flaws are: She won't have a family, doesn't want children; is often late for appointments; flirts with other men at parties or restaurants; is jealous and suspicious; uses slang and profanity; tells off-colored stories; smokes, drinks, gambles; exceeds allowance of family budget; correct husband's speech or actions before others; saves punishment of children for father at night; fails to brush teeth or bathe often enough; slouchy in dress; snobbish; too much concerned in keeping up with the Joneses; tells lies; is not dependable; poor housekeeper.

The wife's virtues: Never goes to bed angry, always makes up first; religious, sends children to church and Sunday school and goes herself; economical; thrifty; good cook, serves balanced meals; loves children, and desires a family; faithful and true to husband; sympathetic; is of same religion as her husband; often tells husband she loves him; is easy to live with.

The husband's flaws are: He stares at or flirts with other women while out with wife; compares wife unfavorably with his mother or other women; dislikes children and scolds them too harshly; belittles wife's opinion, her judgment or ability; boasts about his former girl friends and his conquests; is niggardly about money; refuses to give his wife an allowance and fusses about the bills.

The husband's virtues are: He gives wife ample allowance, or turns pay cheque over to her; remembers birthdays and anniversaries; has date with wife at least once a week; steady worker and good provider; carries adequate insurance for his family; often tells his wife he loves her; plays with children and helps them with lessons; attends church and urges children to attend Sunday school; shows wife attention and affection in public; is true to wife; makes home pleasant for the family; tries to keep wife equipped with modern labor-saving devices; gives wife real movie kisses, not a dutiful peck on the cheek; kisses wife when leaving for work or a trip. Any husband or wife who will check off his or her flaws or virtues according to this list can get a pretty good idea of what sort of husband or wife he or she is making.

A. K.

Good. And write your own, gentle readers. In their hearts every married man and woman have a list of the qualities they would like to have their wives and husbands possess, but they seldom even wonder whether they are coming up to the expectations of their own wives and husbands. Check up on yourself and see how you rate.

* * * *

DEAR MISS DIX—I am a widower, 50 years old. Recently I met and fell deeply in love with a charming woman of middle age. I loved my deceased wife, but never with such a love as I feel for this woman. But the trouble comes in here: In talking things over, to our mutual dismay we discovered that I went to school to her more than thirty years ago. That makes her seem much older than I, but she isn't, for she was a very young girl and I was a lad of 15. I remember at that time my mother died and when I went back to school my teacher in sheer sympathy kissed me on the cheek and that her kindness softened the blow of my loss. I grew up and married, but I never forgot her and, somehow, I feel that that love has always been in my heart ever since. Now we want to marry. Will the few years between us make any difference? Actually in health and spirit and looks she is years younger than I am. And what about public opinion?

FIFTY.

ANSWER:

If you stop to consider what the neighbors will say you will have no personal liberty whatever. No matter what you do, you can never please both the Joneses and the Smiths, to say nothing of the Thompsons, who live across the street. As David Crockett said, "Be sure you are right, then go ahead," and don't give a darn for the clatter of the folks about you.

After people are 50 the matter of age ceases to be a factor in marriage and it doesn't matter whether the man or the woman is the elder. The only thing that counts is whether they are congenial and will be pleasant companions going down the last stretch of the road.

Of course, two or three years' difference in age is negligible always, but I think it is unfortunate for a man under 30 to marry a woman much older than he is, and it is a tragedy for a boy in his teens to take a wife who might be his mother. Women age faster than men, so that a woman the same age as her husband in reality is older than he is.

Girls mature faster than boys. A man in the twenties is still a boy, with unsettled tastes, not knowing what he is going to develop into. But a girl is grown up at that age and she will never materially change. A woman loses her looks earlier, and that counts against her if her husband is still young and boyish. Moreover, a woman who is older than her husband cannot keep from bossing him and mothering him.

So for these and other reasons it is dangerous for a young man to marry a woman older than himself, but after 50 all of these objections are swept away. Then the man and woman both know what they desire in a companion and it does not matter which one has the most candles on their birthday cake.

* * * *

DEAR MISS DIX—I am a girl 20 years old in my junior year at college. My friends and family regard me as perfectly normal and I had the same attitude until recently, but now I have developed a strong dislike for any kind of work. I feel that if I had to earn my living in any manner I would either go insane or commit suicide. I enjoy sports, but the thought of work fills me with horror. Am I just lazy or am I temperamentally unfit for any profitable occupation?

LILLIAN N.

ANSWER:

Maybe you were born I. W. W. Lots of people have that tired feeling when it comes to work. However, you had best give yourself the benefit of the doubt and have a thorough physical examination made. It may be glands and not laziness.

GOODNIGHT STORY

By MAX TRELL

Knarf and Hanid, the two shadow-children, found their good friend, Jack Frost, sitting in front of his "Ice and Snow Workshop" behind the garden wall. He was whittling an icicle, which means, of course, that he wasn't very busy.

The shadows, who had seen Jack Frost very busy even since he first arrived last November, were surprised.

"Are you all finished with your work?" Hanid asked him.

"You're not going to leave us now are you?" added Knarf.

Jack smiled as he took off his white cap. "It's getting quite warm, I think. "Yes," he said the next moment, "I'm going to be leaving in a few weeks. I usually set out for my spring and summer vacation about that time."

Sorry He's Going

"Oh!—we'll be sorry to see you go," said Hanid.

"And the children are going to miss you. When you go there won't be any more sleigh-riding, and more ice-skating or any more pictures on the windows in the morning when they get out of bed."

"I'm not so sure that the children, or anybody else, really like me as much as you say," Jack Frost said. He smiled again as he went on whittling the icicle. "I don't really see why they should. It's true I put snow on the hills, and ice on the pond, and paint pretty frost pictures on the window-panes. But I also pinch toes and fingers with cold, and paint the tips of noses red. And when I go riding on the back of the North Wind, the warmest mittens and the thickest coverlets can't keep me out. No. I've heard lots of folks say that I'm a dreadful fellow, and they're glad enough to have me go."

"I also pinch toes and fingers."

Liked in Summer

But Knarf and Hanid didn't think Jack ought to go away thinking of himself like that. "Oh, no!" said Hanid, "everyone really likes you. I'm sure they do. And sometimes, in the middle of the summer, when everything is so warm, they often wish you would come back if only for a day or two. They really like you very much."

"Well," said Jack, smiling very pleasantly now, "you make me feel very good to say that. I'll go away cheerful now. And since you think I'm liked so much, I'll just go out riding tonight with the North Wind, and perhaps with the East and West Wind, too. I'll take along my last big bag of snow and spread it over all the hills and slopes. Then when the children go sleighing, they'll say: 'Jack is a merry fellow after all.' Yes—that's what I think I'll do. And I'll hang this icicle on the highest steeple in town. And when the sun melts it I'll be far, far away—up at the North Pole."

The missionary chosen for prayer was Miss Mary A. Tanner, a former Lakefield girl who is now stationed at St. Paul's Hospital in Hearst, Ont.

During the business discussion plans were made by the circle to serve the teachers and officers of the Sunday School at their meeting on March 15. The meeting closed with the Mizpah benediction. A contest on books of the bible followed. Refreshments were served, and thanks to the hostess was expressed by Miss Ethel Mills.

St. Andrew's Women's Association Meets

St. Andrew's Women's Association met in the ladies' parlors of St. Andrew's United Church on Tuesday afternoon with Mrs. H. Paige Rowell, president, in the chair.

Following the business period, Mrs. E. R. Shirley presided. The devotional period included a scripture reading by Mrs. M. Kerr, which gave a thoughtful message on Christ, the light of the world. A beautiful solo "Green Pastures," was sung by Mrs. T. Turner, with Mr. A. Hawley at the piano.

Mr. A. R. Kennedy, guest speaker, was presented by Mrs. Shirley. A remarkable word picture of a minister, introduced to the members as "John What's-his-name," during one of his calls in a sparsely settled section of Ontario, was given during Mr. Kennedy's address, in which he spoke of "buried men."

Thanks to those assisting in the program was expressed by Mrs. Rowell, and following the Mizpah benediction, members of Mrs. E. R. Shirley and Mrs. James Heffernan's group served tea.

David Livingston's Life Is Subject Of Address

Rev. F. W. Craik was the speaker on Tuesday evening at the Y.P.U. meeting in George Street United Church, and gave an interesting talk on the life of David Livingstone, which he illustrated with colored slides. Mr. Craik was introduced by Mr. Hugh Arnold, and at the conclusion of his talk was tendered a vote of thanks by Miss Norma Rennie.

The president, Mrs. C. R. Wasson, presided during a brief business session, and announced that the George Street Y.P.U. would journey to Havelock on March 21, to be the guests of the Havelock young people.

Miss Elsie Weiss was chairman for the devotional period, presented by the Christian Fellowship group. She was assisted by Miss Noreen Dunford who led in prayer, and Miss Audrey Oliver, who read the scripture. A delightful vocal duet was rendered by the Misses Marion Biggs and Gladys Mills. The meeting closed with the Mizpah Benediction.

We Noticed

. . . It's rather amusing, sometimes, to note what we women will do for fashion's sake, isn't it? The forecast made recently by exhibitors of new whims in costume jewelry was that women are going to hang fish around their necks—the fish to be of glass or colored composition, minnow-sized, and attached to link necklaces and bracelets.

. . . . If the fancy doesn't run to two-inch fish in crystal white or cyclamen, for instance, there's a bracelet strung with amethyst sea-horses. The sea has contributed much to this Spring's style news, incidentally.

. . . All manner of smal lsea-shell have been fashioned into decorative gadgets to add novelty to pre-Easter costumes. Smooth seashells about the size of a dollar and in the gay Spring colors have been made into clips. Small cone shells are linked into cluster clips, necklaces and bracelets.

CHECK YOUR REEFER!

By ALICE ALDEN

Your fashion ship won't founder on a reef if you go in for a reefer! Nothing sets off the figure like a slim, well-tailored coat. The newest version is lightly shaded, in delicately-tinted tweeds and smooth woollens. This untrimmed double - breasted model, featured by a fitted bodice, is of checked plaid in various lovely color combinations, including maple-brown, grey, amethyst, green, blue, black and white. A velvet collar and velvet buttons are dainty, softening touches. If you are going to visit the Fairs, include a coat like this in your travel wardrobe. You'll find it serving you well.

Dr. H. M. Yelland Speaks Of Hospital By-law

The Nicholls Hospital by-law, and the great need for a new hospital wing was spoken of by Dr. H. M. Yelland when he addressed members of the Women's Association of George Street United Church at a meeting in the board room Tuesday afternoon. Miss M. E. Elliott, president, presided, and opened the meeting with a poem entitled "Where Cross the Crowded Ways." The worship period was conducted by Mrs. T. Mark, and centred around the theme "Joy." A little poem illustrative of those theme, "God is in every Tomorrow," was also read.

The bible reading was taken by Miss Lillian Morrow from the first chapter of First Peter, and prayer was led by Mrs. Macfarlane. Several letters of appreciation for flowers sent were read by Mrs. W. McGee. For the look-out committee, Mrs. Percy Hetherington reported 13 calls, Mrs. F. Armstrong 78 calls. That many flower bouquets had been sent to the sick was reported by Miss Lillian Morrow. A beautiful solo, "Oh, Dry Those Tears", sung by Mrs. Charles Renaud, was accompanied at the piano by Mrs. M. C. Parr.

Thanks to the speaker and soloist was expressed by Miss M. E. Elliott. Announcement was made by Mrs. H. M. Yelland of a C.P.R. moving picture, covering the four corners of the earth, which is to be held in the Sunday School on March 24, and of a food sale to be held in conjunction with the April W. A. meeting.

Miss Ruth Holmes Describes Life in Japan

Miss Ruth Holmes of Toronto, a university graduate who taught for three years in a collegiate in Japan, and the daughter of a United Church missionary who returned on furlough last year from thirty-two years spent in missionary work there, spoke on Tuesday evening to an appreciative audience of Mission Circle members in the ladies' parlor of Murray Street Baptist Church.

Life in a girls' school in Japan, a home in Japan where the christianity of the husband had triumphed over Buddhist religion, and the story of a Japanese boy who forced his way upward to the position of vice-foreign minister to America, and is still a strong witness for Christ, in spite of a very difficult childhood, were stories of intense interest sketched for her listeners by the speaker.

The meeting was conducted by the president, Mrs. H. H. Graham. During the business period a letter from Miss Edith Mann, supervisor of Indian schools in the vicinity of Vizianagram, India, and an ardent missionary, was read, giving a vivid description of her travelling experience from village to village and the schools which she visited. Appreciation of the prizes made in Canada for distribution among her 830 scholars was expressed in Miss Mann's letter.

The ladies' quartette, Mrs. G. Stenton, Mrs. P. Johnson, Mrs. H. Scott and Miss M. Stenton, sang two fine hymns. Appreciation of the quartette numbers was expressed to the ladies, and to Mr. A. Collison, who accompanied them at the piano, by the president.

Bible readings were given by Mrs. Pettit, and prayer for the missionary fields during a period of dangerous and unsettled times was led by Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe.

A pleasant social hour was enjoyed at the close of the meeting, with group one in charge of arrangements. Tea was poured by Mrs. Moulton, and the lace-covered tea table was centred with a graceful arrangement of tulips.

Savory Cooking of England Need Not Be Indigestible

(By MARY MOORE.)

My paternal grandmother—and a noble Englishwoman she was—taught my mother and my mother taught me—how to make Meat Puddings. While they can be indigestible as many dietitians claim about much English cooking—they need not be.

The maid at my brother's house is an American and until she came to them had never heard of suet puddings or Yorkshire—but about twice a year my brother had a yearning for these old favorites and "Minnie" has to be coached—she is a fine cook, so wouldn't have the slightest change in the traditional manner of preparing them.

English Meat Puddings (Traditional Style).

SUET PASTRY: Put three cups flour in a bowl, 1 teaspoon salt, and ½ lb. finely chopped suet—it should be so fine it looks like meal. Mix these well together with the hand, then begin adding water to make a stiff dough. Roll out pieces of it to make a round about 7 or 8 inches in diameter. On one-half of each round place the filling (see below) and fold over the other half and seal edges by wetting them and folding one edge over the other to make it very tight—then wrap in floured, clean pudding cloth — a pudding cloth should be approximately 16 inches square—old cotton sheets make excellent ones—and tie with strings—winding the string around the whole length of the pudding — about four times.

Meat Filling for English Meat Puddings.

Since one pudding is provided for each person to be served and each pudding requires about 1-3 lb. beef, order 2 lbs. flank steak to serve six people. My father always liked kidney in them so my mother used to order 1½ lbs. flank steak and 1 lb. of beef or pork kidney. The steak is prepared by trimming off the fat if any, and thin skin it is sometimes sheathed in, and cutting into one-inch squares. This you drop into cold water. The kidney is trimmed free of the veinous portion in the centre and cut into inch squares and dropped into the cold water with the beef. Peel about 3 potatoes and 3 onions.

When pastry is ready dip the mixed meats out of the water, let them drain a little then place on one side of the rolled out dough—slice a little onion on top, add about ½ a potato cubed, sprinkle generously with salt and pepper, dot with butter, and close pudding — see above.

When puddings are wrapped drop them into a large kettle in plenty of boiling water, cover and let boil 3 hours. Have large platter ready when you are ready to unwrap them. You will find them full of gravy, well cooked meat, and a savory delicious meal. I advise serving salad and a light dessert at the same meal. The fact that the English do not do this is the reason puddings are labelled "indigestible."

Yorkshire Pudding.

This has become Canadianized, and is familiar to most of you— I give it here because this recipe is traditional and also my favorite one for this savory dish.

One half cup flour, ¼ teaspoon salt, 1 cup milk, 2 eggs. Put flour, salt, milk and eggs together in a bowl. Beat well with a Dover beater. There are three ways of baking Yorkshire Pudding. (1) Pour pudding around roast beef or pork in roasting pan with trivet removed and all but about 2 or 3 tablespoons of the drippings in pan poured off. (2) Remove roast from pan and most of the drippings and pour in uncooked Yorkshire Pudding or (3) bake in greased hissing-hot iron gem pans. Temperature should be about 425 to 450 to start—reducing heat after first 10 minutes to 350 deg. Fahr. English housewives often baste Yorkshire Pudding as it bakes, but this tends to make it soggy—rather than light and airy. Yorkshire pudding requires about 30 minutes in all to bake.

English Breakfast Scones

One cup flour, 1 egg, 2 tablespoons butter, ½ teaspoon each baking soda and cream of tartar, ½ teaspoon salt, a little cold milk or water.

Rub the butter into the flour and soda and cream of tartar. Stir in the well beaten egg and enough cold milk or water to make a very light dough. Roll out, cut into small rounds and bake at 500 deg. Fahr.

Just as we consider baking powder biscuits the test of a good cook—so does an Englishman regard his scones.

Spotted Dick

(Suet pudding with Currants)

One lb. flour, ½ lb. finely chopped suet, 1½ teaspoons baking powder, a good pinch of salt (½ teaspoon), a little cold water, 6 oz. cleaned and drained currants. Sift together the flour, salt and baking powder. With the fingers mix in the suet. Add just enough cold water to make a stiff dough—then add the currants which should be well dried. Roll into the shape of sausages, tie in pudding cloth (much smaller than Meat Puddings above but the same principle), fastening the ends with string. Drop in boiling water and simmer for 2½ hours. Accompaniment to this is usually molasses, jam or stewed fruit.

Trifle

The genuine and original recipe for trifle is very different than I knew it as a girl. This does not reflect on my mother's cooking, but on the sample of trifle we made at "Domestic Science" class in public school days. This version makes it only a party dish.

Four lady fingers, 1 dozen ratafia biscuits (little almond-flavored, almond-shaped morsels), 6 macaroons, ½ pint soft custard (see below), 2 oz. blanched and shredded almonds, a little grated lemon peel, the whites of 2 eggs, ½ pint whipped cream, strawberry or raspberry jam, sugar, ½ cup (or less) sherry or brandy, candied angelica or cherries to garnish.

Split the lady fingers in half and spread a layer of jam on each. Cover with the other half. Lay in the bottom of a glass dish, with alternate layers of macaroons and ratafias. Moisten this with sherry or brandy, sprinkle with the almonds and lemon peel, and cover with the cold custard. Top all with the whipped cream which has been folded together with the whites of eggs beaten with the sugar. Garnish with the candied fruit.

Devonshire Clotted Cream

When we are at our cabin in the summer and get our milk from the neighbouring farm I have made this —because the milk must be whole and unpasteurized for it. It is so good that every fastidious and venturesome cook owes it to herself to make it at least once in her life. You won't stop there if you do.

The milk is let stand 24 hours in water and 12 hours in summer — the pan then being put over low heat and remaining there until the milk is very hot—but it should never be allowed to boil—the more slowly the process is carried out the better—little rings and undulations appear on the surface of the milk when it is sufficiently scalded. The pan should be kept in a cool place until the following day—covered — when the clotted cream is skimmed off into pots or glass jar. The skimmed milk may be used for cooking.

Such well known English dishes as Beefsteak and Kidney Pie, Gooseberry Fool, Jam Tarts, Roly-Poly Pudding, Lancashire Hot Pot, Bubble and Squeak may be had if any of our readers cade to write for them.

Do You Know?

Glassware and china dishes will be bright and shiny if they are washed in borax water, without soap, and then rinsed and dried?

A circular skirt will hang evenly if it is allowed to hang from the waist band for a day or two before finishing it at the bottom? This allows the bias seams to stretch before evening off at the bottom, and the skirt will not be liable to sag after it is finished?

A cup of strong black coffee, to which the juice of a lemon has been added, will relieve a nervous headache?

A substitute for soap chips may be made by tieing up a whole cake of white soap in a clean cloth? When it is put in with the clothes the soap will soon dissovle.

MEN LOVE GIRLS WITH PEP

If you are peppy and full of fun, men will invite you to dances and parties.

BUT if you are cross, listless and tired, men won't be interested. Men don't like "quiet" girls. When they go to parties they want girls along who are full of pep.

So in case you need a good general system tonic, remember for 3 generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling thru" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps build up more physical resistance and thus aids in giving you more pep and lessens distress from female functional disorders.

You'll find Pinkham's Compound WELL WORTH TRYING!

IN MEMORIAM

AVERY. — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Walter Avery, who passed away three years ago to-day, March 8, 1936.

We often sit and think of him when we are all alone,
For memory is the only friend that grief can call its own;
Like ivy on the withered oak, when all other things decay
Our love for him will still keep green, and never fade away.

—Ever remembered by his loving Wife and family.

CONSTABLE.—In loving memory of our dear son and brother, Horace, who passed away March 8, 1935.

We, who loved you, sadly miss you
As it dawns another year,
In our lonely hours of thinking
Thoughts of you are ever near.

—Ever remembered by Father, Mother, Sisters and Brothers.

ROOKE.—In memory of Mr. F. C. Rooke, who died March 8, 1929.

He is gone but not forgotten,
And as dawns another year,
In our lonely hours of thinking,
Thoughts of him are always near.
Days of sadness will come over us,
Friends may think the wound is healed.
But they little know the sorrow
That lies within the heart concealed.

—Ever remembered by Wife and Family.

1,300 Rabid Hockey Fans Cram Militia Rink Until 3.20 a.m.–Only To See Team Beaten

MILITA, Man., March 8.—(CP).—Thirteen hundred rabid hockey fans crammed Milita rink until 3.20 a.m. to-day but the home-towners' tenacity was rewarded only with disappointment as Carman beat Milita 6-5 in 20 minutes of overtime to win the Manitoba intermediate title. Carman won the two-game round 10-8.

Referee trouble caused the delay in starting time, originally scheduled for 8.15, but the fans who began arriving at seven p.m. clung to their seats until the puck finally was faced off at midnight.

Arrangements for a referee from Brandon fell through and both teams insisted on a neutral official. Bill Webber, who managed Winnipeg Monarchs when they won the Canadian junior championship in 1937, was recruited to come to this south-western Manitoba town from Deloraine, but when Bill discovered he was to make the 50-mile trip in five-below zero weather on an open railway "jigger" he uttered an emphatic "no."

Finally, after the countryside had been combed frantically by telephone, Cliff Hart, a commercial traveller from Winnipeg and capable referee, was located at Virden, 50 miles north. Hart made the trip by snowmobile and arrived for a midnight face-off.

THE SPORTS ROUND-UP

By EDDIE BRIETZ

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

NEW YORK, March 8—(AP). — Florida wires say 30 minutes after newspapermen were shown that $5,000 contract Van Mungo signed Larry MacPhail tore it up and made out a new one for $7,500. . . . A Philly man (with plenty of yams) has offered to lay the dough on the line for 1,500 ringside seats if Louis vs. Galento is staged down there. . . . Some of the more rabid Cincinnati fans are trying to make world's series reservations already yet. . . .

Two weeks ago Mike Jacobs went to Florida with $2,700 in his pocket . . . . He gave his wife $300 for spending money, said yes to all touches, entertained at several fight conferences, paid his hotel bill and had a good time generally. To-day he came home with $2,300 and a lot of cheers for good old Hialeah. . . . Joe Gould went south at the same time with $1,400 in his kick, visited the hoss track and some of the gambling joints and wound up by putting the bee on his former meal ticket, James J. Braddock, for car fare home.

Some of the columns report a Miami elevator cutie conked Tony Galento for giving her a playful slap between the seventh and eighth floors. Ouch! . . . . That's Jack Doyle, the fighting thrust, knocking at the door again and what do you say we don't answer? . . . . The key hole gang must have got an ear full at the Landis-MacPhail-Mungo confab. . . . Three quiet gents, you know. . . . Everyone is agreed DiMaggio signed for $27,500.

After beating Don Lash over the two-mile route, Glenn Cunningham dashed into his dressing room, tossed his medal into a trunk and said: "Darn it, I've missed my plane.'" Mebbe he would have made it had he run a little faster for his time (9:11.8) was 13.8 off the indoor record. . . . Don Budge finished beating Ellsworth Vines Monday night too late to catch a train into New York for a 10 a.m. appointment. . . . Don's parents won't let him fly, so he thumbed a ride on a truck and bumped down from Montreal in time to fill his engagement.

Fitzgerald Cracks Down On Gambling

LANSING, Mich., March 8—(C. P.). — Governor Frank Fitzgerald said today Michigan State Police were under orders to clean up gambling in the state.

Previously, Fitzgerald had insisted that gambling was a local problem for County Sheriffs and Prosecutors. Monday he said that the Sheriffs had had enough warning and it was time for the State to act.

"Comment on the significance of this statement is unnecessary," Fitzgerald added. "The action of the State Police will speak for itself."

Oscar G. Olander, commissioner of the State Police, sent notice to all posts to start cleaning up their districts.

"This means that we will seize slot machines and make raids on gambling places in co-operation with local police," Olander said. "We will begin action as soon as practical, probably within a few days. There will be no spectacular drive, the problem will become one of everyday enforcement."

The Governor's advisers are strongly of the opinion that his present action will cause the operators of slot machines to withdrew them from the state voluntarily.

Until Monday Fitzgerald had refused to turn the State Police loose on gambling, maintaining that it was the duty first of all local sheriffs and prosecutors to act.

Threat of a recall movement, made by Rev. Amos Bogart, of Bottle Creek, brought the problem to a head over the week-end. The Governor accompanied his order to the State Police Monday with a blast at Mr. Bogart, who had refused earlier in the day to go to Lansing to see the Governor until he consulted an attorney.

Martin Lops Off $31,000 On Salaries

DETROIT, March 8 — (AP). — Homer Martin's convention of United Automobile Workers presented a financial program calculated to save the union $31,000 a year in officers' salaries as a major inducement today for support from the industry's workers.

Lopping off four of five vice-presidencies and reducing the executive board membership, the convention slashed payroll costs to $52,000, compared with $83,000 a year for the original U. A. W. setup.

The rearrangements, which presumably "Martin's Union" will follow out if no peace develops between itself and the faction supported by the Congress of Industrial Organizations, leave the President drawing $5,000 salary, a vice-president and secretary-treasurer $4,000 each, and 13 board members $3,000 each.

The U. A. W. has been paying its president $5,000, five vice-presidents $4,000 each, 16 board members $3,000, and the secretary-treasurer $4,000. International officers sit with the board.

New Border Clash

TOKYO, March 8.—(AP). — Ten Soviet soldiers were reported today to have been driven back, with one wounded, after crossing the Soviet-Manchoukuo border near Manchuli Monday.

Domei (Japanese news agency) dispatches, reporting continuation of border clashes, said there had been 24 such incidents in January alone, resulting in a situation which the Manchoukuo government declared was "unprecedented in diplomatic history."

During 1938 the Manchoukuo government was said to have made total of 158 protests to Moscow against border violations, interference in shipping, and other alleged illegal acts.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

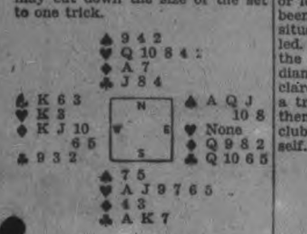
WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER

By SHEPARD BARCLAY

"The Authority on Authorities"

YOU MUST SET IT TWO

IF YOUR SIDE has chosen to double your vulnerable opponents, instead of making a game which you feel is in the cards for your side, a one-trick set is a losing proposition. You must set the enemy two tricks to get a result as good as or better than your own not-vulnerable game would have been. It is up to you then to keep your eyes open to protect yourself against a lead-throwing end play or some other canny dodge which may cut down the size of the set to one trick.



(Dealer: South. North-South vulnerable.)

At two tables of a tournament, South opened this deal with 1-Heart, West bid 2-Diamonds, North 2-Hearts, East 3-Spades, and South 4-Hearts. One West now saw fit to bid 4-Spades and the other preferred to double his vulnerable opponents at 4-Hearts.

Where East played spades, South led the club K, switched to the heart A, which was ruffed, East ran three trumps and lost two more tricks, to the diamond A and club A, making his contract for a score of 120 in tricks, 300 game bonus, total 420 points.

At the heart table, South ruffed the third round of spades, lost the second trump round to West and the diamond K knocked out the A. Declarer played a couple of other trumps, then led the diamond 7 from dummy. When East played the Q, that made the last trick his side could get, for he had to choose between giving declarer a ruff and discard on a spade or diamond lead, or lead from his club Q. Had East been canny, he could have seen this situation when the diamond was led. He should have played low in the hope that his partner had the diamond J. If west did not, the declarer would have made nothing but a trick he would get anyway, for then he would have had to lose a club trick by leading the suit himself.

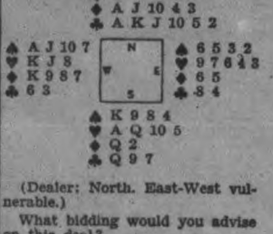
Tomorrow's Problem



(Dealer: North. East-West vulnerable.)

What bidding would you advise on this deal?

Builder Of Famed Casa Loma Sir Henry Pellatt Dies In Modest Home

Noted As Soldier, Financier, Philanthropist; Organized First Toronto Light Firm, Succumbs After Three Weeks' Illness At 79

TORONTO, March 9 (CP). — Major-General Sir Henry Pellatt, who held his head high even when misfortune took away his millions and his dream castle, will be buried Saturday after a full military funeral in St. James' Cathedral.

The distinguished soldier, financier and philanthropist, known best for the $1,700,000 castle he built atop a Toronto hill and never occupied, died last night after three weeks' illness in the modest surroundings of a little home in suburban Mimico. He was 79 years of age.

Sir Henry was rarely in the public eye in his later years. Many strangers to Toronto, being conducted through the fabulous Casa Loma, asked if the man who built it were still alive.

Sir William Mulock, former Chief Justice of Ontario, said in tribute that Sir Henry would be "famous for the castle on the hill which his romantic mind brought into being," but his true monument would be "the lasting memory of a genial, warm-hearted, devoted spirit which prosperity did not elate nor adversity depress."

Members of the Queen's Own Rifles, the regiment with which Sir Henry was associated for half a century, had reason to know his courage, his generosity and his love of Empire better than any others. Four years before the Great War began, Sir Henry took 620 men of the Queen's Own to England at his personal expense to attend army manoeuvres.

Just last January nearly a quarter of that battalion honored Sir Henry at a birthday banquet. Tribute after tribute was read — from the Duke of Connaught, from Prime Minister Mackenzie King and from many others—and finally one from Queen Mary as colonel-in-chief of the regiment. Sir Henry's face glowed with pride as the company stood to toast the Queen.

Isolated Hamlet Is Freed, Gangs Near 2nd

ORANGEVILLE, Ont., March 9.—(CP).—County workmen continued their onslaught against full-drifted Highway No. 24, north of Horning's Mills, to-day, only slightly hampered by a four-inch snowfall during the night. There was little wind today and with the snow changing to sleet, there seemed little likelihood that further drifting would close the deep cuts again.

A snowplow and crew of six men yesterday opened No. 24 highway into Horning's Mills, a village 17 miles north of here which has been isolated since Monday. Working through deep cuts and drifts, the crew took nine hours to traverse the five-mile stretch into Horning's Mills from the south.

Redickville, another village three miles north of Horning's Mills on No. 24 highway, is still isolated, but the road is expected to be opened to-day.

With their bread supply running low in Honeywood, merchants yesterday received a shipment by sleigh from Creemore, 12 miles away. The shipment was brought over roads which, in places, were drifted so badly that horses were almost unable to get through.

Plane Brings Food, Mail.

An airplane was used yesterday to deliver food to the residents of Horning's Mills.

The pilot, Bob Jewitt, Toronto, stocked up with supplies at Shelburne and returned to Horning's Mills, six miles away.

Several bundles of overdue mail were also delivered by the pilot.

Residents near Collingwood wondered why their telephone service had not been continued after a break-down on Tuesday. A lineman had tried to get through the soft drifts but his team became struck. Two farmers aided him in digging his horses out and the trip was abandoned.

R.A.F. Personnel Now 100,000

LONDON, March 9 (CP Cable.—The air estimates for the year 1939-40 will roughly double the total expenditure on all the defence services in 1932-33, Sir Kingsley Wood, Air Secretary, told the House of Commons today.

Presenting his departmental estimates, Sir Kingsley said the air personnel already is almost 100,000 compared with the planned establishment of 102,000. For the coming year for the Royal Air Force and reserves 75,000 men are required.

The London balloon barrage defence system to trap invading aircraft now is ready, the Air Secretary said, and barrages elsewhere in the country should be ready by the end of the year.

First line aircraft would total 1,750 by April 1, he said, while the overseas forces—Palestine, Singapore and other Empire points—have 500 first line machines.

He was hopeful the announced program for the metropolitan (United Kingdom) air force of approximately 2,375 first line craft by the end of the year 1939-40 would be completed within the promised time.

Increased accidents in the air force are due to the increased hours of flying, Sir Kingsley declared. There was no increase in relation to hours flown.

No 9 o'Clock Curfew, It Disturbs Old Folks' Rest

Rochester, N.H., March 9 (AP)—CURFEW shall not sound tonight—it's liable to wake up the old folks. The City Council rejected petitions by women's groups who sought to have the fire siren sounded at 9 p.m. nightly to remind children to go home to bed. The reason: The siren was discontinued three years ago because aged residents complained the noise disturbed their slumbers and "there's just as much noise this year."

Predict Attempt To Revise Trade Treaty

OTTAWA, March 9 — (CP) — Representatives will be sent to Washington seeking remedies for some of the inequalities of the New Canada-United States trade agreement when the treaty debate in the House of Commons ends, Albert A. Brown (Con. Hamilton East) predicted in the House of Commons yesterday.

Mr. Brown obtained the floor just before the adjournment hour and continues his speech today, outlining what he claims are the injuries the treaty will work on manufacturing industries in Hamilton.

The debate continued all day yesterday with members for the most part discussing effects of the agreement on fruit and vegetable growers in Ontario and in the Maritime Provinces. From the latter section J. P. Barry (Lib. Northumberland, N. B.) and J. J. Kinley (Lib. Queens-Lunenburg) were enthusiastic about it. Hughes Cleaver (Lib. Halton) supported the treaty but wanted some adjustments made for the benefit of growers in his constituency.

Harry Clarke (Con. Toronto Rosedale) charged that American duties on certain Canadian manufactured products remained higher than Canadian duties on the same products which came from the United States.

Mr. Brown based his prediction that representatives would be sent to Washington on the fact that an adjustment had already been necessary in connection with the cattle quota. A definite percentage of the annual quota of cattle more than 700 pounds in weight admitted at a reduced rate of duty is now allotted to Canada since Mexico threatened to use up a large proportion of the quota.

Dependent on Protection

Manufacturing industries in Hamilton employed 33,000 persons, said Mr. Brown. Indirectly they supported a large group of merchants, professional and trades people and farmers and gardeners.

"Practically all of these industries are dependent for their existence on a reasonable amount of tariff pro-

Robber 19, Given 5-Year Term

BRANTFORD, Ont., March 9—(CP)—Stephen Bohonski, Kitchener, 19-year-old youth, found guilty by a jury at the Spring Assizes here of armed robbery with violence was sentenced today by Hon. Mr. Justice J. M. Godfrey to five years in Kingston Penitentiary, the sentence to run concurrently with a sentence of two years less one day for breaking and entering which he is now serving in the Ontario Reformatory.

Following an appeal by defence counsel, R. W. Reville, Mr. Justice Godfrey scanned the past record of the youth and said: "I wish I had not such a record before me. You are a young man and I strongly recommend that you mend your ways. Your future is still before you, but if you continue along the path of crime, the law will deal with you as an habitual criminal. Your conduct at the Penitentiary will determine in what measure your sentence will be lessend."

The crime of which Bohonski was found guilty occurred last September when he was picked up as a hitch-hiker on No. 2 Highway just outside of Brantford. With a revolver and an iron pipe he held up Stephen Hrvojevich and Matthew Zaveruka, driver of the car. Beating them with the pipe, he forced them to turn onto the locks road. Hrvojevich, who had thrown his wallet out of the car, was beaten and forced to disclose where he had thrown the pocket book containing $90. He was also robbed of a gold watch. Zaveruka was robbed of his wallet and $30.

Britain Ready To Send 19 Divisions To France In Case Of War

(By J. F. Sanderson, Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

LONDON, March 9.—(AP)—Announcement of Great Britain's army reorganization to provide for a vastly increased field force was interpreted in political quarters today as a new assurance to France and as a precautionary answer to any prospective Italian territorial designs upon French African colonies.

Britain would be able to send an initial force of close to 200,000 troops to the continent in the event of conflict under the plans which War Minister Leslie Hore-Belisha detailed to the House of Commons last night.

A shipping schedule already has been outlined for transport of the 195,000 troops, 19 divisions as compared to four that were sent to France on 1914 at the outbreak of the Great War.

Richard Butler, under secretary for foreign affairs, told the House that Italian troop shipments to Libya, next to French African possessions, were approaching approximately the same number as before the British-Italian agreement, by which they were reduced.

Still Moving Troops

"I have said they are increasing them," said Mr. Butler in answer to a question as to whether Italy had said they would be reduced when conditions became normal. (On Feb. 20 Mr. Butler said Italy had informed Britain she was sending 30,000 more troops to Libya, where 30,000 had remained after reductions under the British-Italian accord ratified last Nov. 16. The Italian press in a vigorous campaign has demanded concessions in French Tunisia, which adjoins Libya, and elsewhere in the French African empire. Italy has made no formal public demand.)

Consultations between French and British general staff officers are to be held soon to discuss further the scope of a British expeditionary force in war time.

Mr. Horse-Belisha recalled Prime Minister Chamberlain's recent parliamentary declaration of solidarity with the French and added that, while the consultations had not committed Britain, nevertheless:

"Prudent minds should be ready for any eventuality.

The announcement was accepted with pleasure by the French, who lost a measure of their defensive alliances by the Munich agreement which partitioned Czecho-Slovakia and the military effectiveness of that French ally.

13 Territorial Divisions

French fears of German military might increased after the partioning of Czecho-Slovakia when it became apparent Germany could divert her eastern forces to the western front in the even of conflict with France.

Under the program which the war secretary outlined, Britain would send about 13 divisions of her territorial army recruits as part of the 19 initial divisions, in the event of continental war.

Sixteen thousand reserves will be called up this year to keep abreast of new tactics and equipment. Army outfits are being increased in Malta, Singapore, Hong Kong, and Ceylon.

Pigeons Mum In Court Save Owner Paying $25 Fine

Birmingham, Ala., March 9 (AP)—J. H. LINDSAY'S pigeons refused to testify and won him acquittal on a charge of harboring a nuisance. J. T. Austin complained the bird's cooing kept him awake and a police judge fined Lindsay $25. Lindsay appealed. The court ordered him to bring a couple of the birds so a jury could decide if they cooed a nuisance. The birds strutted along a courtroom railing, but refused to coo. The jury decided Lindsay was innocent.

Apps, Leafs' Star Seeks Brant Tory Nomination

BRANTFORD, Ont., Mar. 9.—(CP). — Sylvanus Apps, star centre of Toronto Maple Leafs, will be a candidate for the Conservative Party nomination in Brant Federal constituency, it was learned to-day.

Should a party convention nominate the hockey player, he would run for Parliament at the next general election, which may be held this fall.

In a telephone interview from his Toronto home to-day Apps said: "Yess, I will be a candidate for the nomination and will run if chosen."

Apps, 24, a great all-around athlete, signed with Toronto's National Hocke League team in the fall of 1936 after a brilliant athletic career at McMaster University in hockey, football and track.

He won the British Empire Games pole vault at London, England, in 1934, and placed in a tie for sixth at the 1936 Olympic Games in Berlin. He played on the backfield of the McMaster football team.

Ace Rookie.

In his first N.H.L. season Apps was voted the outstanding rookie, and came within two points of winning the scoring championship. This year he is a leading contender for centre on the Canadian Press all-star team.

Recently Apps was elected a director of the Walker Press at nearby Paris, his native town, and at that time announced Paris would be his permanent home.

It was presumed here that his brilliant hockey career would end in the event of his election to Parliament.

In seeking a political career Apps is following in the footsteps of Lionel Conacher, Toronto's "big train" of sport. Conacher was elected to the Ontario Legislature in 1937 as Liberal member for Toronto Bracondale after a 12-year career in the National Hockey League.

Lessons In England

KINGSTON, Ont., March 9.—(CP)—Don McDonell and C. H. Thom of the Kingston penitentiary staff and J. H. Bland of the Collins Bay penitentiary staff will leave tonight for England to take a two-months course in penal administration.

The three men will form part of a contingent from all the penitentiaries in Canada, who will go to Wakefield England to study criminology and the administration of penal institutions. The move is in consequence to the recommendations of the Archambault royal commission which recently investigated penitentiaries in Canada.

Britain Sees Peaceful End To Italian Claims For Territory On France

European Situation Brightest In Months; Roman Troops Moving To Africa However Stir London Call For Explaining

LONDON, March 9 (CP Cable).—The British Government regards the general European situation as brighter and less likely to lead to major incidents than at any time in recent months. One reason for this attitude is the conviction that Italian claims on France in the Mediterranean will be settled without violence at the conference table.

When Prime Minister Chamberlain went to Rome early in January for talks with Premier Mussolini and Foreign Minister Galeazzo Ciano he had in mind attempting to enlist the Duce's support for securing an armistice in the Spanish civilar war. The Prime Minister did not regard the Spanish situation then as a threat to European peace but knew it might lead to major incidents, which might spread beyond the Spanish borders.

Just before Mr. Chamberlain's arrival in Rome, General Franco started his Catalonian offensive and the Prime Minister realized all suggestions of an armistice would be rebuffed. Since then General Franco has broken the back of Republican Spain's resistance and in the view of the British Government there is no doubt that peace will come to troubled Spain within a short time.

Britain Inquires.

ROME, Mar. 9 — (AP). — Concerned over reports of large Italian troop movements to Libya, North African colony adjoining French-protected Tunisia, Great Britain asked Italy to-day for particulars.

Authoritative British sources said Sir Noel Charles, Charge d'Affaires at the British Embassy, was "greatly reassured" after a conversation with the Italian Foreign Minister, Count Galeazzo Ciano.

These sources stressed that the conference was "very satisfactory."

The inquiry and discussion were said to have been based on "the frightful figures" published in Great Britain, France and Italy on despatch of Italian troops to Libya and French troops to Tunisia.

British quarters were represented as feeling, as a result of the inquiry, that there was no immediate danger in North Africa.

Italian Press Peeved.

Virginio Gayda, the Fascist regime's chief newspaper spokesman, asserted that British, French, and United States armaments "already have lost every defensive character both with respect to their size and their obvious objectives, and now they have assumed an openly offensive character."

After alluding to Great Britain's plan to organize a Continental field force, the editor declared in the newspaper Il Giornale d'Italia:

"It is understood this army has been reserved exclusively for military collaboration with France, which is to say that a formal, if clandestine, Franco-British military alliance truly exists."

Gayda said President Rooseveit "desired to adhere to this accord in every way without reckoning on the organized reaction which it legitimately imposes on threatened nations."

He concluded: "The mystical phrase of Prime Minister Chamberlain on 'peace by negotiation' now evidently is a thing of the past. Today they are talking of imposed peace."

Bren Committee To Sit 2 Days In Inglis Plant

OTTAWA, March 9.—(CP)—The House of Commons public accounts committee, which today began its enquiry into the Bren gun contract, decided it would hold a two-day session in Toronto. Evidence will be taken there at the plant of John Inglis Co., contractors for the Bren gun.

The motion to visit the plant was strenuously opposed. It was sponsored by Peter Bercovitch (Lib. Cartier), and most of today's discussion was occupied with it. Opposition came chiefly from the Conservative and C.C.F. members of the committee.

An amendment by Gordon B. Isnor (Lib. Halifax) that a sub-committee be assigned to the task of having the evidence in Toronto was defeated, by a vote of 31 to seven and the main motion adopted by 25 to 11. No date was set for the visit to Toronto.

Pay Our Own Way?

Mr. Bercovitch's motion was that "the committee ask leave to sit in Toronto for not more than two days, and that payment of any travelling expenses be authorized.

Fears that this might be flaunted through the press to the Canadian people as a "junketing trip at public expense" were expressed by J. A. Glen (Lib. Marquette).

"Why not pay our own expenses?" suggested G. G. McGeer (Lib. Vancouver Burrard). This was greeted with some laughter, but a number of members indicated the suggestion met with their approval.

"No member need file a bill of expense if he doesn't want to," Mr. McGeer said. "The amount will be determined by those who do file expense accounts."

He suggested that the original motion stand, with the question of turning in expense accounts being left to each individual member.

Mr. Bercovitch believed it advantageous that the committee should have an opportunity to view the John Inglis Co., plant, to see it in operation and assure themselves on that point.

Kingston Blaze Costs $70,000

KINGSTON, Ont., March —(CP)—Damage estimated at more than $70,000 was caused when fire of unknown origin swept a garage and an adjoining restaurant here today. Three restaurant workers were overcome by smoke and ammonia fumes but recovered quickly.

The blaze broke out in the basement of Jack McGall's restaurant and cigar store and within a few minutes had swept through the entire building and spread to premises occupied by the Lasalle Tire and Battery Service. Fire damage in the cafe was placed at approximately $20,000 while that in the garage at more than $50,000.

Several automobiles in the garage were destroyed along with a highway snowplough owned by the municipality. The plough was valued at $10,000. A large transport truck also was destroyed while 13 motor cars were removed to safety before flames prevented firemen from entering the building The building, a frame structure, was razed.

Tree-Moving Order From Pal In Jail Traps Counterfeiters, Nets $17,880 In Bogus Bills Buried On Golf Course

CHICAGO, March 9.—(AP).—A new chapter, involving cryptic letters, a secret map, and $17,880 in counterfeit bills cached on a Chicago golf course, was added to-day to the story of the United States' secret service's hunt for a gang which manufactured an estimated $1,000,000 in bogus money.

Latest developments were unfolded in Federal Court after a grand jury returned indictments against Frankie Parker, the "airplane bootlegger" of prohibition days, and August Englehardt, convicted counterfeiter.

Parker wa sarrested imemdiately after the indictment was returned yesterday. Englehardt is in the terminal island prison near Los Angeles, Calif., serving an 18 months term for counterfeiting.

The $17,880 cache was found in fruit jars buried near the 15th green of the Tam o'Shanter golf course. Capt. Thomas Callaghan of the secret service said it was located by deciphering letters written by Parker to Englehardt.

A public stenographer, Miss Adeline Springer, typed Parker's letters. From her notes the government operatives learned Parker had written "it's time to move those trees." Later Parker reported "sorry the water got in the jars and ruined the preserves."

Subsequently an informer gave the investigators a curious map, which Callaghan said had been drawn by Englehardt before his conviction. It consisted of a flag, the figure 15, and a group of trees. It bore the legend: "The fourth tree must be moved six feet away. You can use your 18-inch screwdriver."

The secret service men decided it was a map of the 15th hole of a golf course. They learned that Parker and Englehardt formerly played the Tam o'Shanter course.

Spring Near In Detroit Gypsies Gyp 3 Women Of $302

Detroit, March 9—(CP)—DETROIT Police said Spring should be close at hand, for the first batch of complaints of gypping gypsies were on file. Three Detroit women said gypsies had used the ancient "cross my palm with silver" gag and stole $302. The women said gypsies had them put money in handkerchiefs, uttered a few magic words and told them not to lift their eyes from it for two hours. The money vanished—so had the gypsies.

Villager Gets His Mail Through Roof As Wind Plays Trick

Trinity Bay, Que., March 9 (CP)—NO LONGER can the postman be relied upon to come to the front door and ring at least twice.

Omer Jourdain today received his air mail—and that destined for the whole village—through the roof of his home. The heavily-laden bag crashed through, bringing with it roofing and shingles.

Quebec Airways officials, who effect mail delivery in a number of Quebec villages by having it dropped from planes said the bag had been caught in a strong wind as it fell and was carried far from the point where it usually is picked up.

British M.P. Urges New Imperial Conference To Fit Dominions In Defence System

LONDON, March 9—(CP Cable)—R. H. Rayner, Conservative, last night suggested the House of Commons "should consider whether we ought not to have another imperial conference to decide how the defensive policy of the dominions can be fitted into a co-operative whole."

Recalling that the dominions have sovereignty over their own territory, he asked: "Can a nation of 46,000,000 go on bearing the great expense of the defence of a commonwealth of nations of 490,000,000?"

Mr. Rayner said the dominions might be expected "quite fairly to concentrate on their immediate, individual needs for they all have danger zones well outside their own borders."

"We feel that having now obtained their soverignty, they should assume responsibility for that sovereignty," he said.

"The general feeling of loyalty in the commonwealth when once stirred up would be given practical expression in the division of responsibility as regards defence."

6 Canadian Women Meet King, Queen

LONDON, March 9—(CP Cable)—Six Canadian women are expected to curtsy tonight before the King and Queen at the season's first Royal Court at Buckingham Palace.

They will be among about 1,000 women who will have the privilege of bowing to royalty in what is regarded as the world's most brilliant social function.

The Canadians are: Mrs. Jackson Dodds of Montreal and her daughter, Miss Roma Dodds; Mrs. Sidney Dawes of Montreal and her daughter, Miss Joan Dawes; Miss Beatrice Simson, daughter of the special attache at the Paris Legation and formerly of Ottawa, and, Mrs. Francis Stanton, wife of the attache of Canada House, formerly of Ottawa.

Just A Soldier Or Plain Worker Under Franco Is Humble Aim Of Ex-King Alfonso XIII

PARIS, March 9—(CP-Havas).—The newspaper Le Jour-Echo de Paris today published a dispatch from a specal correspondent in Rome quoting former King Alfonso XIII of Spain as saying he wishes only to be a simple soldier or worker under General Franco.

"You ask me at this decisive moment in the history of my country to state my position anew," Alfonso was quoted as saying. "I am glad to reply. But my answer may perhaps disappoint some.

"More than ever the union of all Spaniards behind the chief who led to victory is necessary. I would not permit that a word should be attributed to me which could be thought contrary to this affirmation, or even which might modify it, however slightly.

"I declare once again that I desire to be considered simply as a soldier of Franco, attentive to the orders he may give for the rebuilding of our country.

"If the word 'soldier' no longer applies to my country, I then desire to be a worker collaborating in its awakening under the orders of the caudillo (leader). The future of Spain and of al Spaniards is entirely in his hands."

New Mining Act Is First Bill Before House

TORONTO, March 9.—(CP)—Henry Louis Hagey, 31, youngest member of Ontario's Legislature, was introduced to the House yesterday and today he will move the address in reply to the Speech from the Throne.

The Brantford Liberal will open debate on the general state of affairs in the province, the throne speech debate being one in which the members are not confined to particular subjects. The address in reply will be seconded by J. M. Cooper (Lib.-Sudbury).

It was not certain whether Premier Mitchell Hepburn would attend today's sitting of the legislature session that opened yesterday. The premier, indisposed, retired to his hotel suite immediately after yesterday's 50-minute formal opening ceremonies.

First bill introduced was that of Hon. Paul Leduc, minister of mines, to amend the mining act. One of the chief purposes of the bill is to deal with high-grading, an increasing problem, it is reported to the government, in Northern Ontario.

(High-grading is the theft or retention of ores containing precious metals).

The measure, sponsored by the government, will provide for the licensing of every person who owns, operates, or has in his possession a refinery suitable for recovering gold or other precious metals.

Examination Of Miners

In the same bill is provision for recurring examinations of miners to prevent the development of silicosis and for the withholding of certificates from miners who develop tuberculosis.

A gesture of good-will to the old-time prospector is contained in another amending clause. It provides that any prospector who has held a miner's license for 25 years continuously may have it renewed free.

Col. George Drew, recently-elected Conservative leader and now member for Simcoe East, was introduced to the House yesterday. He was welcomed by Premier Hepburn with a few jocular remarks about the frequency with which the Ontario Conservative party has changed leaders lately.

Premier Hepburn and Col. Drew are scheduled to speak in the debate Tuesday.

Dionne, Dafoe Undecided

NORTH BAY, Ont., March 9—(CP).—The "wait and see" attitude adopted by Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, physician of the Dionne quintuplets, in regard to the children coming to Toronto for presentation to the King and Queen in May, is echoed by their father, Oliva.

An interviewer called last night at the farmhouse where the quints were born and asked Dionne, "Will you accept the invitation?"

"I have not made up my mind," Dionne replied. "There is plenty of time yet. The King and Queen won't be in Toronto for two months and a half yet. Lots of things can happen in tha time. This is a very important thing, you know, and it takes time to consider."

Poland Seeking Loans For Canal Baltic To Black Sea

London, March 9 (CP-Havas) THE NEWS CHRONICLE said today in a dispatch from Warsaw that Colonel Kowalewski, Polish Government expert, left there last night to seek financial aid in London, Paris and Amsterdam for the building of a canal linking the Baltic with the Black Sea.

"British, French and Dutch capitalists," it said, "will be offered 25 years' exploitation of the canal in exchange for a big loan. Apart from the economic aspect, the plan has strategic and political significance."

(Plans for a Baltic-Black Sea canal were reported to have been discussed during the visit to Warsaw this week of Rumanian Foreign Minister Grigore Gafencu.)

Banting, Bruce Head League

TORONTO, March 9 (CP). — The Globe and Mail today announced that the Leadership League, sponsored by the newspaper in a "desire to do public good," will be taken over "by a body of public-spirited citizens" headed by Sir Frederick Banting and Dr. Herbert A. Bruce.

The league, "with a present pledged membership of 125,000," will be continued "in whatsoever realms its own deliberations shall direct," as the answer of the publisher (George McCullagh) "to the challenge of 50,000 personal letters which answered his broadcasts—the challenge to create something to aid a harassed but impotent people in the solution of their national, social and governmental problems."

The announcement said the league offices will be removed from the Globe and Mail building but the publisher "will continue to do service by providing a daily forum for league discussions and thoughts."

A mass meeting was announced for March 15 at Maple Leaf Gardens, at which Dr. Bruce, former Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, will be chairman. Dr. Banting, co-discoverer of insulin and internationally recognized scientist, will be vice-chairman.

Following the meeting a central committee will be formed and plans announced for setting up provisional committees in all provinces and duplicate committees in every Dominion electoral district.

The announcement said arrangements are being made for Dr. Bruce and the Globe and Mail publisher to speak at mass meetings across Canada.

They take examinations at the end of that time. If successful they will be given first class Civil Air Navigators licences enabling them to pilot passenger airliners across the North Atlantic. Under Air Ministry regulations no passenger-carrying aircraft may operate more than 600 miles over sea or uninhabited country unless the pilot holds this license.

ver East) did not think the committee should deal with that aspect at present. Any evidence to be considered would be on the condition of the plant as it was a year ago. If it became necessary to go to Toronto permission could be asked to do so. The question, however, did not arise at the moment.

Mr. Bercovitch insisted that an immediate visit to Toronto would be useful. If any improvements had been made, the committee could readily observe them and could get an indication of what the plant was like in the past.

Such a course was putting the cart before the horse, said Howard Green (Con. Vancouver South). It would be more helpful to the committee if the members could get some of the story of the contract first. After that the committee might visit the plant. It would be premature to see the plant before the committee knew what it was all about. There seemed to be great haste to rush away from Ottawa, said Mr. Green.

If the committee didn't know what the matter was all about, it would never know, considering all the newspaper reports of the Bren Gun inquiry, Mr. Bercovitch said.

Any reference to the plant during the discussions in the House of Commons were on the plant as it was, and not as it is today, Karl Homuth (Lib. Waterloo South) said. He recalled that a great deal of Government money had now been spent on it. He wanted to know whether the plant was carrying out the contract and whether it was in a position to do so. He though a visit to Toronto would be a waste of time at present.

A Junketing Trip

Such a trip to Toronto might be interpreted by the public as a junketing trip, Mr. MacNeil contended. The present efficiency of the Inglis plant was not in question.

Arthur Beaubien (Lib. Provencher) asked how the committee could tell whether the contract should be cancelled, if the committee knew nothing about the plant.

W. H. Golding (Lib. Huron-Perth) said he had been astonished at statements about "his broken down boiler shop."

The committee was not appointed to pass on statements made about the contract in the House, T. C. Douglas (C. C. F. Weyburn) submitted.

Mr. Homuth suggested the present efficiency of the Inglis plant, whatever it might be, was the result of the expenditure of government money in equipping the plant. Enough had been spent in it to make it efficient.

It had been so broken down an addition had been built on the plant to make Bren Guns. It would be a waste of public money for the committee to visit the plant.

Gordon B. Isnor (Lib. Halifax) submitted an amendment that a special sub-committee of seven be appointed to visit the plant.

Hon. H. A. Stewart (Cons. Leeds) felt the committee would be going entirely outside its reference to visit the plant at this late date. The question was the suitability of the plant at the time of the contract. The statement had been made the plant was well-equipped to make munitions.

Trek Four Miles For 3 Dead In Plane Wreck

LAC-A-LA-CROIX, Que., March 9—(CP)—A party was due to set out today for a spot 10 miles from here where a wrecked airplane holds the bodies of three men who died when the ship crashed on a pleasure flight.

The expedition intended to fly to a lake four miles from where the twisted wreckage lay, and cover the remainder of the journey on foot. The plane carrying John C. Stadler, Jr., 32, of Westmount, Que., Capt. Herve St. Martin, 42, of St. Felicien, Que., and Oscar Therrien, St. Jovite, Que., crashed on the edge of a small unnamed lake.

Two commercial pilots sighted the plane from the air yesterday. The three men had been missing since Sunday, when they set out from this place 75 miles west of Chicoutimi for St. Felicien. They had spent a few days at a camp St. Martin was building.

Pilot Pat Twist of Dominion Airways, who made the discovery with Albert Funke of Quebec Airways, landed his plane on the lake's snow covered ice and examined the crashed ship. He found the bodies crammed together near the front of the plane. Twist was unable to give any reason for the accident.

Twist said last night, after flying to St. Felicien, that it would be dangerous to land by plane on the small lake where he came down yesterday. The commercial pilot said the lake "really was too small to operate a plane safely".

A 4-Mile Trek

For that reason the party today chose to land on a larger lake four miles from the scene of the crash. The journey will be through thick timberland covered with deep snow, and the return will be made more difficult by the fact that the bodies of the three men will have to be carried.

Stadler was executive assistant to the assistant General Manager of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation in Montreal, and was one of Canada's best-known engineers. St. Martin, believed to be flying the ill-fated plane, was operator of an Air Transport Company in Northern Quebec while Therrien was a mechanic with his Company.

Market Review

TORONTO, March 9 — (CP). — Gains were whittled down in quiet profit-taking this afternoon on the Toronto Stock Market and at the close mining and industrial shares showed little, if anything, to the good for the day. Western oils were gainers on increased turnover. Volume slackened off when prices turned a bit soft and aggressive turnover for the day was off a little from Wednesday at about 625,000 shares.

The market registered additional gains, advancing from the opening with the main action appearing in the mines. Turnover in the first three hours totalled 421,00 shares.

Senior oils, papers, foods and steels maintained an upward slant. Trading in the industrial section quieted down when New York prices developed an easier tendency.

In the golds healthy gains appeared for Central Patricia, San Antonio, Hard Rock, Powell-Rouyn, East Malartic, Sylvanite and O'Brien.

Wall Street Close

NEW YORK, March 9 — (AP). — Stocks met profit taking resistance in to-day market but most managed to move up fractions to around a point, many to new 1938-39 tops.

Activity was pronounced at the opening, with the ticker tape behind for a brief interval. Prices soon began to dip, however, and the pace slowed. Selected issue attracted additional support near the final hour although there was an assortment of losers. Transfers were about 1,500,000 shares.

WINNIPEG GRAIN

WINNIPEG, Mar. 9 — (C.P.). — Scarcity of offerings and general lack of interest held wheat futures prices within a narrow range at Winnipeg to-day. At the finish quotations were ⅛ cent lower to unchanged, with May at 60¾, July 61½ and October 62¼ cents.

Light selling by commission houses brought fractional losses during the initial stages, but the market firmed later on when traders lost interest due to the absence of any incentive to move values either way. Export sales of Canadian wheat were confined to a few loads worked from both seaboards.

Liverpool finished ⅝ to ½d lower when liquidation followed cheaper Canadian and Australian offers.

—but I've borrowed from the bank for years

How? By meeting the simple requirements a sound banker asks from any borrower, no matter who he is.

First, he wants to know what the money is to be used for. That's reasonable; and I tell him quite frankly all the details.

He wants to know how I propose to pay the money back. So, I give him a list of all outstanding bills, current expenses and my income. That gives him a clear picture of how I stand.

He wants to know where I work and how long I've held my present position. He asks for security. Naturally. He's lending depositors' money, that must be paid back on demand.

And if I happen to have no security he often lends me money on my own note of hand, with one responsible endorser—because we've done business together for years.

That's all there is to it! I have always kept my side of the bargain, paid back as agreed, and established a line of credit that often proved useful when cash was badly needed.

Dodsworth, funeral account, $30.00; County Treasurer, 1937 High School student account, $31.03; road superintendent, pay list snow ploughing, $157.75; Miss Douglas, auditor's reports, $9.73; C. Sobbrey, redemption costs, $9.00; M. Macdonald, relief supplies, $20.21; D. Brown, relief supplies and telephone calls, $17.29; W. Parks, refund school tax, $4.94; Clerk's salary, $31.25; treasurer, salary, $10.00; Reeve N. Lean, Council meetings, $9.00; W. Staples, ditto, $9.00; A. Wilson, ditto, $9.00; E. L. Blackwell, ditto, $3.00; J. Church, ditto and mileage, $13.50; Clerk, stamps, $5.00; S. J. Charlton, bond premium, $8.00.

The next meeting of Council will be at the call of the Reeve.

MILLBROOK

Members of the local Y.P.U. who motored to Colborne at the week-end and attended the reunion of students and officers who were at the Oak Lake summer school last August were: Misses Esther Might, Leitha Edworthy and Phyllis Kidd; Ken Kidd, Gordon Might and Earle Edworthy.

Miss Loretta McDougall of Peterborough was also at the reunion and remained over Sunday in Millbrook as the guest of Miss Phyllis Kidd. Miss McDougall contributed a much-appreciated solo during the morning service in St. Andrew's United church.

Mrs. H. Cornish, and her daughter, of Vancouver, B.C., who have been visiting her sister, Mrs. L. M. Bonneville, and other relatives in Ontario and Quebec, for the past two or three months, left for their home on Monday, intending to visit her son in Toronto before continuing their journey to the Sunset province.

Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Campbell, who have been wintering at Naples, Florida expect to return to their home here as soon as Mrs. Campbell's health will permit. The latter's many friends will be glad to learn that she is making good progress toward recovery following her recent illness. The trip to the western coast and north to British Columbia, which Mr. and Mrs. Campbell had intended to take in order to visit the latter's parents on their homeward journey, will be postponed until a later date.

Missing Aviator Found In North

NORTH BAY, Ont., Mar. 9 — (C.P.). — Young Harold Chandler, North Bay private pilot, to-day recounted the experience of having an airplane forced down through engine trouble, while W. J. Hebert, North Bay, continued by dog-team an inspection trip of lumber areas he had planned to make from a cockpit.

Missing since Tuesday when they set out from here by plane to Wolsley Bay on the French River, Chandler and Hebert were found yesterday on the shores of Lake Nipissing by a search plane chartered by the Sudbury Star.

Chandler said their machine was forced down on Tuesday through a broken piston, and they spent the night with a French-Canadian couple in a nearby cabin. The couple loaned Hebert a dog-team yesterday to continue his trip, while Chandler was flown to Sudbury by Pilot Phil Sauve, hero of many northern mercy flights. Chandler returned here by plane last night.

Neither men suffered hardship after their ship glided down on the frozen lake. Chandler said his "greatest worry was for my mother and the people at home."

"I expected to be away only a couple of hours and I knew folks would be imagining all sorts of things when I did not return. There is no wireless on the plane."

Hebert planned the trip by air to save a long train journey around Lake Nipissing to his French River Lake Nipissing to his French River camp. Sauve located the man when he landed his plane and two Indians told him of a plane down at Sand Bay. Hebert's camp is approximately 45 miles from North Bay, and the two were approximately 12 miles from their destination when the engine stopped.

KEENE

Mrs. Charles Nelson is in Toronto visiting her daughter, Agnes.

The many friends of Miss Edith Wood will be glad to know she is home again.

On Tuesday evening the Young People of Otonabee (most of those who attended the short course), met at the Town Hall with close to 60 present. The purpose was to form a club. The meeting opened with a sing-song with L. Brown at piano. Mr. F. C. Patterson, agriculture representative, gave an interesting talk on club work, stressing that you only get out of a club what you put in it.

Officers were elected: President, Alan Eason; Vice-President, Laura Taylor; Secretary, Jack Bolin; Treasurer, Willena Nelson. Remainder of evening was spent in playing Bingo.

HONOR CENTENARIAN

Sixty-five relatives and their families filled the parish church in Bishopstoke, England, for the funeral of Mrs. Agnes Moody, aged 100 years and three weeks.

Cannot Read Or Write

There are 593 people of adult age in Peterborough who can neither read nor write. That information is in the Business Year Book of the Financial Post together with a good deal of other information regarding manufacturing and the general business of the community.

The figure for Peterborough is not high compared to other places, although it is too high when one considers the opportunity afforded today for education in all its phases. The percentage of illiterates (those who can neither read nor write) in various Canadian centres is given:

Vancouver	3.2	Chatham	2.9
Toronto	3.2	Cornwall	11.3
Quebec City	6.9	Edmonton	1.0
Hamilton	3.6	Ft. William	7.0
Ottawa	4.6	Glace Bay	6.7
Windsor	4.2	Kingston	3.6
Calgary	0.6	Kitchener	3.6
Belleville	4.6	Lethbridge	1.3
Brandon	3.1	Oshawa	4.4
Brantford	3.5	Peterborough	2.9
St. Catharines	3.8	Stratford	2.9
Woodstock	2.6	Moncton, N.B.	6.1

The best showing in that list, which though representative is not complete, is made by three cities of Alberta: Lethbridge, Calgary and Edmonton. Calgary has a population of 83,761 and makes the claim there are but 350 persons over ten years of age who can neither read nor write, and that we consider an excellent showing.

The Worst Snub

Count Ludwig Constantin Slam lived according to the custom of his rank in his native Austria. He was a one-time husband of the former Millicent Rogers, an American heiress who secured a titled future by a marriage which did not last. There is one son, Peter, a lad of 13 or so who was willed $2,500,000 by his grandfather. That in brief is the case.

Things have been going in strange ways in Austria and the Count is no longer able to live as a Count is accustomed to live. The unpleasant truth is he is out of funds. He has it all figured out that a son should be willing and ready to come to the assistance of his father and so he has made application to have an allowance of $20,000 a year set aside for him from the money of his son Peter.

Peter spends part of his time with his father according to a settlement arrived at when the divorce was issued, and the last word in the story is that Peter is not anxious to go on the next visit because he does not want to see his father.

When a lad of 13 says plainly he does not want to see his father then a good bit of the light has gone out for that father, no matter if he is a Count of the humblest of commoners. The most natural and the most wholesome instinct in the world would be that Peter would be tickled pink at the idea of meeting his father. The millions which surround the situation and which seem to have now escaped the father mean nothing at all in terms of affection and family relationship. It is not possible for a man to receive a worse snub than being told his own son does not want to see him.

Should Be Left Alone

Dr. Paul Zehl of Union College, Schnectady N.Y., has returned from a long trip which took him to British Guiana and Venezuela. The scientist found many things of interest and his trip was well worth while, but the first thing he started to talk about on his return was the discovery of a so-called lost village where the inhabitants were living in a state of perfect happiness. Guides who accompanied Dr. Zehl told him a white man had never before visited the community which is inhabited by natives.

He found a community where every person seemed happy; during his stay he saw no disorder; he heard not a word of impending trouble in the great and advanced world outside. So it is no wonder the man started to talk about that little community first thing when he returned.

There was no session of police court in the morning; there was no relief office; there were no cars to make people jump; there were no unemployed folk; as far as could be learned there was no taxation and no housing problem. The people were just living on what they could produce and on what nature provided and they were extremely happy. We hope the learned scientist does not favor another expedition for the purpose of causing these folk to become civilized.

No Person Injured?

Is it possible to write anything interesting or worth while about an automobile accident as the result of which no person was hurt? Our belief is that it can be done.

There was a heading in the paper which told about $1,000 damage being done when two cars cracked up although no person was injured. There was no insurance carried by either driver. The report of the traffic officer shows each of the cars was well over toward the centre of the road, so it will be difficult enough to fix blame definitely even if the case were taken to court. It was stated in the story that it appeared likely each driver would have his own car attended to.

That part of it is sensible, and each one will have to spend $500. And what will they get for the $500? A repaired car which will not be in as good condition as it was prior to the accident.

If the average man were asked to put up $500 on short notice he could not do it, and the class who have not $500 immediately at their disposal includes many people who are driving cars. What then? The man who faces such a bill will have to start and arrange to pay it. It may be he can borrow the money or part of it, but the debt is still there. He will have to save from week to week and keep on doing it for a long time to settle his account. The average man could not put aside $10 a week, and he might do well enough if he could take $5 per week from his earnings, so it would likely take him a good two years to collect the $500 he has to pay for having his car fixed. And during that period he would have to shake his head at other expenditures which might be necessary and useful. Then after his two years of effort when he has his bill paid he has actually nothing to show for it apart from the receipt. Even if no one is killed or injured in some of these road crashes there is a good deal of woe waiting for the participants, especially in cases where they carry no insurance.

It's Different In Algoma

Life in Sault Ste. Marie is something separate and apart from life in the rest of the province. Jim Curran, who publishes the Star in that city, has always contended in conversation and by pen that people in Algoma have their own way of doing things. One of his examples was the lady of the house who threw a policeman over the woodshed because he came around looking for a whiskey bottle.

There was more evidence of this free life presented in a court case at the Sault the other day. The owner of a cafe was fined $10 on a charge of having assaulted a patron who was making trouble in the premises. The tea had been boiled for half an hour instead of 20 minutes and the customer did not like it.

One of the witnesses told of having crossed the street and then on hearing a window break looked back and saw a man come flying out. "Tossed out" was the phrase used in the Sault paper. It seems to be a way they have in the metropolis of Algoma and the technique appears to be generally developed. One is not allowed to leave under his own power, but is projected through the atmosphere until the law and force of gravity comes into operation to terminate the flight. The fact that a window may lie between means little or nothing in Sault Ste. Marie. Next time Jim tells us life is different there we'll be inclined to fall in with his opinion.

Will The Senate Do It?

Last year the Railway Committee of the Senate brought out much information dealing with the railway situation, but they did not complete their work. It is now suggested that they go on with the same business and we hope they do. The committee heard sufficient to make it plain that the business of co-operation between the existing lines was not being thoroughly exploited, and the reason was that each line knew it had to look after its own interests if it were to continue as an operating unit. The sales agencies of both lines are in full operation; if there is any business going the C.N.R. wants it and the C.P.R. wants it. For that reason it is plain enough that co-operation has its well-fixed limits. The Senate found that out.

When the matter was approached in a recent Senate discussion the claim was made that the road to solution was barred because the parties in the Commons were both against amalgamation, and therefore the Senate could do nothing about it. Right Hon. Arthur Meighen was not of that opinion and said so in this way:

> "Are we to be made slaves in this House? Are we to bow to the dictates of parties? If this House is to be a reflection of the political parties of this country then the sooner the country calls for our abolition the better."

One could only hope that the theory outlined by Senator Meighen might be the actual purpose of the Senate. Unfortunately those who are called to the Senate are selected strictly along party lines; the body is looked upon as a place where good political service receives its reward. When Liberals are in power then Liberals receive the call; when Conservatives have the majority in the Commons then Conservative candidates for the Senate are the only ones who receive notice that the Upper Chamber has room for them.

If the Senate of today desires to perform a service for the people of Canada the road is wide open, and the railway problem offers the opportunity. The Senators should get their eyes and their minds and their thoughts away from the political parties in the House or elsewhere and think of the thousands upon thousands of people in the country who want to see the business tackled with one purpose only—finding a solution.

It is not necessary for the Senate to consider what political parties think about the railway problem or the railway vote, nor is it advisable for them to count much on platforms which have been enunciated and approved by political conventions. The problem is there before them and it does not become better or worse according to what parties think about it. The change will come by reason of what people do about it.

If the Senators are prepared to continue their railway probe and forget political affiliation then there is room for the members to perform a service which might well justify the existence of the Senate. If they intend to touch the question having in mind what the Liberal party platform says about it or what the Conservative convention platform adopted as policy, then the Senators might just as well leave it alone.

The onus of making the choice is straight before the Senators themselves. If they are as fearless as they must at times desire to be they can know in advance that there is a great body of public opinion waiting for action. The country is well aware that at the bottom of our railway problem is the bad bargain which was made in the first place by which we were committed to the possession of unprofitable roads and of roads which sound business judgment would never have constructed. The fact that one political party or the other says we must not amalgamate these roads does not mean a thing. The Senate has the time at its disposal to go deeply into the question. It can call witnesses and take evidence and possibly it can come to positive conclusions based on the weight of evidence or the force of cool logic. The Senate has opportunity to show that it can render to the country a service of which it is much in need.

NOTE AND COMMENT

We are inclined to believe the groundhog must have seen his shadow early in February.

Bandits entered the Banque Canadienne Nationale at Montreal and stole $1,000, showing that banditry has become a bilingual affair.

We would hesitate to recommend being a spy as desirable work, as the habit seems to be growing of putting these fellows up against a wall and shooting them.

Workers in Italy have received a wage increase on account of the higher cost of living. That is more acceptable than taking a decrease owing to the lower cost of living.

From Blenheim there comes a report of 45 acres being planted in spinach as soon as the season opens. We mention that in case you dote on spinach and do not know where to spend the summer vacation.

Gandhi has ended his latest fast by drinking orange juice and goat's milk. Enjoying victuals whenever they appear we would find it difficult enough to become a disciple of Gandhi if it included fasting.

The only justification there would be for a two-cent boost in the gas tax of this province would be to use the increase for paying off the road debt. If used for any other purpose the increase cannot be justified.

Rumania and Poland are anxious to have palestine opened for Jews wishing to go there. If these countries wish to undertake the future management of troubled Palestine it might be Britain would be willing to discuss the matter.

King George VI. will not be able to prorogue the Ontario Legislature, according to word from Ottawa. If our various governments all get their hands on the business of making events and programs for the royal tour there may be a course mapped out which even a king could not follow.

WEE ANGUS

(By A.S.K.)

¶ Wee Angus won't believe in ghosts, and of his bravery he boasts, he says it's only talk; he says the night's the same as day, one's just as safe out either way, if he starts out to walk.

¶ But Pete and Dan were telling him, how they got scared from out their skin, stood rigid as a post; for they were heading home one night, and though the moon was shining bright, they say they saw the ghost.

¶ There is a haunted house they say, near where they go and often play, it stands there by itself; a miser used to live in there, his death was such a strange affair, they killed him for his wealth.

¶ And Pete and Dan were in last night, and they were talking of the sight, to them the thing was plain; the ghost was moving round in there, they saw it come and stop and stare, right through a window pane.

¶ I told Wee Angus it was bunk, their story was a pile of junk, and he agreed with me; and when the last word had been said, he started off upstairs to bed, as brave as he could be.

¶ I went upstairs to tuck him in, and have a last few words with him, and he began to yawn; just one request that he could find, he asked me if I didn't mind —to leave the hall light on.

Just What Is An Interruption?

(From Parliamentary Debates)

The CHAIRMAN: I must inform the hon. member that he has spoken for forty minutes.

Mr. QUELCH: Very well; I will finish this another time. It is just the question of one hundred per cent money, with which I will continue later.

Mr. BLACKMORE: Mr. Chairman, may this count as an interruption which will give the hon. member the privilege of going on for another forty minutes?

Mr. DUNNING: On a point of order, Mr. Chairman, it seems to me there are a great many members of this committee who may wish to speak on this matter. If you recognize a subsequent speaker who deliberately rises merely for the purpose of providing an interruption in order to permit the original speaker to continue, and who in fact so states, I submit that other speakers are being denied their right to speak. The hon. member for Calgary East was on his feet; he is straining at the leash.

Mr. LANDERYOU: I am prepared to allow the hon. member to go ahead.

Mr. DUNNING: There may be others who desire to speak.

Mr. QUELCH: Does not this all count as an interruption?

The CHAIRMAN: I do not think the point raised by the hon. member for Lethbridge (Mr. Blackmore) is well taken. I know there have been occasions in this house during the last few years when members who have spoken for forty minutes in committee of the whole have been notified that their time was up and another hon. member would say something not particularly relevant and immediately sit down again, after which the hon. member who previously had the floor would rise and continue. In my opinion that is out of order. The forty minute rule never provided for that.

Mr. BLACKMORE: Mr. Chairman, may I ask a question? We are looking for information. As soon as we learn how to play according to the rules of the house, believe me we will do so. But we want to know how to do it. The Minister of Finance rose and delivered a little speech in the midst of my hon. friend's speech. Was that not an interruption by him?

The CHAIRMAN: But the hon. member who had the floor allowed the minister to interrupt. That is the course followed in debate.

Mr. BOUCHARD: It was to help him.

Mr. J. C. LANDERYOU (Calgary East): As the hon. member who has been described by the minister as straining at the leash, I shall proceed to let him know what I feel about the whole matter of finance, and about these indirect and complex financial manipulations which have so befuddled his mind that, according to his own words, the more he studies the less he seems to know.

Mr. DUNNING: I did not say that at all.

Mr. LANDERYOU: The less he is sure of.

Mr. DUNNING: Mr. Chairman, I ask for an absolute withdrawal of that statement. It is not a correct statement of what I said, and the hon. member purports to quote me. It is a well known rule of the house that he who purports to quote a member must quote him correctly, or not at all. I will stand by anything I have said, but not by what my hon. friend says I have said.

Mr. LANDERYOU: I recall that he said the more he studies the less sure he is.

Mr. DUNNING: No, I did not say that, either.

Mr. LANDERYOU: What did he say, then?

Mr. DUNNING: You will have to look it up.

Some hon. MEMBERS: Withdraw.

Mr. LANDERYOU: The resolution we are—

Mr. DUNNING: My hon. friend should withdraw.

The CHAIRMAN: The hon. member for Calgary East (Mr. Landeryou) should conform to the rules of the house, and withdraw.

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

And, behold, two blind men sitting by the way side, when they heard that Jesus passed by, cried out, saying, Have mercy on us, O Lord, thou son of David. And the multitude rebuked them, because they should hold their peace: but they cried the more, saying, Have mercy on us, O Lord, thou son of David.

And Jesus stood still, and called them, and said, What will ye that I shall do unto you? They say unto him, Lord, that our eyes may be opened. So Jesus had compassion on them, and touched their eyes: and immediately their eyes received sight, and they followed him.—Matt. xx, 30-34.

BUTTER AND GUNS.

The Finns should like us. We are such good customers. We make such bad bargains. Britain takes most of Finland's butter. We buy more and more of the produce of that country. In three years our adverse trade balance with Finland has increased by more than six millions. For the Finns don't buy from us. Indeed, they sell us three times what they purchase from us. Germany is a customer of Finland. But there the story is very different. The Finns buy more from Germany than they sell there. Why should we buy butter from Finland which we could buy in the Empire? Why should we buy their butter with money that Hitler will turn into guns.—(London Daily Express)

Letters To The Editor

Correspondents Discuss Various Topics

FEELS AT HOME

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—I was interested in "New Comer's" letter also the Saturday writer "Reader of your Examiner". I too was a new comer some years ago. We joined a large church, and nearly broke my heart from loneliness. Later we moved to a different district and the pastor of the church near us called on me and said "We need you in our church", and only one who was lonesome could appreciate that remark. He invited me to his church and Sunday School and in a few days a lady from that church called and invited me to her Sunday school class, and I went and that was the beginning of happy times.

I have met grand people, had such happy times and hear such a great preacher each Sunday. They have given me something to do and I am happy here now. There was also a place in that church for my family. It would give me great pleasure and joy to meet "New Comer" and her Saturday writer and introduce you both to some fine friendly people, who would show you there is one church that would make you feel at home; it is the friendliest place in town.

May I have the pleasure of meeting either or both of you. I will also leave my name, address and phone number. Please call me or come and see me or even drop a note. I would be most happy to know you both.

FOOT AND MOUTH DISEASE

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—I noticed an article in your paper about Prof. Crofton and the foot and mouth disease. I am afraid you get excited over nothing. In the first place I never heard of poultry having it; we call it 'Aphthons fever.' Where did you get your figure of 70 million dollars loss. The two lambs referred to would probably have lived as I never heard of one dying of that disease alone. What it does is that cattle get so thin that unless special care is taken they will die of starvation. I have seen pieces in the paper where 50 per cent. of cases of Aphthons fever were fatal. I quote from N. B. Critchfield secretary of Agriculture for Pennsylvania.

It is known that practically 95 per cent. of the cases will recover without treatment except reasonably good care and he found that in one case infected animals had recovered before they could be destroyed. The reason for extreme measures he says is because it can be so readily transmitted from one animal to another and in the lowering of the value of those affected. We realize that the disease is not fatal and recovery will take place in a high percentage of cases without even a learned course of treatment.

That has been my experience too with this disease. There is fever if it comes in the mouth and the animal froths and dribbles and when the blister is down the part affected drops out and the animal starts to recover and the same thing happens in the foot. I came from England and we had it there on several occasions and I have no doubt that there have been some cases here too, as it is quite probable that every one would not know of it unless they had seen it before.

THE COUNTRY'S NEED

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—Re your editorial of March 4th, "An Obstacle in the Way", intending to belittle the ability of the Hon. W. D. Herridge to lead a new democratic reform party because he got his Washington post not through his services to the Conservative party, etc.

You are quite right; he was a newcomer to the Conservative party when he got the Washington appointment. But just that, the very fact that he is not a corrupt professional politician, and the fact that owing to his democratic reform ideas he broke away from the Conservative party when he found out that that party is being controlled by the reactionary moneyed interests. He could not join the Liberal party because the only difference between the two old parties is the name.

Speaking in Ottawa the other day, he said of the Liberal party the following:

"Now take the Liberal party. It has been the government of Canada for the last 3 1-2 years. Never has there been so perilous a time as this in our whole history. We are the prisoners of a false freedom. Want and unemployment are the proof of it, reaction is the cause of it. What says your government? Just as it runs away from want and unemployment, so this Liberal government tries to run away from world events now marching to destroy us, but it can run no longer for there is no longer any place for it to run. World events have over-taken us. We must turn and face them."

Now, Mr. Editor you will agree with me that Canada needs a Roosevelt, a democratic reform leader and organizer. We have in Canada various political and economic organizations which are artificially divided on petty differences, which have everything to gain by being united, and everthing to lose, even their very existance, by being divided.

Dying capitalism in Canada will do what dying capitalism has done in Germany, and is doing elsewhere—abolish all parliamentry and democratic institutions, and establish a Fascist barbarian civilization. Already we have the Leadership League organized by George McCullaugh, the Globe and Mail, and the capitalists from Bay and St. James Sts., who are demanding among other things the abolition of Provincial parliaments, and who are using the very same kind of propaganda as did Hitler and his Nazis.

The capitalist class of Germany knew that the people would not stand the suffering and want much longer, so they advocated socialism, not the Russian way, but the German way. The German people fell into that trap.

We must watch ourselves and guard our Canadian democratic institutions against it. The only way to do this, is by organizing into one party all the progressive and democratic peoples in Canada, and forming a government which will find jobs for our unemployed and security for our farmers and middle class of people. Unemployment, missery and want in the midst of plenty is an unpardoncrime. We owe it to our country to pull it out of the mess into which the ruling class has dragged it. The movement for democratic reforms is enveloping our country. It is the duty of every right thinking progressive man and woman to support it and work for it.

Yours sincerely,
R. H. RUSKIN.

WHY A COMMISSION?

Mr. Neill: . . . Above all, why should the Government evade the responsibility of dealing with the matter? (Of penitentiaries.) The minister is perfectly capable of handling this branch of his department; why not let him do it? why not a commission to administer the Post Office Department, which, instead of having only six offices, has hundreds and thousands of post offices to deal with? The Department of Public Works employ far more people and expends a great deal more money than the Department of Justice. Why not put a commission in there?—(Hansard report)

A Royal Ceremony—1860

When Her Gracious Majesty, the late Queen Victoria, in her foresight and wisdom decided to send her eldest son, H.R.H. Albert Edward to Canada, an important consideration was the laying of a foundation for a permanent capital for Canada.

Accordingly on Sept. 1, 1860, the young prince travelled to Ottawa by river steamer and there was met by 120 canoes each manned by 8 or 10 men "all costumed in red shirts". Midst speech making, music and ceremony the first Prince of Wales to visit Canada most ably performed his duty and the corner stone of the House of Parliament, to become world famous for its graceful design, was declared "well and truly laid".

Thirteen years before this historic occasion the Canada Life had issued its first policy. Over the past 92 years it has developed into a great co-operative enterprise. Today hundreds of thousands of policyholders entrust to it savings of over $265,000,000.

Radio Committee Declines To Ask Governors Reveal Minutes

OTTAWA, March 9—(CP).— The Parliamentary Radio Broadcasting cofmittee Thursday voted 7-5 not to ask the Board of Governors of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation to produce from their minutes excerpts regarding the broadcast of sponsored opinions over the C.B.C. network.

The motion for production of such sections of the minutes was made by Hon. Earl Lawson (Cons., South York) as the committee discussed the denial of C.B.C. network facilities to George McCullagh, publisher of the Toronto Globe and Mail.

L. V. Brockington, C.B.C. chairman, went over in detail for the committee the Corporation's policy against permitting use of its network for the broadcasting of opinion or propaganda, which might, nevertheless, be broadcast from any private station Mr. Lawson sought to have produced the record of the Board of Governors' decision in that regard. After considerable discussion, Mr. Lawson made a motion to that effect.

An amendment was introduced by Sam Factor (Lib. Toronto-Spadina) to table the motion until Mr. Brockington had had time to consider the request, but it was eventually withdrawn when it was suggested this placed the C.B.C. chairman in the peculiar position of being invited to refuse the request before being instructed by the committee.

Mr. Brockington, finally declared firmly that the most microscopic examination, of anything produced could not prejudice the position of the Board of Governors.

Agreeable To Revelation.'

Personally he did not care if the entire minutes of the C.B.C. were produced. They would indicate merely that nine men and women had devoted two years of faithful and meticulous care to the conduct of the C.B.C.

"I, and I am sure the Board of Governors, don't care personally whether the minutes are seen or not. But we are custodians of an ideal and some of us would have definite ideas as to the final effect of their production on this autonomous organization," he said.

In his outline of the Board's policy, he had given the substance of any minute and policy evolved over the months on that particular issue, he said. It had always been understood the C.B.C. would never allow purchase of time on its network for the broadcast of opinion or propaganda.

The Board had approved the action of the general manager regarding the recent "little event in Ontario," although it was perhaps regrettable more notice had not been given to Mr. McCullagh of the refusal of the C.B.C. network to him. That incident was past. The committee might well now help the Board to lay down definite rules for the regulation of quasi-political broadcasts.

In matters affecting public ownership, the autonomous principle often died from the wounds received in the house of its friends, said H. S. Hamilton (Lib. Algoma West.) The C.B.C. was a unit, of which Mr. Brockington was spokesman and he had taken responsibility for certain matters He had explained why the general manager had acted and it seemed to Mr. Hamilton that in asking for the minutes the comittee was seeking to go in behind the scenes.

He had faith in the position Mr. Brockington had expounded. C.B.C. policy was in the hands of a capable group of men and he was going to show his faith and confidence in them by opposing the motion for the minutes, Mr. Hamilton said.

Denial of the C.B.C. network facilities to Mr. McCullagh occupied the committee when the sitting opened, Mr. Brockington was questioned by Mr. Lawson.

Ex-Cornwall Lawyer Given 18 Months

Hessell, 35, former Cornwall lawyer and Conservative candidate in Stormont in the last Ontario election, pleaded guilty in court here to-day to three charges of conversion, involving amounts totalling $4,568. He was sentenced to 18 months definite and six months indefinite in the Ontario Reformatory on each charge, the terms to run concurrently.

Hessell's case was heard by Magistrate Leslie Clayton, of Ottawa. Hartworth Atkinson, Brockville, was special Crown prosecutor. Hessell, who disappeared from Cornwall last June when the first charge was laid, surrendered to United States immigration authorities at Rouses Point, N.Y., on February 6, and was turned over to the Canadian police. The charges were preferred by Allen E. Cline, Mrs. Sadie Coldberg, and Robert H. Hamill, all of Cornwall.

Mt. Pleasant Roads Still In Bad Shape

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MOUNT PLEASANT, March 9.—Motor traffic in this section is impassibel on the side lines and even on the country road it was Sunday noon before two county ploughs got through cuts, which had blown in full with Friday's night's storm.

Thursday the Emily plough, which meets the Cavan plough at the boundary had not been able to get through, leaving the main road from Mount Pleasant to Omemee blocked.

For the past two months it has been necessary for Mount Pleasant motorists to go four concessions north to connect with No. 7 Highway or five concessions south to Cavan and via No. 7 in order to reach Peterborough, where they may market their produce.

The side lines are entirely blocked for motor traffic and although the main road from Mount pleasant east to Peterborough is only four and one quarter miles long, (including 2½ miles of swamp), until it links in with the county road from Peterborough west, no move has as yet been taken to open this short piece of road.

Many Crippled Hands Due To Carelessness

ATLANTA, Ga., March 9—(AP) —Hand infections resulting from blisters, cuts and removal of slivers were declared to-day to be the cause of almost 10 per cent of all permanent disability in the United States.

Claw hands and "frozen" hands are frequently the result of infection form such simple things as opening blisters, failing to protect abrasions and squeezing small infected areas such as pimples, Dr. Maguire, of Charleston, S.C., told the Southeastern Surgical Congress here.

Fifty percent of all hands injuries are the resul of infections from such common causes and many of these in permanent disability not only from the negligence of the patient but from inability of the physician or surgeon to treat them properly.

Frequently the simple inflamed spot on a finger will spread within a few hours and eventually result in amputation of the finger, hand, entire arm or cause death as the infection floods through the blood stream, Dr. Maguire said.

Tanks Soon Stop Madrid's Reds

MADRID, March 9 — (AP). — General Jose Miaja's National Defence Government announced by radio today the surrender of republican army chiefs involved in a communist uprising and the quick cessation of fighting indicated complete suppression of the revolt.

The announcement came shortly after revolting communists surrendered strategic points in the face of tank and hand grenade attacks by Miaja forces striving to put down the local war within Spain's civil war.

National defence forces were told to remain at their posts and not fire unless attacked. The absence of fighting indicated the communists rebels had accepted a Miaja ultimatum to surrender or suffer heavy aerial bombardment.

The Communists had risen against the Regime because, they alleged, it intended to capitulate to the Nationalist Government of General Francisco Franco, which holds three-fourths of Spain.

Miaja had sent an ultimatum to the rebels demanding surrender by noon today (7 a.m. EST), otherwise, the ultimatum said, they would be bombed into submission.

Fresh disturbances developed in Madrid about 8:30 p.m. last night (3:30 p.m. EST), with sharp sniping in the northern and eastern sections of the city.

Carabineros, forming a uniformed force which acted as customs police before the civil war started and which has remained loyal to the republic throughout the conflict, were used by the Miaja Regime to attack the Rebels with hand grenades.

Healing Is Ascribed By Priest To Seventh Son Of Seventh Son

SHERBROOKE, Que., March 9—(CP) — A Roman Catholic priest who said he believed in "the powers of the seventh son," testified in court yesterday that J. Anatole Desfosses, charged with witchcraft, magic and fortune telling, cured him of a skin ailment after hospital treatment failed.

Rev. Lucien Leguerrier, parish priest at near-by Bishopton, Que., said he suffered from skin disease for a considerable time and received treatment in a Sherbrooke Hospital for twelve days and from a physician for several months without success.

He then went to Desfosses and was cured. Desfosses, he said, gave him no advice nor treatment, but merely told him to be patient.

"Do you believe in the powers of the seventh son?" asked Crown Prosecutor Drolet.

"Yes I do," the priest replied.

"Do you believe Desfosses has power from the devil?"

"No, but it is beyond my comprehension," answered Father Leguerrier.

The priest was called as a defense witness shortly after the Crown rested its case. Defense Attorney Emile Rioux indicated he would call sixty-eight witnesses.

Mr. Justice C. D. White rejected a motion of non-suit made by Rioux who claimed the Crown failed to prove any part of the indictment. The judge said it was up to the jury to decide on the merits of the case.

Eugene Gagnon, 17, Desfosses' secretary, told the court that an interview given two women investigators who went to see his employer lasted no more than two minutes and that Desfosses did not speak to the callers other than to mention a future appointment.

"He hardly said anything, Gagnon answered when asked what Desfosses told the women. "I took down their names and their complaints and he gave them each a book and asked them to meet him in Quebec a week later."

"He said nothing about curing them?"

"Not a word."

Gagnon was then presented with reports filed yesterday by the women, Mrs. Roch Caron and Mrs. Leon Charles Davingnon.

"You will notice," said Rioux, "that the two ladies claim they were with Desfosses for the better part of half an hour. Is that true?"

"That is absolutely false," Gagnon replied. "They were with him for about two minutes."

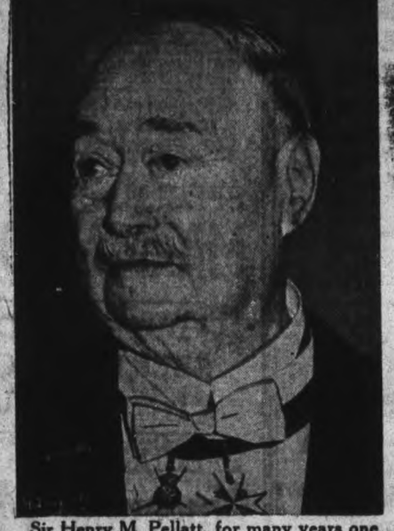
Colorful Canadian Knight Dies In Toronto



Sir Henry M. Pellatt, for many years one of Canada's most spectacular financiers, is dead in Toronto. Casa Loma, TOP, built by Sir Henry, still rises above the city. The giant castle took three years to build and cost nearly $1,500,000. The grand old Canadian knight is pictured, LOWER RIGHT, in the uniform of the Queen's Own Rifles at the time he took 750 men of the regiment to England, at his own expense, to attend army manoeuvres. Another picture of Sir Henry, LOWER LEFT, was taken on the occasion of his 80th birthday.

Japs Kill 1,500 In Bombing

SHANGHAI, March 9 — (AP) — Authoritative neutral foreign sources at Ichang, goal of a Japanese offensive into the heart of China, reported today that 1,500 persons had been killed or wounded there in two days of terrific bombardment by squadrons of Japanese warplanes.

It is estimated that 120 bombs had crashed into the centre of the city which lies on the Yangtze river, 1,000 miles by water from Shanghai. The ancient north wall was levelled along with many shops and houses.

There was no definite word on the situation of 100 foreigners at Ichang, mostly missionaries. It was not believed any foreigners were injured or any foreign property damaged.

In view of past tactics, foreign observers at Shanghai believed the Japanese would follow up the air raids with an advance westward from the Han river, Yangtze tributary, 75 miles away.

One of the recent series of Japanese bombing forays into the Chinese northwest brought a complaint to the British Embassy.

The English Baptist Mission reported to the Embassy that the mission hospital at Sian, Shensi province capital, was struck and seriously damaged yesterday when 18 planes bombed the city. A Chinese nurse was killed.

The Mission emphasized that the hospital had been plainly marked with a Union Jack painted on the roof and another spread out on the grounds. In all, seven persons were reported killed and 18 wounded in the raid.

Raid Coastal Points.

Japanese planes and cruisers bombed and shelled coastal points of Southern Fukien Province in what may be the prelude to extension of the Japanese invasion to a new quarter of the South China coast.

There were no reports of an attempted landing, but dispatches from Amoy told of severe punishment from sea and air of mainland points opposite Kulangsu, international settlement island. Flight of bombers flew over Kulangsu several times.

Four planes from a carrier outside the Amoy harbor continued the bombing attacks in conjunction with cruiser operations.

The Japanese-sponsored press at Amoy reported 100 persons had been killed in the attacks since Monday but offered no explanation of the operations.

Japanese cruisers shelled the Sengsoo Road ferry terminus opposite Kulangsu on Tuesday and Wednesday, wiping out Haicheng village. Thirty persons there were reported killed. Others were buried in the ruins.

'Church Of Warm Heart' Is Theme Of Mission Meeting On Cold Day

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, March 9. — In spite of the cold nor'-wester which reached almost the proportions of a gale on Tuesday afternoon, the members of the W.M.S. of Lakefield United Church turned out fairly well for the March meeting which was held at the home of Mrs. J. A. Porter.

Mrs. J. Knox and Miss M. Sanderson were responsible for the splendid program which was woven around the theme, "The Church of the Warm Heart." Mrs. E. V. Millage presided at the piano.

An appropriate poem, "The Greatest Church in All the Land," was read by Mrs. C. S. Tanner. Miss Sanderson depicted the ideal church.

The Scripture reading, called the Parable of the Great Surprise, Matthew 25, 31-46, was read by Mrs. S. Pearson. Prayer wa soffered by Mrs. Porter after which Mrs. Percy Darling dealt with the chapter from the study book, "The World in Canada."

Tells Mission Work.

Mrs. Darling's talk was both interesting and informative, as she graphically depicted the church reaching out to heal through her marine missions on the East and West coasts of Canada, where the missionaries risk their lives. Five boats doing missionary work are operated by the United Church on the Atlantic Coast between Newfoundland and Labrador. Often, around a portable organ on the rocks, men gather to sing old hymns and listen to the missionary's address and prayers. The mission boats carry literature, medical supplies, clothing, and the Spirit of Christ.

Have Sailor-Preachers.

On the Pacific Coast six missionary vessels of the United Church operate between Vancouver and Port Simpson. They also patrol the west coast of Vancouver Island and Queen Charlotte Island. They visit Indian villages, lumber camps, canneries, and lighthouses. These boats are manned by daring seamen who are also able preachers, many of them having their medical degree.

Mrs. Darling spoke also of the educational work carried on by the W.M.S. through the school homes and boarding school at strategic points through the West.

Mrs. W. W. Yale, presided for the business items, and Mrs. E. J. Millage acted as secretary.

A letter was read from some recipients in the West in appreciation of last year's bale.

Mrs. W. W. Leonard spoke on the advisability of holding a rally to hear Miss Halliday, returned missionary from Africa. On motion it was decided to hold this rally on April 17 at 2.30 p.m., in the Sunday School Room, and to invite Bridgenorth, Warsaw, and the sister societies of the village. Afternoon tea will be served.

Mrs. Yale spoke of the annual convention of the Ontario Temperance Federation to be held in Toronto this week, and which she proposes attending.

Mrs. Yale offered the prayer of benediction.

During the social half-hour which followed, Mrs. John Hendren poured tea and Mrs. Darling assisted with the refreshments.

Finding Musicians

MONTREAL, March 9—(CP). — Many promising Canadian musicians have been discovered through music festivals which are doing more for musical art than any other organization in the world, Dr. J. Frederic Staton, British Symphony conductor, said yesterday in an address.

The numbers on the program included a vocal solo by Miss Alva Mowatt and a reading by Miss Velma Runnells, at the conclusion of which Donald Holmes and Leonard Smith conducted a quiz contest. At an executive meeting which followed plans were made to entertain members of St. Andrew's Y.P.S. and the A.Y.P.A. at a joint meeting during the latter part of March

Tourist Inquiries More Numerous Than For The Past Few Years

A bumper crop of tourists this summer is indicated these days at the Chamber of Commerce, where in the past couple of months more than a hundred enquiries about the Kawartha district have been received from all parts of the United States.

Secretary J. J. Dorris anticipates a much greater tourist trade for the Kawartha district this year than last. With so many enquiries this early in the year, he believes a rush of requests will be forthcoming in the remaining months before the summer season begins.

Most of the applications that are received ask for replies by some specific date late in May or early in June, he said, but the Chamber of Commerce doesn't wait until then, mails out replies immediately. "If we can sell them on the idea of spending their holidays here, they will plan to come from now until their holidays arrive. On the other hand, if we leave the reply until later, they may receive information about some other place in the meantime and decide on it."

17 In Four Days

During the past four days seventeen enquiries from nearly as many towns and cities in the United States have been received. Furthest distant was from Seattle, Washington, close to 4,000 miles distant. A young man in that city wrote he is attending a Y.M.C.A. conference in Toronto this summer and would like to come to the Kawartha district for some maskinonge fishing over a week-end.

Other enquiries have come from such places as Jamestown, N.Y., Akron, Ohio, Detroit, Michigan; Conneaut, Ohio; LeRoy, N. Y.; Waterman, Pennsylvania; Cleveland, Ohio; Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania; Kenmore, N.Y.; Bluefield, West Virginia; and Morristown, New Jersey.

HAVELOCK

Ministers Enjoy Cooperative Talk

HAVELOCK, March 9.—"Co-operation Movement" was the subject of Rev. Andrew McLauchlin's address to the members of the district Ministerial Association, when they met at the United Church parsonage here on Monday afternoon. Rev. R. E. Lemon of Norwood acted as chairman during the meeting.

Rev. Andrew McLauchlin speaking on the above subject outlined its origin at Toad Lane in Rochdale in 1843 and its remarkable spread in recent years. He described the consumer and producer type of organization based on the Rochdale principles, and the credit unions or character banks which are making great progress. By eliminating the high charges of the finance corporations, the credit union makes a larger purchasing power and renders great service in emergencies such as sickness. The most remarkable of modern movements is that directed by the St. Francis Xavier University at Antigonish N. S., with over 1,100 groups and rapidly blanketing the eastern part of Canada and Newfoundland. The secret of success was in cash business, fair wages and fixed return on capital were the other main features of the movement, he said.

Discussion of ways to help local merchants in the present business difficulty brought condemnation on those who pay cash to out of town concerns, then long term credit at home. A little more customer co-operation would help merchants a lot.

At the close the members were entertained at lunch served by Mrs. A. McLauchlin and Miss Betty McLauchlin, who with Rev. McLauchlin were thanked by the visiting clergy for their hospitality.

The April meeting will be held at the Marmora United church parsonage, where the association will be the guests of Rev. C. W. Hollingsworth.

Goebbels Publishes His Prize $40 Nazi Joke As Proof Humor Not Dead In Germany

BERLIN, March 9 — (AP). — This joke won $40 today as the best submitted in propaganda minister Joseph Goebbels' contest to prove there is humor in Nazi Germany:

"I won't perform in this costume," says a scantily-clad girl wearing a pre-war army helmet and sabre, to a paunchy male, who is scratching his head in astonishment.

"Why not," the man asks. "Does one see too much?"

"Rubbish, you old fool," the girl replies, "—too little!"

Five prizes of $40 to $4 were offered for the best jokes. Dr. Goebbels' newspaper Der Angriff published the work of the winner, a humble construction worker who illustrated his three jokes with his own handiwork. Some Nazi readers called the results "healthy eroticism."

Dr. Goebbels started the contest Feb. 4 when he expelled five cabaret artists from the Reich's culture chamber—meaning that they they might no longer follow their profession in Nazi Germany—fog quips about the national socialist regime. Goebbels declared that "Nazidom will not be derided."

The contest was started because of apparent fears that the action against the entertainers might give the impression that there is no humor in Germany.

PILES GO QUICK

With Dr. Leonhardt's Prescription.

Many sufferers from itching, bleeding or protruding piles have found out that quick relief can be had with an internal medicine.

Bad circulation of blood in the lower bowel is the cause of piles. The veins are congested and flabby, the bowel walls weak. That is why an internal medicine like HEM-ROID should be used. HEM-ROID stimulates the circulation, relieves the pressure of blood in the veins of the lower bowel, and helps to heal and restore the sore, tender parts.

HEM-ROID is the prescription of Dr. J. S. Leonhardt, who spent several years of his professional life in finding the cause of piles and the medicine that would remove them. His medicine succeeds because it tends to correct the cause.

No matter what kind of piles you have or how long you have had them, if you want to try HEM-ROID, you have our promise to give you back your money if you do not find quick and satisfying relief, after using just one bottle.

Baby Is Born In Auto As Stork Beats Creeping Snowmobile

Russell, Man., March 9 (CP)

THE STORK won a victory over a blizzard, a snowmobile and an automobile and baby bird was born on the highway 11 miles from this town 90 miles northwest of Brandon.

Henry Hagen undertook Monday to drive Mrs. Frank Bird by snowmobile from her home at Dropmore to hospital in Russell, 20 miles south. But snowdrifts and the blizzard took toll of time. Realizing time was valuable, Hagen telephoned ahead for an automobile to meet him at the open highway.

W.I. Address Features "Adult Education"

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HAVELOCK, March 9. — "Adult Education" was the subject of an interesting address by R. W. Goheen, principal of the local High School, at the March meeting of the Havelock Branch, Women's Institute, held on Monday afternoon in the Council Chamber. Mrs. Robert McCutcheon, vice-president, occupied the chair in the absence of the president, Mrs. John Armstrong.

The treasurer reported a bank balance of $66.73, and reports were also received from the other standing committees. Relief convener Mrs. Charles Taylor asked for donations of wearing apparel. Mrs. R. F. Covert, member of the sick and visiting committee, reported having made six calls during the month.

It was decided to discontinue the milk supply for the public school at the end of March.

The final meeting of the Institute year being in April, the conveners of the standing committees were asked to have their reports ready. A nominating committe, composed by Mrs. George Iles and Mrs. W. Rice, were appointed.

Guest speaker for the afternoon, Mr. Goheen gave a fine talk on "Adult Education," making a comparison of adults and children in this respect. Memory lasts longer in childhood, he said, and there is less need of individual attention. Adults have many means of securing education, so necessary to-day. There are the radio broadcasts by university professors, vocational school with special night classes in shopwork and household science, and numerous other methods by which grown people can gain knowledge."

Also on the program was a needlecraft demonstration by Mrs. George Iles on fagotting, who displayed several pieces illustrative of this work.

Mrs. H. W. Roche in her monthly "Current Events" column, recalled among other interecting facts, that March, the first month of spring, was dedicated to the God of Mars; and that the Welshmen celebrated recently their national holiday, the leek being their country's emblem.

A humorous St. Patrick's Day reading was given by Mrs. James Freeman, and a vocal solo was contributed by Mrs. C. Jamieson, the song being, "She is the Daughter of Mother Machree." She was accompanied at the piano by Mrs. R. McCutcheon.

A lovely lunch in true St. Patrick's Day style was served by the lunch committee, composed of Mesdames H. Gordon, C. Taylor, F. Wrightly, and H. Pollock.

ST. JOHN'S GAIN CHURCH BANTAM TITLE OVER GEORGE STREET

Junior Teams Still Tied In Playoffs

St. John's won the bantam championship of the Church Hockey League last night at the Brock Street Rink with a 6-3 verdict over George Street, while All Saints and St. Paul's battled it out to another junior draw, 1-1, to leave that series undecided.

The bantam game was the third playoff, each having won one. St. John's forced play to earn the nod in a close tussle, using their extra size and speed to advantage. Wellwood and Clarke scored in a 1-1 first frame, and St. John's hit a scoring splurge in the second, Frank and Clarke each counting twice. Smith scored for George Street to make it 5-2 heading into the third. Burnham and Frank each scored in the wind-up heat. Moore and Frank Clarke were extra good for the winners, with Smith, Quirt and Wellwood best for the losers. Carter, Kingdon and Coones also worked hard. St. John's were runners-up last year and George Street won it two seasons ago. Teams:

George Street — Goal, Quirt; defence, Smith, Powell; centre, Wellwood; wings, Carter, Burnham; subs., McCumrach, Morrow, Kingdon.

St. John's — Goal, Moore; defence, Frank, Scott; centre, Clark; wings, Bond, Coones; sub., Farrow.

Referee—D. Charlton.

Seventh Tilt.

It was the seventh junior game, three ending in ties, with each crew having won two tilts. Last night's scrap was as close as it sounds with St. Paul's tenacious front line checking better and having an edge on combination, but All Saints' showing more speed. St. Paul's had a margin on play in the first frame and were almost as good as their rivals in the second. The final score came in the third period when Watson tallied for St. Paul's, there being some question of an offside on it. All Saints put on the pressure, but seemed lost when McDougall was penalized near the finish. Playing short a man, they evened it at 14 minutes. Deering bulging the twine. Both goalies looked good with the rival defences, Leather and J. McMillen especially, giving them fine support. McDougall, Abraham, Watson and Dundas sparkled up front. There were but three penalties in the clean but rugged contest. The teams:

All Saints—Goal, Lacey; defence, Leather, P. Morley; centre, McDougall; wings, B. Morley, Deering; subs., Abraham, Stinson, Robinson.

St. Paul's — Goal, McBride; defence, Czumrik, J. McMillen; centre, J. Easton; wings, Lockington, Watson; subs., T. McMillen, Dundas, G. Easton.

Referee—J. Dunkerley.

A belated word on the ex-Kingston puckists, who fell before the Petes last series: "Kingston seniors," say their scribe, "had more thrills on the road to the hockey game than in the actual game, and some of them were fortunate to escape serious injury. One car, carrying six passengers, turned over twice into a snow bank about three miles from Port Hope, but fortunately no one was injured. Kingston players praised the consideration of the Peterborough club in having a doctor on duty at the hockey game in case of injuries. When Kingston players were hurt the doctor volunteered his help without the usual rushing around a rink for medical assistance. The Peterborough doctor put three stitches over Tommy Boyd's eye, patched up Stan Scrutton's face, and examined Tabby Gow's leg."

They packed in the cash customers the other night in the Jock Harty Arena when West Point and R.M.C. staged their traditional tilt with all its fanfare. Snappy military uniforms, evening gowns, movie cameras, etc., with the U.S. cadets gaining their first win, a 3-2 nod, in many seasons. It is a point of pride with these clubs that they never have a penalty—and we hear the referee calmly ignores trips, slashes, et al, to keep that record intact. As Wm. Walshe pens: "James Sutherland was officially appointed penalty time keeper for the game, which is this scribbler's idea of an easy job!"

Two Outa Three

It seems that the O.H.A. senior "B" round-robin final series may run till about April Fool's Day. On account of the top team when the serial is over isn't the champion, nossuh. When the schedule winds up about March 24th, doggoned if the top two of the four teams don't then meet in a two-in-three series to declare a champ! Yep, and third game, if necessary, will be on the ice of the team having the greatest number of points. Or if they're tied on points, the team scoring the greatest number of goals is given the preference. Still, the fans go for these playoffs—seeing the best clubs in the province fighting it out—and the N.H.L. setup is really funnier, what with seven clubs playing all winter to eliminate one team from the playoffs. An odd system, indeed.

Chatham Maroons are here Friday to play the Petes and another huge crowd is expected at the Brock. The Maroons played all winter in the strong Mich.-Ont. circuit, drawing 10,000 and more in twin bills in Detroit. Maroons and Petes both just gotta win to get in there and they'll be playing for keeps in a real thriller on local ice tomorrow in the evening.

Don't Live Right

Guess the Petes just don't live right. They couldn't and have such lousy luck. Last night they dropped a 5-4 decision to Waterloo Tigers in Kitchener, after leading 'em most of the game. Somewhat similar to their loss here to the Falls, but even worse. This one hurt twice as bad. Ya don't mind losing to a team that finishes stronger, but the Petes finished as strong as the Tigers last night and looked a bit better than them all through, yet they dropped their second straight in the playoff series. They are now tied with Chatham with two reverses, whilst Waterloo and the Falls have two wins each. Niagara ought to take the Tigers twice, so it's up to the Petes to trim Chatham twice and Waterloo here—and they claim they can do that very thing. We believe they can beat George Hainsworth's hopefuls here—and apparently Chatham aren't world-beaters, either.

* * * * * *

Last night's affair was a reverse horse-shoe for the Buckland boys. They couldn't get the breaks nohow, and they were madder than four bears with sore paws as they shuffled out of the three-decker arena. They had a goal stolen on them, saw another tallied on a breakaway, another pulled in by their own goalie and the final one deflected into their net with less than a minute of play left—and if that isn't tough luck, it'll do till something tougher comes along. Waterloo hung up their 15th straight win of the season but it was a tighter fit than three fat femmes in a Baby Austin rumble seat, and no fooling!

* * * * * *

A Bit O' Larceny

How did the theft occur? Well, 'twas in the third period and McNulty pushed one in during a scramble with the goalie flat on the ice. The referee, coming up from behind, tooted his whistle and the red light failed to flash. Why? Simply because a gee named Hintzberger (a spare member of the Waterloo team) was the goal-judge. The Petes swarmed around him and he first said it was in but after the whistle, and later said it wasn't in at all. McNulty tried to knock him conk off but a wire screen interfered. Many home fans near the goal stated the puck was in all right, and the goalie admitted it was (though not sure if the whistle had gone first or not) but a long and hot argument by the Petes got 'em nowhere, the referee saying he didn't see it. And that one hurt like a dash of iodine on a gash.

* * * * * *

It was a swell scrap, and a honey for the homesters to cop. A fast, close and exciting tilt throughout. The Petes worked hard, after their long trip and previous tough tussle with the Big Bear bunch, but they have played better hockey this winter. Our second line shaded the starting trio, while Gray went best on defence and Harding looked good again in goal. But he had a tough break on a couple. The Tigers are not too heavy but fast, persistent and tricky players—the kind who forecheck well and break like blue streaks when an opening pops. They'll be tough here put the Petes should click in this one, surely to goodness to gosh to golly! Nichol still had a stiff leg from the last game, so stayed on the sidelines. Gardner is playing a good steady game lately, and nicest play of the night was a solo sortie by Tompkins through the Tiger defence to flip the black biscuit by Mr. Voll in the Waterloo igloo. Yep, the lager and pretzels down Kitchener way are still good.

League Playoff Battles Open March 21

NEW YORK, March 9—(CP). — The stage is set to-day for the National Hockey League playoffs and all that remains to be decided is what teams will make the Stanley Cup elimination rounds.

At a meeting yesterday, the league governors set dates for the preliminary elimination series of the playoffs, which will hold irrespective of what teams finish where in the final league standings.

With Boston Bruins and New York Rangers already home in first and second place, respectively, the first game of the four-of-seven series between these teams was set for March 21 at New York, the Bruins choosing to play their initial game away from home.

Other dates for this series: Rangers at Boston, March 23 and 26; Boston at Rangers, March 28, and if additional games are needed Rangers at Boston, March 30; Boston at Rangers, April 1, and the final game at Boston April 2.

The two-of-three series between the third and fourth and fifth and sixth teams will be played March 21, 23, 25 or 26 to provide against a Sunday game in Toronto. The series between the winner of these two brackets will be played March 28, 30 and April 1. Dates for the cup round will be set at a later date.

The governors accepted in principle a proposal by Connie Smythe of Toronto Maple Leafs to put referees and linesmen under season contract to the league, referees at minimum salaries of $2,500 and linesmen at $1,000. Final decision on the proposal was left to the annual meeting of the leageu at Boston May 13.

Rotational System.

Officials for the play-off series will be appointed on a rotational system at the discretion of League President Frank Calder.

Mr. Calder reported the new form of misconduct penalty—$25 fine and 10 minutes in the "pen"—is serving the purpose intended. It is cutting down the number of misconduct infractions. The fine was tacked on at the last governors' meeting here, about six weeks ago. In that period referees have deemed it necessary to impose only four misconduct penalties and that, said Mr. Calder, is a sharp reduction from earlier times.

The governors also voted to have all officials instructed that all rules must be rigidly enforced during the playoffs. In last season's title round charges of lax enforcement were heard.

Two minor rule clarification were decided on. One provides that a puck shot by a player from his own defence zone will not be "iced" if it hits an opposing player before entering the opposite goaling zone. The other determines the point of a face-off when a puck hops the board after hitting a player. The face-off will be at the spot the rubber jumps the fence — not where it struck the player.

It was also decided to permit New York World Fair authorities to include the Stanley Cup in a special exhibit of famous sports trophies at the Fair.

WATERLOO TIGERS COP A 5-4 SENIOR WIN OVER THE PETES

Locals Outlucked In Hot Duel To Drop Second Struggle Of Senior "B" Playoff Series

In a tough-luck tilt in Kitchener last night, the Petes dropped a 5-4 decision to Waterloo Tigers. It was the locals' second straight loss in the O.H.A. senior "B" round-robin playoff series, and the second straight series win for Waterloo—which has won 15 games in a row this season. A good-sized crowd of fans watched a thrilling tussle.

A deflected goal in the last minute of play beat the luckless locals, after a Waterloo goal-judge thefted them of a certain marker earlier. The Petes led most of the contest, having a 2-1 edge in the first period and being in front 3-2 going into the third. The Tigers tied it up and then went ahead halfway through the third but the visitors sewed up the score at 4-all with five minutes to play. Seconds were left in the game when Waterloo scored the winner to send the fans home happy.

Early in the third, McNulty pushed the puck by Voll into the Tigers' cage in a scramble, but the goal-judge refused to flash the light, though the goalie admitted it was in. The referee didn't see the play in the mixup and refused to allow it, despite a hot argument. Otherwise the game was free of hostilities, but rugged and very fast and exciting all the way between the well-matched outfits.

Speedy Squad

Waterloo presented a flock of fast skaters who tore into the corners to forecheck the Petes closely and who broke fast from their own blue line to suck in rival forwards. They had class, but did not appear as strong as the Falls, and the Petes had tough luck in losing. The locals also played a good game, though not up to their best form after the long trip—and two tough games on two nights—and they muffed some fine scoring chances in this fray. One of the Waterloo goals was scored on a breakaway with the Petes ganging up.

There were no standouts on the Petes' team over the entire route, though Gray turned in a fine game on defence and the Petes' second line of Creighton, Coughlin and McNulty looked a bit better than the starting trio. Harding handled a bunch of tough ones in a good showing, and the rest of the squad worked hard and deserved a win. Voll was tough to beat in the winners' net, and Couch, Bauer, Grau and Clair looked the best of the Waterloo Tigers.

Petes Tally

It was speedy and pretty even early in the first frame, with a Coughlin-Creighton drive making Voll hop. The Petes' second line kept pressing till they tallied, Coughlin counting a nice one at close range on assists from McNulty and Creighton. Harding had to dive to block a blast by Kropf and Weir came close on a return rush. It was hot and exciting, as the fans kept yelling at the speed and action. Grau was robbed by Harding and the Petes continued to look a shade better. They made it 2-0 when Starr slammed in a corner passout by Kingdon at Voll's doorstep. Tompkins was chased for tripping and Waterloo pressed hotly and tallied when Grau's angle shot was pulled in by Hardings stick. Later Crowe was waved off for boarding and again the Tigers tore in dangerously till Clair got the air for charging the goalie at the finish.

With all back early in the second, play was fast and furious, mostly even, with both netminders kept busy. The period was half shot when Waterloo tied up the count on a neat play, Grau backhanding in Vrooman's pass in close. Bauer was gated for tripping and the Petes tried hard to counter but he returned with no damage done. A Tompkins-Weir try looked good and then Gardner scored on Kingdon's rebound with the goalie off balance to make it 3-2. It was fast as exciting the rest of the way with the homesters ganging up but unable to dent the hemp before the last gong.

Ganging Up

The Waterloo speedsters began ganging up in the third, four and five going on the attack, but the Petes bothering them with threatened breakaways. Gray pulled a couple of neat rushes and a Coughlin-McNulty try did everything but click on the goal-mouth. Harding was crowded, too, with several homsters around him frequently and slinging hot rubber. Bauer blasted a hot shot from defence to beat Ray finally for the tying marker and the Petes went on the attack once more. Gray and Tompkins in turn got in close on good efforts, and then McNulty scored in a scramble but it was not allowed, a long and hot argument proving fruitless. Clair went off for tripping and the Petes threatened till Bauer broke loose and scored handily. With all back again, the visitors swarmed in often and finally Tompkins tore through the defence alone on a nice bit of work and backhanded it home to sew up the score. It was hot and even then, with a Coughlin-Creighton drive close, till Weir went over the wall for tripping to save a goal. Five Tigers tried desperately but Weir was back when, with less than a minute left, Kropf counted in close from Kreuger, the puck being deflected off the former's stick. The Petes were unable to tie it again before the bell.

The teams:

Petes: Goal, Harding; defence, Gardner and Gray; centre, Kingdon; wings, Starr and Tompkins; subs, Weir, Crowe, Creighton, Coughlin and McNulty.

Waterloo: Goal, Voll; defence, Couch and Hause; centre, Bauer; wings, Vrooman and Grau; subs, Koppesser, Clair, Kropf, Kreuger and Smith. ....

Madoc Whips Tweed Terriers 5-1 But Loses Round On 8-6 Total

(Examiner Correspondence.)

TWEED, March 9—In the second game of the semi-finals of the Trent Valley League Madoc Greenshirts defeated the Tweed Terriers before a packed house at the local arena on Wednesday night by a score of 5-1, but were eliminated on the series 8-6, by virtue of the 7-1 defeat on Monday night at Madoc.

One of the largest crowds in year, nearly 800 fans, packed into the arena last evening, to witness one of the best games in seasons, especially so, as Madoc had to fight all the way to get into the finals, but failed under the close checking of the Terriers, who played strictly defensive hockey all through the game.

The first period was scoreless. In the opening minutes of the second period, Madoc tallied their first counter when Akey broke through to drive a hard shot past Reeves. However, Elsbury came back and drove a backhand drive past Hollingsworth to tie the count. Hall and Akey tallied two more for the Madoc team in this period. Hayworth and W. Leal got the gate for tripping.

In the last period, the Terriers were held off the score sheet, while Madoc tallied twice with Lovelace and Hall getting the counters. The visitors attempted to equal the round score but were unable in the dying minutes of the game to break through the defensive wall before them, as the Terriers hung onto their two-goal advantage.

Goalies Stand Out

For the visitors, Hollingsworth in the nets, Akey and Hall, were the standouts of the team, while Reeves was the star of the home forces. Courneyea, Provost, Tummon and W. Leal stood out for the home forces with their close checking, which prevented a well organized attack being staged. On the play Madoc had the better of the game, but were unable to take advantage of their opportunities and were robbed of sure counters by Reeves, who played superb hockey in the nets for the home forces. As the result of eliminating Madoc Mic-Macs, who were the standout team of the season, and were away ahead of the league at the end of the regular schedule, the third-place Terriers meet Norwood at the local arena on Monday night, Norwood having won their series with Campbellford.

TRAINING CAMP BRIEFS

(By the Associated Press.)

NEW BRAUNFELS, Tex.— Manager Doc Prothro of the Phillies, foresees a man-sized job in shaping an infield. After watching two combinations work out yesterday, he said he plans a lot of experimenting. Leslie Powers, from California, particularly impressed the manager with his performance at first base.

LAKE CHARLES, Fla.—Fremont B. Conner, the "forgotten pitcher" at Philadelphia Athletics' camp, hoped to put on a uniform to-day for the first time since training started. Conner, recently of the North Carolina State League, became ill with grippe en route to camp.

AVALON, Calif.— Manager and Catcher Hartnett of Chicago Cubs shelved himself and Gus Mancuso for four-game intra squad series opening to-morrow. Instead, Bill Baker, obtained from Indianapolis, and Bob Garbark, will handle the catching assignments.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex.—Billy Sullivan, St. Louis Browns' holdout catcher, was en route here to-day after informing General Manager Bill Dewitt from Sarasota, Fla., he decided to accept the club's terms which call for a "less than 25 per cent reduction" on salary from last season. Previously Dewitt said he was willing to trade Sullivan.

LAKELAND, Fla.—Hank Greenberg, here to start training with Detroit Tigers Thursday, says he is going after the runs-batted-in record this season after having hit 58 homers a year ago in vain effort to equal Babe Ruth's mark.

"The boss (Owner Walter O. Briggs) seems interested in runs-batted-in," Greenberg said. He has led the American League twice in runs batted in with 170 in 1935 and 183, only one short of Lou Gehrig's mark, in 1937.

Remember When—

The most publicized holdout in baseball history ended nine years ago today when Babe Ruth signed a $160,000 two-year contract with the New York Yankees. Holder of most of baseball's slugging records, the portly outfielder retired from active competition in 1936.

Foxboro Holds Cannifton To 3-All Tie

(Examiner Correspondence.)

TWEED, March 9.—With Gordie Gay playing his most brilliant game of the season, Jack Stewart's Foxboro entry in the Central Hastings Rural Hockey League moved closer to the championship on Tuesday night as they held the flying Cannifton Greyhounds to a 3-3 tie, to take the semi-final group playoff 9-4 on the round.

They not only earned the right to meet Glen Ross for the championship but proved by their two recent games that they will give them a real battle all the way. The game was fast and clean with the Greyhounds carrying the play all evening, but a five-goal lead plus faultless performance by Gordie Gay in their nets was more than enough to carry them through. Down five goals, Jack Williams sent his Greyhounds after goals from the opening bell and they kept Foxboro hemmed in behind their own blueline for most of the sixty minutes.

The first counter was a genuine fluke and happened so quick that no one saw it but the goal umpire. Gay passed to Thompson from the face-off, he shot and it glanced off a Cannifton skate into the net, all in less than ten seconds. Russ Collins scored for Cannifton at the 11-minute mark and three minutes later gave L. Jarrell the pass for the second tally and a sizzling period ended 2-1 for the Greyhounds.

After four minutes of the second period V. Guay scored on a pass from Thompson to make it 2-2. Walt was chased for a minor and Empson was chased for tripping and the period ended in a two-all tie.

The final period was a continual drive by the Cannifton boys. The most brilliant play of the evening was a rush by V. Guay who outskated his rivals on a break-away and slipped it past Ross to make the score 3-2. From this point on Cannifton sent every man up. With about seven minutes left, Bert Bleekman clicked for Cannifton's third tally to tie the score on the game at three-all.

As a result of the game, Foxboro now go into the finals with Glen Ross, who led the league at the close of the regular schedule. Lineups:

Foxboro—Goal, Gay; defence, Nollie Guay and Walt; centre, V. Guay; wings, Normie Guay and Thompson; subs, Spencer, Gough, and Wright.

Chatham Here Friday Night

Chatham Maroons are here tomorrow (Friday) night to play the Petes at 8.30 o'clock in the Brock St. rink. It will be the locals' third game of the O.H.A. senior "B" round-robin playoff series, and their second one here. Their tilt at home next week to Waterloo may finish the Petes' season. They have dropped two playoffs and are now tied with Chatham, who have also lost two, so both squads will be battling bitterly in this fray to get back in the playoff running. Chatham lost 4-2 in the Falls and 6-3 in Chatham to Waterloo. The Petes dropped a 5-4 decision last night in Waterloo, so appear to have a slight edge on the burly Maroons in figures, though figures often lie.

It is a highly important playoff and will be another senior thriller. The big Maroons play a rugged style of hockey all winter in the fast Mich.-Ontario league, often before 10,000 fans at Detroit in twin bills. But they are likely to meet their match here as the desperate and speedy Petes fight for their first playoff win. The game should draw a huge crowd as the ice will be good and both clubs at top strength for the battle on Friday night.

Bert Hall Of Kitchener Paces Rink To Seven Consecutive Wins Downing 3 Unbeaten Squads In Day

By Louis V. Hunter
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

TORONTO, March 9.—(CP)—An Ontario rink that had its inception 12 years ago when two brothers sneaked into a curling club to get the "feel" of stones, threatened today Western Canada's consistent supremacy in the Macdonald's Brier competition for the dominion championship.

The brothers, Skip Bert and Vice-Skip Perry Hall of Kitchener, paced their rink to seven consecutive wins in the nine-game round-robin for the Tankard held by Manitoba. Ably flanked by Cam Seagram, former cricketer, and Ernie Parkes, who played professional hockey for Vancouver in 1920, they turned in a spectacular performance yesterday to upset three previously undefeated rinks.

The Kitchener rink turned back in succession Saskatchewan, Manitoba and British Columbia, adopting the favorite western style of "knockout" curling to do so. Steady and deadly accurate, Skip Hall, a cigarette almost constantly between his lips, led his rink first to a 9-8 win over Saskatchewan, then toppled Manitoba 6-5 and trounced British Columbia 13-6.

Into Final 2 Rounds

With the advantage of one more victory than British Columbia and Manitoba, Kitchener advanced into the final two rounds today against Alberta and Northern Ontario. Alberta has won only three games while Dan Millar's Haileybury rink has five wins. British Columbia and Manitoba met in an eighth-round encounter.

The smooth path of the Kitchener curlers was the highlight of the third day's play which broke up a five-way tie for first place.

While the crowded galleries centred attention on the duel between Skip Hall and Skip Rolly David of Vancouver, Ross Kennedy, the defending champion from Manitoba, barely managed on a neighboring ice to squeeze out an 11-10 win over Haileybury.

In the other matches Alberta had little trouble crushing New Brunswick 12-5 in the Maritime province's sixth defeat, while Saskatchewan, led by George Dunbar, drubbed Quebec, winless so far, 14-9. Not yet in the win column either, W. Limerick's four from New Brunswick fell before C. W. Durrant's Nova Scotians, 16-8.

Every Stone Counted.

With few exceptions, the Hall rink made every stone count in its three matches yesterday. The ends were close—a feature anyway of the Western style—and in only four of the 36 ends played during the day did it concede more than one point. In its 9-8 squeeze victory over Saskatchewan, Kitchener dropped a three and a two-end and last night British Columbia managed to obtain a brace of two-ends. In the 8-5 triumph over Manitoba, Ontario got the only two-end. The others all were singles.

When draws were needed Skip Hall was right on his toes, and his brother played as spectacularly. The entire rink was just as good at "knockout" as the Westerners.

Ontario scored draw shots to lead 3-1 going into the fifth end. Then Hall built a marvellous end to score five. Hall in-wicked for shot and knocked a British Columbia stone from the rings, with the rocks scattered in the four-foot. On the last end, Perry Hall raised his own stone while lying shot, and the skip had to deliver a wick and roll for one after David drew for two.

Another Thriller.

Northern Ontario and Manitoba delivered a thriller in their night match with the issue in doubt until the last stone. Millar scored a scattered three in the first end and Kennedy retaliated in the next with four through he had to raise a Haileybury rock to increase his count by two. Going into the eighth, Kennedy led 10-4 and Millar rallied to win the next three ends with a brace of two's and a one.

Northern Ontario had a tough break in the 10th end. They were lying two and a bad shot left Manitoba one-shot. Millar recovered by freezing against it and drawing another.

The last two ends were knockout. In the 12th Northern Ontario was lying with the two tying stones. Kennedy's chap and he blasted the Ontario shot from the rings to lie two, but Millar raised one, Kennedy laid a guard, and Millar countered by drawing around it with a difficult stone.

HAVELOCK

Labor Men Get Wood Lot Cook Fired

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HAVELOCK, March 9.—A deputation from the Havelock Labor Organization attended the March meeting of the village municipal council, Monday evening in the local council chamber. With T. W. Quinn acting as spokesman the group asked the council for their co-operation in trying to provide work for the unemployed. To the suggestion that the money now being expended for a cook at Young's wood camp, be used to provide transportation or bonus for the men at Sanderson's wood lot, the council complied with their request.

Reeve Seeney and members of the council assured the men their full co-operation, and as a committee will meet especially on Thursday night to discuss the local unemployment situation.

The clerk was instructed to notify the cook at Young's camp that they would not be responsible for his wages after March 11, and also to request Mr. Young to bring out the town's camp equipment at that time.

In an effort to create some work, Havelock will try to sell surrounding municipalities their requirements of cement tile, for this season, and the clerk was instructed to send out price lists on the different size tile which they can manufacture here.

In the correspondence, a claim was made by Mrs. R. Hill against the village for injuries sustained in a recent fall; this was referred to the insurance company, and the remainder of the correspondence ordered filed.

Uniform For Chief

The reeve was authorized to purchase a uniform and raincoat for the recently appointed chief constable, William Laing. A request from Laing for permission to engage the services of Village Solicitor D. F. Miller, for court cases in which it was deemed absolutely necessary, was granted.

On motion of Councillors Leeson and Ketchen, the grader will be used on the village streets the first soft day to try and remove some of the excess snow.

On motion of Councillors Ketchen and Leeson, the tax collector's time was extended to the April meeting.

The relief officer's report was received and the following accounts passed and ordered paid on motion of Councillors Wilde and Chiles: A. Leeson and Son, $25; James Squire, $19; George Smith, $2.24; R. Sanderson, $42; medical services and supplies based on 19 recipients, at 35c, $6.65.

The following general accounts were ordered paid on motion of Councillors Ketchen and Chiles: Dr. A. S. Thompson, $3; William Platt, scenery, $1; Hubble Hardware, repairs to pump, $1.25; C. Emery, wood for hall, $32.50; H. Baker, wood for hall, $20; Thomas Forsythe, snowplowing, $37.50; H. B. Puffer, postage, phone, off. transp., $9.95; D. O. Warsaw Family Is Left Homeless

(Examiner Correspondence.)

WARSAW, March 9 — A frame house, occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Harry Digweed and owned by Gordon Newell of Peterborough was totally destroyed by fire of unknown origin here Wednesday afternoon.

The blaze was first noticed by Everett Sloan, teacher in the Warsaw school who was on his way home from school with a number of children when he saw smoke billowing from the upper part of the Digweed home. He gave the alarm and the village fire apparatus was hurried to the scene but the fire had obtained such a start that nothing could be done, the roof falling in soon after the volunteer firefighters arrived. With the exception of a few trinkets owned by Mrs. Digweed which Hilliard Darling salvaged by breaking a window the entire contents of the building were destroyed. The Digweed family lost all their furniture and clothing and had no insurance.

No one was at home when the fire broke out. Mrs. Digweed was visiting a relative, the children Earl and Joyce at school and Mr. Digweed and Wilbert Wright, a boarder, were away at work.

fice in Toronto, which he entered at the age of 17, he delved farther and farther into financial enterprise until he became one of the men at the roots of Canadian business. He organized Toronto's first electric light company and in a few years went to England to raise $10,000,000 for the harnessing of electrical energy at Niagara Falls. Shortly after entering the brokerage business he made a profit of more than $300,000 in the Northwest Land Company.

He became associated with the Crow's Nest Pass Coal Company, the Dominion Steel Corporation, the Toronto Railway Company, the British American Insurance Company, the Brazilian Traction Light and Power Company, the Sao Paulo Tramway Light and Power Company, the Canada Steamships Company and the Mining Corporation of Canada, maong many other concerns.

And as his financial empire grew, his givings became more generous. He gave to universities and to hospitals. The great war found him declared unfit for military service and he plunged into Red Cross Society work and into the work and financing of recruiting and outfitting. He was responsible for organization of the St. John Ambulance Brigade in Canada.

The two-year task of building Casa Loma, on a hill in Toronto's northwest district, began in 1911. Into the great grey-stone structure were put $1,000,000 worth of furnishings brought out from Europe. It was the show-place of Toronto, apparently the very embodiment of wealth and security.

When financial depression struck, Casa Loma was one of the first luxuries Sir Henry had to give up. It went to the city of Toronto for back taxes. Two years ago it was taken over by a service club, which conducts it as a show-place during the tourist season.

Corpulent in his later years, Sir Henry was rarely remembered as an athlete. But when he attended Model School here he was champion mile runner of Canada in 1878. The following year he won a North American championship at New York. His chief interests in athletics after middle age were in those at the Model School and in riding and the breeding of horses.

Sir Henry married twice. His first wife was Mary Dodgson, daughter of the late Robert Dodgson of Cumberland, England. Three years after her death in 1924, he married Catherine Welland Merritt, who died in 1929.

Surviving are one son, Col. Reginald Pellatt, who was at Sir Henry's side when death came; two sisters, Mrs. R. B. Hamilton and Mrs. E. B. Rogers; and two brothers, Fred M. Pellatt and Mill Pellatt.

Predict Attempt

tection," he said. "This reasonable protection was seriously impaired by the trade treaty of 1935 with the United States and considerable harm was done to our industries.

"By the trade treaty now before the House this reasonable measure of protection is again impaired. Our industries are being handicapped further by the mass production competition of the United States and the competition of low wages and living conditions which prevail in other favored nations which are to receive the same benefits under this agreement as the United States without granting any concessions to Canada."

Mr. Kinley said the agreement was the best thing any government had done for the fishing industry in the Maritime Provinces in many years. A more favorable market had been obtained for all classes of fish except salt mackerel and the reason the duty was not reduced on that was that Norway was the chief source of supply for the United States.

Later on, if Norway made a trade agreement with the United States, Canada would get a reduction in duty under the most-favored-nation arrangement without making any concession in return, just as Norway would have received a reduction had the duty been reduced as against Canada.

Blow to Maritimes

Mr. Barry said high protection had meant discrimination against the Maritime provinces in favor of the manufacturing areas of central Canada. The agreement marked a downward move in traiffs and would be welcomed in the Maritimes.

It was Mr. Barry's first speech in the House and replying to earlier comments from Conservatives on the fact he had not spoken, he said there was no reason for his speaking as he had no criticism to offer. Every action of the Liberal government met with the approval of himself and his constituents.

Mr. Cleaver said the agreement would remove the hypocricy from the tariffs on fruits and vegetables. It put them back to the level of genuine protection to the growers whereas the Bennett government had raised them to a level which brought no real addidtional protection.

Reduction of the duty on onions from $30 a ton to $18, he said, could not injure onion growers when onions were selling for $15 a ton.

The former Liberal government in 1930 had given the growers their real protection in the seasonal tariffs under the Bennett government, tariffs were raised but the only effect had been to encourage hothouse production of off-season products which was uneconomic.

Growers who had invested in hothouses under tariffs which should never have been imposed might have some claim for compensation.

The period for application of seasonal tariffs was now too short to cover both the early and late crops crops on some vegetables unless it was split up and Mr. Cleaver hoped action would be taken on this line. Another adjustment which should be made was to see that all processed fruits and vegetables shipped to the United Kingdom under the British preferential tariff rate were 100 per cent Canadian content.

TO MAINTAIN RIVER LEVEL

During filling of the reservoir formed by the $15,000,000 dam on the River Ruhr near Attendorn, Germany, in connection with a large hydroelectric power project, water will be pumped from the Rhine 10 miles up the Ruhr to maintain the level of the Ruhr.

In the program to be given at the school spring festival in the Collegiate Auditorium on Friday night, several pantomimes will be given by the children in addition to the singing, dancing and instrumental numbers.

A QUIET WEEK

This is proving a quiet week in police circles. Once again there were no arrests through the night and the night staff had few complaints to investigate. Motorists, too, have been on their good behavior and the accident book has had few entries recently.

MAKING ALTERATIONS

Ingram's Shoe Rebuild is another George street store which will blossom out in a new suit within a few weeks. Work has been started changing the interior, with new lighting, flooring and show cases, and changes to the front which will include a smart new sign over the store.

CITY LOOKS PROSPEROUS.

J. J. Gallagher, contractor in charge of renovations to the store in George Street soon to be occupied by the Tamblyn Drug Company, says the prosperity of a city is reflected in its store fronts and Peterborough looks prosperous. Gallagher has been in practically every large city in Ontario doing similar work, and he says his first reaction to Peterborough when he visited it for the first time two weeks ago was the cleanliness and the smart neat appearance of the business section.

SUCCESSFUL COURSE.

The concluding lecture by Dr. Dhami of the University of Toronto to the members of the Workers' Educational Association next Monday night at the Collegiate Institute terminates another winter of study. The attendance has averaged from fifty to sixty, about half of them women, the largest number in the Association's register, interest has been strongly sustained, and members have been highly pleased with the course. The annual meeting of the Association will be held on Monday, March 20, for the election of officers, and an invitation will be given to Dr. Dhami to return to the city for that meeting.

FIVE MONTHS' D. S. T.

Port Hope Council has set daylight saving time this year from April 30 to September 24.

CHAMBER OF AGRICULTURE

Rotarian Mac Gordon will be the speaker at Monday's luncheon of the Peterborough Rotary Club and he will address his fellow Rotarians on the subject of the "Canadian Chamber of Agriculture."

NOT THROUGH YET

Ice cutting operations on the canal have not yet been completed for the season. At the summer resorts, however, the ice harvest is practically over and the ice houses of summer cottagers are now ready for the coming of warm weather, if, as and when.

HORSE DROPS DEAD

A horse owned by Orme McCarthy dropped dead in harness on the long hill just east of Keene village Wednesday afternoon. The horse was one of a team drawing a load of chop from the Keene grist mill to the McCarthy farm and was said to be one of the oldest horses in Otonabee township.

FIRST FLOWER SHOW.

The Horticultural Society's first flower show of the year will be held on March 27 in the entrance windows of Neill's shoe store. Classes are being drawn up for spring bulbs such as hyacinths, daffodils, tulips, and so on, also some potted plants. This competition is open to the general public, John A. Smith, president of the society, said to-day.

KEEPS RECORD INTACT

J. D. Gallagher of Hamilton working for his father who has the general contract to renovate the store for the Tamblyn Drug Company on George street, kept his record for finding coins intact today. While wrecking the store he discovered a dime and two coppers under the floor below where the cash register used to be. Every store so far has yielded a quota, the biggest haul coming at the Wellington Hotel in Hamilton when modern beverage rooms were built. Nickels and dimes amounting to more than three dollars trickled out of the wall when it was torn open.

Norwood Man Is Fined $100 Following Raid

Convicted in police court this morning on a charge of illegal possession of liquor following a raid upon his apartment by Provincial Constables D. M. Carruthers and Lloyd A. McClure, on February 23, Thomas A. Mullen of Norwood, who gave his occupation as a lightning rod agent, was fined $100 and $11.50 costs by Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C. The alternative is three months' imprisonment.

Mullen asked to be allowed to go to Norwood to raise the money, but was told by Magistrate Langley that permission could not be given.

The accused was defended by H. S. Balfour, while Crown Attorney V. J. McElderry, K.C., prosecuted.

Provincial Constable Carruthers told of visiting Mullen's apartment in Norwood on the night of February 23, and finding a quantity of beer and three small bottles of liquor, two of one brand and the third of another variety. When questioned by the witness, Mullen had produced an individual permit and stated that he had bought eight small bottles of whiskey at the Peterborough vendor's store on the day before. Constable Carruthers stated that there were half a dozen young men in the apartment when the officers arrived, and two more came in later. Witness produced an analysis of the liquor found in one of the bottles.

"Did you know those young fellows were hockey players?" asked Mr. Balfour in cross-examination.

"No, I did not," replied the witness.

Constable McClure corroborated the evidence of Constable Carruthers as to the raid and said that he heard Mullen state that he and his 20-year-old son had drank most of the whiskey secured in Peterborough the day before.

David R. Fleming, T. Begley and Joseph Dunkerey of the staff of the local liquor store were called upon by the crown to show that Mullen had purchased eight small bottles of one brand of whiskey on the day before the raid, and that he had not bought on that occasion any liquor of the brand allegedly found in another bottle.

Only Defence Witness.

Mullen was the only defence witness. He said that he had bought eight small bottles of whiskey here on February 22 and that he and a friend had drank the contents of one bottle when he got back to Norwood. In trying to open another bottle he said the neck had been broken off and he had poured the contents into a bottle with a different label, the small bottle put in by the crown as an exhibit. He added that two of the small bottles had been stolen by a visitor just before the police arrived on the night of the 23. The men in his place were mainly hockey players and the team used his place as a sort of headquarters, he declared.

Cross-examined by Mr. McElderry he said that he made between $25 and $75 a week as a lightning rod agent in the summer months, but admitted that while he was doing so his wife and family of small children were living on relief in Toronto.

Re-examined by Mr. Balfour, he said his wife had refused to come to Norwood to live.

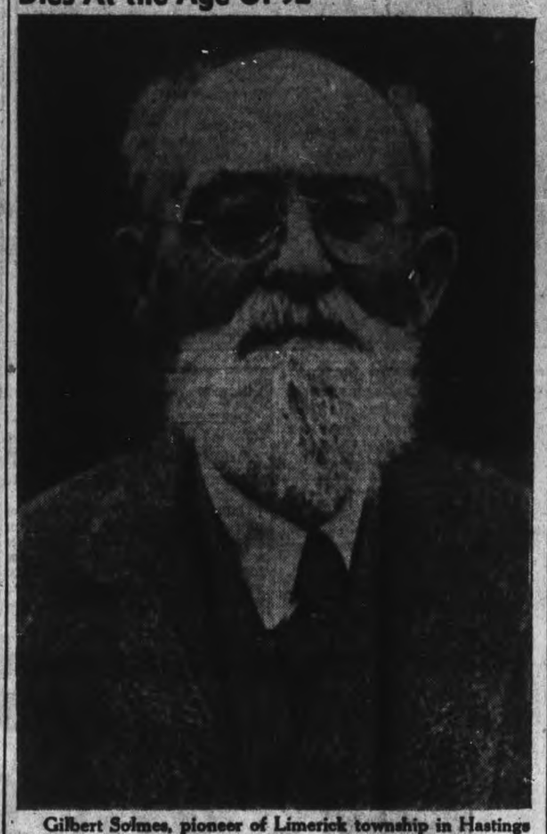
Magistrate Langley suggested that before the case was closed the contents of one of the bottles bought by Mullen here should be analyzed so that it could be compared with that found in the bottle with the other label.

Crown Attorney McElderry announced that an analysis had been made, and recalled Constable Carruthers who produced the document. It showed a difference of about one per cent. between the alcoholic content of the two samples.

On behalf of his client, Mr. Balfour submitted that the accused's story must be accepted, and that it showed that he was in possession only of liquor legally acquired. For the Crown, Mr. McElderry declared that Mullen's story was a fantastic one.

Magistrate Langley in giving judgment, declared that he could not accept Mullen's evidence and that a conviction would therefore be recorded.

Dies At the Age Of 92



Gilbert Solmes, pioneer of Limerick township in Hastings County, and one time lumberjack and river driver, died at his home at 588 Bolivar street today at the age of 92, after a brief illness. He was one of this city's oldest citizens and a man to whom old age brought few ailments. Seven daughters, two sons, 48 grandchildren, and 25 great grandchildren survive.

Small Child Unable To Swallow Solid Food Has Gullet Enlarged In Unusual Operation

Donna Paton, three-and-a-half-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Trueman Paton, 15 McClennan Avenue, is eating normally this week after an unusual operation was performed to enlarge her gullet and permit passage of food.

Some time ago she began to lose weight because she was unable to swallow any solid food. Examination by doctors revealed diseased tonsils, but even when the tonsils had been removed the condition was not corrected. When attempting to pass a tube down to her stomach, a doctor discovered that her gullet was no larger than an ordinary straw. The tender tissue of the gullet was stretched by passing larger and larger instruments through the gullet, and to-day the little girl is able to eat normally.

The patient was brought home from the hospital last week, and is now gaining weight rapidly.

Catholic Church Dominates Radio E. Reid Charges

LINDSAY, March 9—(Special).—Contending that the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation is dominated by the Roman Catholic Church through the Quebec members of the House of Commons, E. F. Reid of Peterborough, past grand master of the Grand Orange Lodge of Ontario East, last night criticized the Corporation for banning the publisher of the Globe and Mail and other Protestant speakers from the air waves, while "permitting a representative of the Toronto Daily Star to broadcast Romanist propaganda from the Vatican."

At an Orange rally here Mr. Reid referred to billboards which he said he had seen in Toronto advertising a story appearing in the star in regard to the election of Pope Pius.

"There is no doubt but that the Star has listened to the warning of Father Lanphier and has turned pro-Catholic in its desire to get back the subscriptions which it lost through the ban placed upon it by the radio priest," he said.

Mr. Reid declared that all members of the Orange Order should oppose the open Sunday, the changing of Canada's national flag, the "pro-Catholic" Radio Corporation, and "it is only when we send men to our parliaments who will put country head of party politics that we will be assured that our Dominion will be safe for democracy," he concluded.

Joseph Flavelle's Boyhood Home Was Situated On Queen Street

The home of Sir Joseph Flavelle in Peterborough stood on the east side of Queen street, where the Knox beverage building now occupied by the Peterborough Bottling Company was built, T. H. Hooper informed The Examiner to-day.

A number of stories about Sir Joseph have been related by men and women, too, who remembered him as a young grain and feed merchant on Simcoe street, where the Utilities Commission office is now housed, with convenient rear doors facing the market. One of the stories was the shock of the man taking the offertory collection one anniversary Sunday at George Street United Church when Sir Joseph Flavelle was present and dropped a folded cheque for $1,000 on the plate.

Guessed Wrong.

Then, there's the story of a rival grain dealer who guessed wrong in an estimate of the Flavelle character on the very day Sir Joseph opened his grain shop opposite Hamilton's grocery store. This story is told by a certain local well-known restaurant proprietor who preferred anonymity.

"Farmers used to bring in loads of grain on sleighs and wagons to the market where they sold it to the local buyers. Some of them were J. J. McBain, whose granary was at the southwest corner of Aylmer and Charlotte streets, the present site of the C.N.R. freight sheds; Thomas Bradburn, who stored his grain in the big brick building at the northeast corner of Charlotte and Bethune streets; James Stevenson, whose warehouse was on the property now occupied by Walter Oke on Simcoe street. There were also Wrighton and Cluxton, and perhaps several others including Flavelle. His business in buying oats and wheat and barley was small compared with some of those other dealers who used to have their buildings filled to the roof. They bought a lot of barley from the farmers around here, and shipped it across to the other side to the breweries.

Buyers Examined Grain

Farmers would line up their wagons of grain on the market. The buyers would go along and examine samples of the grain, and then write their price bids on a slip of paper and hand them to the producers. A farmer naturally would accept the highest bid and drive his load of grain to the warehouse of the dealer to whom he was selling.

I feel sure it was the day the Flavelle store was opened. Anyway young Flavelle arrived where the row of wagons was drawn up on the market. He was neatly dressed, in fact smartly dressed, a noticeable figure. As he hopped up on top of a wagon and took a sample of the farmer's grain to examine it, I heard another buyer say: 'Look at the smart Alex. You'd think he was going to a wedding. He won't go far in this buisness.'

As a matter of fact Sir Joseph didn't go far in the grain business, because as reported a day ago he was a man who put ideals and principles first, and after the Dunkin Act campaign he lost the business of the hotel and livery men, and in those days if you didn't have that business or a big slice of it you couldn't sell much grain and hay and feed. But, the older grain man who spoke of him that day rather enviously was mistaken. Sir Joseph was no smart Alex in his youth; just a self-respecting, alert young man, full of energy and industry, a real worker who soared as a Canadian financier far above the grain man who expressed his belief that the young Flavelle was heading toward failure and business obscurity.

Hamilton Township Council Ponders Building Of New Road In Harwood

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HARWOOD, March 9.—A deputation of twelve men from this district were at the meeting of the Hamilton Township Council on Monday afternoon in Cold Springs Township Hall.

Their object was to suggest to the council that the county road be changed in Harwood village and that a new road be built across what is known as the "Y." This would be a notable improvement as it would get away from a dangerous sharp corner and also a bad hill.

The entire council will meet next Tuesday morning to view this proposed near road.

Rumors that Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company intended to discontinue operations at Cordova have been causing anxiety among employees in the mine settlement and also at Havelock, T. P. Everyone in this section hopes sincerely that the company will continue to develop this gold mine and that a decision to erect a mill may be held every five years and the present period for reporting possession of revolvers or pistols is between March 1 and July 1.

The Rambling REPORTERS

SPRING ON WAY.

It may be cold outside to-day, and downtown merchants may be bemoaning the fact, but all good citizens take heart and be of good cheer! For the most accurate weather prophets in all the world are showing that spring is on its way.

And who are those seers? They are every Tom, Dick and Harry, who jams a speller into his windbreaker these days and runs off to school. And hundreds of them have intuitively given the word that spring is in the air—not knowingly, but none the less surely. And how? Just watch them as they come out of school. Groups of half a dozen will be on the sidewalk, the road, anywhere there is a relatively bare spot. With solemn face, each will take a step forward, his arm will shoot out, and sometimes a lucky one will advance another few steps, stoop down and pick up some object. Yes, that's right, they're shooting nibs again, or playing marbles, as their maiden aunts would say.—P.

Gilbert Solmes Dies 93rd Year

One of Peterborough's oldest citizens died today little more than two week after he had celebrated his 92nd birthday. He was Gilbert Solmes, 588 Bolivar street, once a lumberjack and river man, and a pioneer settler in Limerick township in Hastings county.

Mr. Solmes lived in Peterborough with his daughter, Mrs. Leonard Adlam, after retiring about two decades ago. He was a sturdy old man, had been ill only a very short time, and had known little illness in his life.

Surviving are seven daughters and two sons. They are Mrs. E. Moore, Mrs. Leonard Adlam, Mrs. R. Henry, Mrs. W. Jarvis, Mrs. E. McEwen, and Mrs. G. Quackenbush, all of Peterborough, Mrs. W. Harker of Belleville, Howard Solmes of Toronto, and P. B. Solmes of Detroit. Also surviving are 48 grand children and 25 great grandchildren. Funeral announcements will be made later.

Assisting in the service was Rev. Tage Teisen, rector of the Church of Bethesda-by-the-Sea.

Accompanied by two daughters, Mrs. Wallace Barrett and Mrs. F. Y. McEachern, the body was taken to Toronto for burial.

Leslie Unitt Is Guest Speaker

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MILLBROOK, March 9.—Mr. Leslie Unitt was the guest speaker at the meeting of the Young People's Union on Tuesday evening in the basement of St. Andrew's church, the president, Earle Edworthy, occupying the chair.

Mr. Unitt's talk was on a number of hymns, their origin, authors, particular occasions of use, and other features, singing, and contests in connection with the informative address in which all present had opportunity to take part, adding much to its interest and effectiveness.

William Kerr had charge of the recreational period, and the cultural convener, Dorothy Smith, conducted the worship service, assisted by Leitha Edworthy, who read the lesson; Esther Might, who led in prayer; and William Ridge, who gave the worship poem.

The announcements included notice of a sleighing party on March 17, weather permitting; and the Y.P.U. executive meeting at the home of Mr. J. H. Might on Thursday, March 9.

Neighbors Honor Dummer Family

(Examiner Correspondence.)

WARSAW, Mar. 9.—A large number of friends, including some from Norwood, gathered at Cephas Payne's home on Friday evening, to express regret at losing him as a neighbor and wishing him the best in his future home.

Elmor Cooper read an address and Alfred Little made the presentation. The gifts were a day bed and a smoker.

Mr. Peyne, who was taken by surprise, accepted the gifts in his own good way, and gracefully thanked his neighbors and friends.

The ladies served a splendid supper and a jolly evening was spent in dancing and cards.

Mr. Payne, daughter, Miss Daphine, and two sons expect to move to the house in the village lately occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Lattas, about the middle of the month.

Personals.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Clements have moved on to the old Miller homestead, Douro, vacated by the death of W. J. Miller. Mr. Clements did some ploughing last fall and has been up a good deal of the winter.

Mr. Thomas Cuffe, who spent about two months with Mr. and Mrs. Will Cuffe in Peterborough, returned home the latter part of the week.

The United church people were glad to see Mrs. George Taylor in her place at the organ on Sunday after several weeks' absence through illness.

See Ontario Headed For Retrenchment

TORONTO, March 9—(CP).—The Globe and Mail says in a newspage story that the Ontario government is entering upon a policy of retrenchment in administrative expenditures and of amalgamation where possible of present interlocking services.

The Globe and Mail also says that Premier Hepburn, in his capacity of provincial treasurer, will probably announce a two-cent jump in the present six-cent gasoline tax when the budget is brought down in about three weeks. Possibility of a general rise in liquor prices is also forecast.

Mrs. J. A. MacDonald Wins Contest

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HASTINGS, Mar. 9.— The March meeting of th Hastings Women's Institute was held on Tuesday afternoon in the Council Chambers, with Mrs. J. A. Brown presiding.

Mrs. C. O. Phillips was convener of the program which included a St. Patrick's reading by Miss Rhea Preston; a solo, "Where the River Shannon Flows," by Mrs. Charles Dodd. An observation contest by Mrs. Phillips aroused interest by all the members and the prize was won by Mrs. J. A. MacDonald, which was a bridge set.

The roll-call was a suggestion for next year's program.

Mrs. J. A. MacDonald gave the topic on "What the Women's Institute has to offer the Young People." She emphasized the value of the girls' club work, youth training, and short courses.

Mrs. G. Sine, the local leader for the short course on Buymanship, was requested to review her work at one of the meetings, as those who attended the special meeting and heard Mrs. Sine felt that those who were unable to attend would benefit by a review of the work.

Following the meeting lunch was served, with Mrs. G. Kerr and Mrs. J. A. MacDonald as hostesses.

MUSCULAR RHEUMATIC

It takes more than "just a salve" to bring relief. It takes a "counter-irritant" like good old Musterole—soothing, warming, penetrating and helpful in quickly overcoming the local congestion and pain when rubbed on the aching spots.

Muscular lumbago, soreness and stiffness generally yield promptly.

Better than the old-fashioned mustard plaster, Musterole has been used by millions for 30 years. Recommended by many doctors and nurses. Made in Canada, in three strengths: Regular, Children's (mild), and Extra Strong. All druggists, 40¢ each.

DEATH AT THE MANOR

By M. E. CORNE

CHAPTER FORTY-EIGHT

THE ROOM was pitch black. I sat up in a sort of stupor. I was in bed. Memory returned. I made a compulsive movement.

"Easy, baby," said a familiar voice. The bed light was snapped on. I blinked my eyes. Phil stood above me. He looked pale and shaken.

I said weakly: "Am I — dying?"

"Dying?" He burst into helpless laughter. "You fainted!"

"Fainted!" I was indignant. "I never faint!"

"Well you gave a darned good imitation, honey."

I demanded wrathfully: "Just what did happen?"

His laughter died. He said soberly: "We got the murderer, Elsie. He's dead."

"Dead!" I shivered. "Mr. Horace dead! That little man! How?"

"Cyanide. He had a capsule of the stuff in his pocket."

"Oh!" Tears filled my eyes. "The poor soul!"

"He was a murderer, Elsie."

"I know. And he—he shot Reginald!"

"With blanks, baby. Reginald is as good as new and twice as handsome."

I drew away from him: "Then—then Mac wanted him to find Della and Reginald—kissing!"

"Mac arranged it," he admitted. "But don't you understand? He had to do it that way. Horace never would have confessed. He had to be trapped."

A great weariness enveloped me. "Poor Daphne! She knew!"

Phil nodded. "Yes, she knew."

"And that was the reason she said she'd never marry?"

"That was the reason."

"But I don't understand—" I began, when the door opened and McIntyre came into the room. A tired, disheveled Mac, with his hair standing on end and his necktie screwed into a ball 'ehind his ear. He said no word, but dropped into a chair by the fireplace.

"And that, my children," he said at length, "is that." His voice was tired and strained; all the eagerness had gone from it.

"I can't believe it!" I spoke my thoughts aloud. "I can't believe that Mr. Horace was the murderer!"

"He was the murder all right, Elsie. It had to be him. There was no one else."

"You suspected him from the first?"

He smiled. "Suspected him, yes. But I wasn't sure until he shot himself in the shoulder. Then I knew, but I had no proof."

"Shot himself in the shoulder?" I glanced from Mac to Phil. "What do you mean?"

"Just that. Horace shot himself. With his own gun, that which I found wrapped in th glove with the end of the thumb shot out."

"Where—where did you find it?"

"Hidden in a shoe in his closet, Elsie."

"But why should he shoot himself?"

"I think," Mac said slowly, "that he knew I had stumbled on the truth. I think, too, that he chose that method of withdrawing suspicion from his son. In spite of everything, he was fond of his children. He might have freed himself in the courts. Instead he chose death. He refused to save himself at his children's expense."

"What made you suspect him of shooting himself?"

"It was this way, Elsie. When Minnie told us that she had discovered Horace shot, she knocked my theories four ways to Sunday. I thought I was wrong again. Then Horace, wounded, told his story. It was a smooth story, but he made one bad mistake."

"And that was?"

"He said that as the bullet struck his shoulder he dropped the shirts in his arm to the floor—"

"So that was what you were doing?" Phil put in.

"That was what I was doing. You see, we found the shirts beside the bed. And that was where Horace erred. Had he been shot from the doorway as he claimed, the shirts would have been beside or before the bureau. They couldn't possibly have fallen beside the bed. So I knew that he had shot himself and had carefully arranged the props for our appearance on the scene."

I questioned: "Where did the glove come in?"

"Well, Elsie, when a man shoots himself the powder from the bullet burns his clothing at close range. I examined the coat Horace had worn at the time of the shooting, but there were absolutely no traces of powder burns on it! That had me stumped! If I was right, and he had done the shooting, there had to be burns! Then, too, the fact that the bullet struck the mirror and glanced off into the woodwork make it impossible to deduce the distance the bullet had traveled, or its line of passage. Horace arranged his props perfectly except for the business of the shirts.

"Naturally, I couldn't examine his person at the time of the shooting. Therefore he carried the gun and glove with him. Why he kept the damaged glove is a mystery. But murderers are not normal persons. Sooner or later the smartest killer gives himself away."

I frowned: "But I still don't understand the meaning of the glove."

Mac elucidated. "The gun, Elsie, was placed in the thumb of the glove and then shot. The burns were on the glove. Horace stood near the doorway; he placed the gun in the glove and shot himself in the shoulder. The bullet, as it had been meant to do, struck the mirror. Previously he had arranged the shirts on the floor. When I found the one good glove in the trash barrel it came to me instantly that its mate might well have been used in just such fashion."

"Did Mr. Horace throw away the good glove?"

"Yes. He had no reason to think that a glove in a trash barrel would send him to his death."

I persisted: "How did you find the gun?"

"That, Elsie, was work! It wasn't in the laboratory or in the library. Since those rooms and his bedroom were used almost exclusively by Horace, I surmised that it must be hidden somewhere in the latter. Tonight I got Ellis to inveigle Horace into conversation in the library. Phil and I searched his room, found the gun and glove, and when I had exchanged the bullets for blanks, Phil returned both articles, placing them exactly where we had found them."

I had yet another question.

"Why was it necessary to have him shoot Reginald — and why should he want to shoot Reginald, anyway?"

"He wanted to shoot Reginald," Mac replied, "because he himself was in love with Della Craig. It was necessary to catch him in the act of another murder. Even though I was certain that he was the murderer, the proof I held would not have convinced a jury. A smart criminal lawyer could have riddled my theories to ribbons. Therefore, I arranged to have Della and Reginald make an appointment for a midnight meeting in the library. Horace, as I intended, overheard the conversation."

"And did Reginald know he would be shot at?"

Mac grinned: "He knew, and he was not pleased! But he is in love with Della and Della was not overly anxious to become entangled with the police. When I told her that I would cite her as an accessory, she soon persuaded Reggy to do as I wanted. Of course I had nothing definite on Della. She denies that she knew or suspected Horace's guilt. In fact, she denies she knew that he was madly in love with her. But she was frightened enough of becoming involved in a scandal to do as I asked."

"How did you know Mr. Horace was in love with her?"

"You told me that, Elsie, when you described the scene at the library door when Horace came upon Della and Reginald, and he explained his reactions to you by saying that he suffered from arthritis."

"Oh!"

"I was positive then that he was the guilty party."

DOROTHY DIX

DEAR MISS DIX—Ten years ago I married a very attractive and popular widow. She had a small son and kept on with her work so that he wouldn't be an added responsibility to me. She is a commercial artist with contracts that enable her to do her work at home. Against the doctor's advice she bore me a son because I wanted one. It went hard with her health, but for the first few years she was jolly company and willing to go out or entertain at any time I pleased. I have been out of work about half the time since 1932 and earn only $20 to $30 a week when working so we can't afford a maid and she has to do the housework in addition to keeping on with her job. I came home unexpectedly one day and heard her crying. She seemed to be praying and was saying over and over again, "Oh, God, let me feel that some one is protecting me just once in my life." That made me furious. I suppose I count for nothing. She is getting so nervous and her hands tremble so that it makes it hard for her to sketch. This is my problem: She begs off on going places with me lately. Once she said: "If you don't want to spend your spare time studying for that civil service examination you are always meaning to take, join a men's club or something. I just haven't the strength left to go out evenings and I haven't the clothes to make you proud of me." Although she is even tempered, another time she said: "I have thought of you first all these years, Jim, and now there isn't much strength left. The doctor isn't encouraging. I am forced to think of the children, who need me. Now, Miss Dix, other women do their own housework and go out with their husbands. While it is true that she has stood by me through some discouraging times, don't you think she is forcing me to seek other feminine companionship? Can a woman expect a man to be true when she deprives him of good times? She never darns my socks or does the things my mother used to do for me. Is it my fault that good jobs are scarce? Must I suffer by working for small pay and have added suffering at home? What would you advise me to do?—DISCOURAGED MAN.

ANSWER:

Well, Jim, the first thing I would advise you to do is to read over the letter you have written to me very carefully and see how you like the picture of the man you have drawn in it. It is the portrait of a man who is so little and mean and selfish that he has taken all that a splendid and generous woman had to give. But he repays her for her loyalty by contemplating forsaking her when the poor, overworked drudge has come to the very last of her strength and is about to fall dead pulling the load that is too heavy for her to drag any longer.

You think that your wife belittles you when in pouring out her anguished heart, she prays for some one to protect her. Well, face that a bit, will you? It is bitterly true that the wife who has to make the living for the family hasn't any one to protect her. She is on her own, and when she is sick and nervous it seem too much for her. The one thing she yearns for above all else is a strong arm to lean on.

I know jobs are hard to get, but from your own account it is evident you haven't hustled around as you might about getting work. Otherwise you would have been studying for that civil service examination that you have always talked about and done nothing about.

You say that other women do their own housework and go out with their husbands. Maybe they don't have to work outside of the home as well as in it. Maybe they are strong and healthy women. Your wife wrecked her health bearing you a son. She has worked beyond her strength in the studio as well as the kitchen and nursery. And now that she has come to the end of her tether, you feel that her not being able to run around with you at night justifies you in going off with other women. Evidently you are going to do that, but in common honesty you should find another alibi besides your wife's conduct. Don't lay your weakness at her door.

Get a line on yourself, Jim, and see how you have failed this faithful wife. Kiss the trembling hands that have worked so hard for you. Tell her how wonderful and brave she has been and how much you love her. And if you can't find any job, do the housework yourself. Many men who love their wives have done it these hard times when their wives could get jobs and they couldn't.

DEAR MISS DIX—I am 22 years old. Have been married and have a baby. My husband deserted me before the baby was born. About three months ago I got a new job and fell in love with my boss who has been married sixteen years, and I have become his mistress. He promises he will marry me some day, I really believe he loves me and I have all the confidence in the world in him. He can't get a divorce now because he has some financial problems to straighten out first. I know in the eyes of the world we are not doing right, but I wonder what God thinks?—PUZZLED.

ANSWER:

You don't have to wonder about what God thinks of your conduct. HE stated it fully and emphatically in the Ten Commandments. Borrow a Bible and read what HE said about adultery and you will have no further doubts on that topic.

Certainly women are fearfully and wonderfully made and their minds work in mysterious ways their wonders to perform. Here you are, deserted by your husband in your hour of need, a victim of man's perfidy, yet it has taught you nothing. Your bitter experience has not even hung one red lantern of warning before your eyes. You rush into an illicit relationship with a married man at the very first chance you get, without even apparently suspecting that you are laying up more grief for yourself.

Can't you see, my child, that this married man hasn't the remotest idea in the world of divorcing his wife and marrying you? If he had, he would get busy about it and be seeing lawyers. Haven't you enough common sense to realize that when a man talks vaguely about marrying you some day it is just simply hot air and is the cheapest pay-off he can think of? Dont you know that sooner or later he will tire of you and cast you off and you will be left disgraced and homeless and penniless?

Do try to have a little intelligence as well as morality. Leave him and get a job with some boss who isn't so amorous.

DOROTHY DIX.

Looking Back
On This Date

Toronto was not in years gone by the only place in Canada where one could, in the words of a Quebec M. P., spend "a week one Sunday." Ottawa was the same. The House of Commons as a rule adjourned on Friday night; the members from Ontario and Quebec went home over Sunday and the capital was left to the M. P.'s from far places. It was no wonder, therefore, that visitors used to speak of the "sleepy Sundays of Ottawa."

But there was one really Sleepy Sunday in Ottawa. It was on March 9, 1913. The Commons had been steadily in session from the previous Monday until 2 a.m. on the Sunday. Then members, officials, newspaper men, all went home, or to their hotels, and literally slept the clock around; some of them even exceeding the 12 hours. They were all worn out; they knew the struggle would be resumed the next day and probably continue without adjournment for another week (which it did) and so they not only tried to catch up with lost sleep but sought to store up a reserve of energy for the exciting riotous week which was to come.

It was not until late on that Sunday night that the old Parliament House began to take on its usual Sunday activities of the reporters, for even newspaper men get weary watching a couple of hundred legislators get worked up to the height of partisan and personal passion, as they were then. The following Sunday was another day of rest for worn out M. P.'s, officials and newspaper men, but that time they had the satisfaction of knowing that the continuous sittings were over, for at least a while.

Stunning Slip Covers Are Easy to Make

Crisp, colorful new slip covers—how they brighten your rooms for spring! And you can make them at home easily, inexpensively.

The smart slip cover in our picture is a plaid in pretty shades of gray; the seams are gaily outlined with yellow moss trimming. Striking, too, is plain beige with rust moss or—for your bedroom—dove gray and orchid moss.

And you can quickly make this cover—or any other style—this simple pin-on way.

Smooth the material over the chair—wrong side out if you use moss trimming. Work from the top of the back to the front of the seat and allow 3 or 4 inches for a tuck-in between back and seat.

Then pin along the top and seams. Cut while the material is still pinned to the chair, leaving 1½ inches outside pins for seams—as our sketch shows. The arms, back, sides and skirt you fit separately.

Next comes the basting, a try-on—and the final stitching.

How to trim, finish, make plackets? Every step in the making of slip covers—from estimating material to finishing—is clearly explained and diagrammed in our 32-page booklet. Directions for box-pleated flounces; tips on color schemes, fabrics.

Send 15c in coins or stamps for your copy of HOW TO MAKE SLIP COVERS to Examiner, Home Service, Peterborough. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

GOODNIGHT STORY

By MAX TRELL

Walking along with the children through the zoo, Knarf and Hanid suddenly stopped in front of one of the cages. The bars went up very high, but the two animals inside stood even taller. At any rate, their heads were well above the top of the bars and they stood looking down over them at the group of visitors gathered outside.

"Giraffes!" Knarf exclaimed. "That's what they are!"

Hanid was about to tell her brother he was quite right, for she had seen pictures of giraffes in the children's natural history book At that instant one of the giraffes said distinctly to the other giraffe in the cage beside him: "Just look at those strange animals, my dear. What short necks they have!"

"Yes," said the second giraffe in sympathy, "they have very small necks, indeed. I don't see how they can get along. The can't possibly find anything to eat."

"What short necks they have!"

Then Knarf slipped inside the cage and called up to the two giraffes. "Of course they can eat! They don't need long necks to eat with! I don't see why anybody needs long necks!"

The two giraffes glanced at each other in surprise. Then the first giraffe said to the second: "Just listen to that little fellow. He doesn't even understand why everyone needs a long neck. Just explain to him, my dear."

So the second giraffe (the first giraffe was the father and she was the mother) bent his head a little and said: "My poor boy, how can you, or anybody else with a short neck like you and the children have, get at the tender young leaves that grow at the top of trees? You can't reach them from the ground. So you can't possibly get anything to eat. I feel very sorry for you."

"But—but—" Knarf started to say.

But the two giraffes had already walked off, and Knarf didn't get a chance to tell them that children didn't need long necks because they never ate the leaves off the tops of trees, but if they wanted to badly enough, they could get up to them very easily by just climbing up.

The Stars Say . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Friday, March 10.

The very auspicious planetary configurations offer an outstanding opportunity for attaining high goals in both business and purely personal associations. It is a day for pushing toward this with all the might and main, although there may be drastic action and some fundamental reorganizations, attendant up heavals and excitement.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a year of great and surprising opportunities for reaching the land of heart's desire, both in busines sand in private aspirations. Romance, adventure, and change, with far-reaching and expansive episodes, are forecast, although it may mean complete disorganization, reorientation, and innovations in the life and destiny.

A child born on this day may be excellently endowed with all the graces, faculties, and forces for reaching a high place in life. Position, power, honors, and happiness may be wrested from perhaps rather devastating or curious circumstances.

We Noticed

....Shades of Maid Marion and naughty Queen Guinever! What with all these ladies fair wearing their wimples to town and to tea —we expect to see a knight in armour on George street any moment now. Who said chivalry was dead? Evidently the ladies don't think so. In their wimple scarfs, they look as if they're bound for Camelot!

....Anyhow, if you haven't got your wimple yet—you're in luck, for now you may buy one separately and fasten it into any hat you wish. Made of chiffon or crepe, the wimple may be obtained in every smart color — royal blue, cyclamen, gold, American Beauty, chartreuse, peacock blue, fresh earth and japonica.

....You may wear your wimple with almost any sort of hat—turbans, pill boxes, Bretons, even sailors. Of course you know there are many ways of wearing it, too. Hanging behind and fastened under the chin in true wimple fashion, or draped around your neck in any number of different styles.

Study of New Canadian's Habits Urged

The study books fourth chapter entitled "Learning to Live Together," which deals with the European groups in Canada, and how a better understanding of their ways and habits will make a better understanding between Canadians and new Canadians, was discussed by Mrs. E. Mesley at the monthly meeting of the Helen Roger Auxiliary of Knox United Church. "What can we hope for the future of Canada," she said, "if we as Canadians do not set a good example for these European people? Let us truly make Canada a Christian nation." Mrs. Mesley recommended "Thru' Missionary Windows" as an excellent book for the members to read. She was assisted in her review of the chapter by Miss I. Barrer, Mrs. C. Weldon, Mrs. H. Williamson and Mrs. J. Donaldson.

Mrs. H. Clegg presided at the meeting, which was held at the home of Mrs. George Hutchinson, 304 Pearl Avenue. The meeting opened with silent prayer, and soft piano music. Prayer was led by the president. Roll call and reports of secretary and treasurer were presented, and the Christian Stewardship secretary announced that the April meeting, which is to be held at the home of Miss Alma Gerard, would include the Easter thankoffering. After the offering, and the singing of the offertory, Miss Jean Ralston rendered a very appropriate solo, "Thanks be to God."

"Thou shalt love thy neighbor" was the theme upon which the worship period was centred. Mrs. A. Sproats read the Scripture lesson, and four illustrations of how to be a good neighbor were given by Mrs. G. Hutchinson. Following the closing hymn, and prayer led by Mrs. C. Stewart, a short social period was enjoyed.

The lecture is to be sponsored by the Ontario Music Teachers' Association, Peterborough Chapter.

Frederick J. Horwood, Mus. Doc., a minister of the United Church in Canada, is lecturer in music appreciation, Toronto Conservatory of Music. He is the author of a recent publication "Listening to Music"; a member of Faculty of Toronto Conservatory of Music; representative of Graduates in Music on Senate of the University of Toronto; winner of Willingdon Prize in composition, and editor of Toronto Conservatory Monthly Bulletin.

His lecture on Monday night will be illustrated at the piano, and by Victrola records.

Mr. F. E. Kerr Addresses Young People

St. Andrew's United Church Y.P.U. meeting was well attended Tuesday evening, when Mr. F. E. Kerr, guest speaker, gave an address on "Falsehood, a Basic Cause of National Disintegration." He spoke of the Neutrality Act of the United States, and that Great Britain was buying aeroplanes from her, causing annoyance to Germany, who claimed that this was breaking the Act—in spite of a great many more acts broken by Germany, including treaties in national dishonesty.

There is nothing wrong with Premier Hepburn and Premier King because the people elected them to their offices, the speaker said. If their's was a rotten government, there would be a rotten people, since premiers are the people's agents. Mr. Kerr spoke of the early lie of Eve, and the early lie and murder of Cain in the Bible, saying that falsehood, even in these days, is a very common thing. Lies are usually told to get others into trouble, and gossip is never one hundred per cent. true.

He went on to mention social falsehoods, illustrating his meaning with a story of a home where a meal was cooking, with just food for the family. A visitor arrives, and the lady of the house elaborates on how glad she is to see the visitor, although wishing inwardly that she were across the ocean!

A social meeting was arranged for next Tuesday night, and all young people of the church are urged to attend. Games were played after the meeting.

English Writer Praises Canadian Cooking

The women's editor of Overseas magazine of London, Eng., writing of cookery says: When I was in Canada five years ago I was impressed with the general awareness on the part of everyone on the importance of diet. I don't mean a special interest in food as such, but a higher diet-consciousness than was to be found at home.

No one looked surprised if one ate a fruit breakfast. Unsurpassed salads were to be had everywhere. Orange juice was offered to one automatically. One reason for this, of course, is that fruit is abundant everywhere on the North American continent.

But the average Canadian is a better cook and a better housewife than the average British islander and that in spite of more labor-saving contrivances.

Five years ago we were definitely behind Canada in regard to diet, although a great deal of the scientific research, enabling the New World to eat scientifically had been done in Great Britain. But we hadn't troubled to apply it. Today the situation has changed, for the Government has taken the matter up and we have now outstripped the New World in what is being done for the people of this country. Not that we have yet reached the goal by any means but we are well on the way. Existing knowledge is being applied and the results can be estimated.

Millbrook Personals

Mr. John Black, who comes here from Peterborough, but who has successfully followed his profession of undertaker in Toronto, Montreal, and other points, has arrived in the village and will be assistant to the local undertaker, F. C. Scott. Mr. and Mrs. Black and family will live in the apartments over the Scott furniture store, which have been thoroughly renovated for residential purposes.

Mr. Scott is not contemplating leaving the community, but wishes to have more leisure to look after his public benefactions here, which include a playground for the children, in whose welfare he is much interested; the Community Waiting Room which he built and presented to the village; and the picnic ground just back of the shuffleboard courts which he also installed and gives free of charge for public recreation in the summer months, and which he intends putting in proper shape and furnishing tables, seats, etc., as soon as weather and season permits.

Mr. Black is a son of the Rev. Mr. Black, formerly of Omemee and a brother of Mr. Morley Black, of Liverpool, whose wife was K. Donnelly, of Millbrook.

This test is your guide to the best value in home laundry soap. 1,000 Canadian women made the test, using different granulated soaps especially packed in PLAIN boxes, identified only by number. Asked to write which soap was best—and why—hundreds of women did so. And 3 out of 4 chose "Soap No. 1" which actually was Concentrated Super Suds. Read why this remarkable granulated soap was a 3 to 1 favorite:—

"BECAUSE OF ITS RICH SUDS I would recommend No. 1 to my neighbors."

"No. 1 SOFTENS WATER BEST—and is superior for ALL cleansing purposes. I find it doesn't harm my washing machine. Rinses out easier."

"No. 1 WASHES CLOTHES CLEANER—WITH LESS WORK and softens water best. I found it ideal for WOOLLENS."

"No. 1 SOAP IS WONDERFUL FOR COLORED CLOTHES. They stay bright. This soap dissolves amazingly fast in warm water."

"No. 1 SOAP IS EASIEST ON YOUR HANDS and acts quickest. It goes FARTHEST"

You owe it to yourself to try Concentrated Super Suds, next washday. This superior granulated soap contains MORE SOAP that's why it gives you MORE SUDS. Safe for your clothes and gentle to your hands. Washes your clothes Hospital-clean. Most germs dangerous to health are killed or removed in the washing process. Very economical! Being concentrated a little goes a long way!

Hastings Juniors Win Handily Over Roseneath

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HASTINGS, March 9 — Hastings juniors defeated Roseneath intermediates here last night 9 to 6 in the second hockey tussle here this winter between these two rival teams. The juniors copped the first game by a wide margin. Last night's fray was featured by many smart plays on the part of the juniors, who showed no lost form despite the fact that there was no ice on the local rink for two weeks. Roseneath were a heavier outfit and bumped the locals around a bit, but Hastings were the faster skaters and were more proficient at stick handling.

Carew in the Roseneath nets was called on several occasions to stop almost sure goals, but he seemed to be almost as daring as the puck carriers and staved them off, but not often enough to put his team in the win column. Montgomery, in the Hastings nets, turned in his usual spectacular performance, and was one of the stars of his team. Other standouts for the locals were Puffer, McCarthy and Petticrew. Roseneath stars were, Arber. Tucker and J. Pacey.

Hastings had a good edge of the play in the first period and they took advantage of the fact by counting two goals against none for Roseneath. At seven minutes, McCoy, on a lone rush, battled his way through defence to score the first, and on a three-man rush, Phillips tallied on a pass from Radford and assisted by Petticrew ,to add one.

Jack Puffer went to town in the second frame and did the hat trick with three goals to his credit with assists by Boyle, McCarthy and Edwards. Petticrew and Radford added to the count with individual rushes. Tucker, for Roseneath, opened the scoring for the visitors in this period on a two-man rush assisted by Pacey. Halstead added one a minute later on a lone rush and six minutes later Tucker made another lone attack and scored his second goal of the game.

Roseneath showed signs of putting up a lively battle to open the third stanza, when they scored three goals in rapid succession to almost even the score. Halstead, Tucker and Pacey accounted for all three with assists to Halstead, Tucker, Pacey and McMillan. Radford for Hastings put the game in the bag when he scored two goals in the final moments of the game with two assists to Petticrew. Much time was lost during the game while players and spectators alike looked for lost pucks which had gone over the boards nto the semi-darkness.

The teams:

Oshawa Beats Whitby 4-3

OSHAWA, Mar. 9. — Oshawa Coca-Colas defeated Whitby Argos 4-3 here last night in a hectic intermediate B playoff encounter before 1,200 fans. Almost Crippled With Rheumatism

Improved Greatly When He Tried Kruschen

There has just come to our notice a case of grand relief from severe rheumatic pains. The seriousness of the man's condition and the step that led to his ultimate recovery, are described in the following letter:—

"For several years I suffered from rheumatism. I had all my teeth out, and still suffered. A year ago I lay in hospital for fourteen weeks, almost crippled. When I got home I continued to take medicine, but began to go down again. A friend of mine asked me to try Kruschen Salts, and I am very pleased to be able to say have been on the mend ever since."—H.P.

Two of the salts in Kruschen are the most effectual solvents of uric acid known to medical science. They swiftly dull the sharp edges of the crystals—the cause of pain and stiffness—and often covert them into a harmless solution, which is then expelled through the natural channels.—advt.

Quaker Aces Lead League

The lady basketballers hope to move into the new Y.W.C.A. gymnasium for their City League games Friday evening and only a last minutes hitch of some kind will keep them from this arrangement. The big new gym is all ready for them and only the basketball backboards remain to be installed. These are expected to arrive in time to have everything in order for Friday evening, but if it happens that these important fixtures are not in place, the games will be switched.

However, it is fully expected that the Y.W. floor will be the scene of action, with three games being played commencing at 7.30 o'clock.

	Won.	Lost.	To play
Quaker Aces	4	0	2
Quaker Maids	4	1	1
St. John's	3	2	1
Westclox	2	2	2
C. G. E.	1	3	2
Quaker Debs	1	3	2
Y. W. Gym.	0	4	2

Friday's Games:
7.30 p.m.—C.G.E. vs. Westclox.
8.30 p.m.—Y. Gym. vs. Quaker Debs
9.15 p.m. — Quaker Maids vs. Quaker Aces.
St. John's.—Bye.

At the conclusion of this schedule the first two team will play a best of three game series for the Senior City Championship, and the losing team in this series will receive the runner-up trophy.

The teams finishing third and fourth will likewise play a best of three game series for the Junior City championship.

Ontario Rink Continues Winning Streak

TORONTO, March 9 (CP).—Ontario scored its eighth straight victory in the Macdonald's Brier Bonspiel this morning and marched to within a single stride of the Canadian curling championship.

Bert Hall's Kitchener rink came from behind to defeat Alberta 13-8 and even if the Ontario four lost its final match to Northern Ontario this afternoon they could finish no worse than a tie for first place.

Seeking to defend the title, Manitoba has won eight times in 12 years, Ross Kennedy's Winnipeg Strathconas made their record seven wins and one loss—that to Ontario yesterday—by defeating British Columbia 14-7 this morning.

In other eighth-round games Northern Ontario defeated Saskatchewan 9-8, Nova Scotia scored by 13-11 over Quebec and New Brunswick administered a 10-9 defeat to Prince Edward Island.

Score by ends:

Alberta	1	1	0	3	0	1	0	1	0	0—8
Ontario	0	0	1	0	4	0	3	0	2	1—13
British Columbia	1	0	1	2	0	1	0	0	1	0—7

By HERB. MARTIN

Notwithstanding that a great number of curlers are knocked out with colds and the flu, the vice-skips' annual bonspiel got off to a good start last evening. Play will continue each night. Some of the games were real interesting to watch with probably the Payne-Sootheran game and the Nugent-Seymour game getting the nod.

Payne started out with a big six and kept on going until he had a lead of 9-0, but Sootheran's boys kept plugging away until the bank manager himself tied the game up on the 10t hend with a perfect shot to count 3. In the extra end it was nip and tuck, and again Sootheran drew the shot with his last stone, and put it squarely up to Rufus. He got the shot and won the game, but Lady Luck helped a lot.

In the Nugent-Seymour game things were pretty much the same—Nugent had Seymour down 10-2 on the 8th end, but Charlie came to life and tied the game with a 3, a 4, and 1, forcing the game into overtime. As in the other game the low man put it up to his opponent, and once again this Lady Luck helped out—Nugent winning by one shot.

We hope to have our regular bonspiel on Saturday.

In the Sturgeon Trophy, the semi-finals of the main event is being played this morning, and in the consolation the quarter-finals are being played. It is expected both finals will feature Friday's curling.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By SHEPARD BARCLAY

"The Authority on Authorities"

HOW HONORS SHRINK

REPEATED BIDS OF one very long suit or two long ones should warn a prospective doubler that some of his high cards will have to be discarded on the declarer's little ones. In fact, the declarer may run all of the tricks he needs in that particular suit or those particular suits. If he does not, he may run so many that safe discarding becomes impossible and the holder of the strong defensive hand is squeezed.

(Dealer: North. East-West vulnerable.)

North opened innocuously here with 1-Club. South then bid 1-Heart, North 2-Diamonds, South 3-No trump, North 4-Diamonds to show that suit was at least a five-carder and the clubs longer, therefore at least six cards. South gently invited slam with 4-No trump, the natural bid, not any convention. North went to 5-Clubs, South 5-No trump, North 6-No trump and West doubled.

West picked the worst of all possible leads, as it turned out, his spade J, which the singleton Q won. Followed then the Club Q, diamond Q to the K and A, and five more clubs. On the last West had to choose to discard from his three diamonds, his best two hearts or his spade A. He picked the heart J, whereupon the heart A dropped the K and the heart Q was played. This time West tossed the spade A, whereupon the spade K, diamond J and diamond 10 made the last three tricks for a grand slam, scoring an overtrick doubled.

Gibraltar No Longer Impregnable Say Japs Pointing To Ring Of Italo-German Forts

TOKYO, March 9—CP-Havas.—The Spanish correspondent of the newspaper Nichi Nichi to-day reported "Gibraltar no longer is impregnable" due to a formidable line of "zig zag military bases now being completed near the British stronghold by German and Italian technicians in co-operation with the Spanish Nationalists.

The correspondent, who visited the fortified zones in Spanish Morocco and the southern part of the Iberian Peninsula early this month, said the Germans, and Italians have evolved a so-called "W" plan against the fortress guarding the Straits and Great Britain's maritime route to the Near and Far East.

The plan involves a series of military bases laid out in 'zig zag formation on both sides of the Straits of Algeciras, just west of Gibraltar, Ceuta, Spanish Morocco, Tarifa, Azila and Cadiz, it was claimed.

New forts at Bugio, behind the historic rock, had almost been completed and are equipped with powerful "disappearing" guns which could unloose a devastating fire on the central part of Gibraltar, the correspondent said.

Manvers Pair Honored By Friends On Their Silver Anniversary

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LIFFORD LINE, March 9. — On Friday evening Mr. and Mrs. William Armstrong celebrated the 25th anniversary of their marriage at their home one mile south of Galloway's school. Over one hundred friends and neighbors gathered to enjoy this unusual observance with them and convey their heart-felt greetings and congratulations.

Mr. Harry Preston acted as chairman in a most capable manner and a number of community songs were lustily sung. Entertaining readings were contributed by Miss Cora Bailey, Mrs. Keith Thorndyke and Miss Brown, the latter of Peterborough. The Misses Gladys Wright and Marjorie Page sang a much appreciated duet. Speeches were given by several, including Messrs. Hiram Ward, William Hannah, H. Preston and Harold Cathcart, the latter of Cavan. Numerous musical numbers were also contributed.

The chief item on the program was the reading of an address by Mr. Harvey Gray, who voiced in well-chosen words the sentiments of those present, and the presentation of a beautiful three-piece Chesterfield suite. Suitable thanks and expression of appreciation were voiced by the groom, not only for the very lovely and costly gift, but also for the sincere good wishes of loyal friends. For they are jolly good fellows was sung.

A delightful lunch had been arranged by the committee in charge. A delicious three-story cake made by Mrs. Harvey Gray was an important item on the menu. During the evening cards and dancing were enjoyed.

The Armstrong family are intimately associated with Ballyduff Presbyterian church and are stunch workers and supporters. They are liberal, helpful neighbors and have a host of friends to wish them many more years of happy wedded life.

The following address was read by Harvey Gray:

Dear Friends,—It is with the greatest of pleasure that we, a few of your friends, relatives, and neighbors have gathered around you to bear testimonies of friendship and to congratulate you on having successfully crossed the 25th milestone of wedded life. We extend to you our best wishes and many happy return of the memorable day. No doubt during your married life you can recall many joyful experiences, as well as some that were not so pleasant. However, you have fashiond your lives in such a way that you have made this world of ours a better place to live. As an expression of our feelings and devotion to you, we ask you to accept this gift as a slight token of the high esteem in which you are held. Japs Advise Britain To Back Yen

Propose Retaliation For Aid To China; Fish Conflict Brews

TOKYO, March 10 (AP)—Japan today dispatched "decisive" instructions to her Moscow Ambassador in connection with the fishery rights dispute with the Soviet Union.

About the same time, a foreign office critized Great Britain's support of the central Chinese Government's currency and advised Britain to throw her financial weight behind the Japanese - supported currency in China.

Japanese newspapers said the Tokyo Government would take counter action against Britain for contributing $25,000,000 to a Chinese corporation for currency stabilization but the Foreign Office spokesman refused to comment on this.

Details of the instructions sent to Ambassador Shigenori Togo—beyond the fact they were "decisive"—were not disclosed but it was believed the Envoy was told to warn Russia that Japan would resort to free fishing unless Moscow renews the Japanese privilege of fishing in Siberian territorial waters.

Reflecting the serious situation developed from the long and tangled negotiations over fishing rights, the Cabinet was called to hear the text of Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita's instructions to Togo and unanimously approved them.

Fishing grounds formerly allotted to Japan as a privilege conveyed by the treaty of Portsmouth which ended the Russo-Japanese was in 1905 will be put up for sale next Wednesday.

Slayer Of Five Ready To Die

VERSAILLES, March 10 (AP). — Eugene Weidmann, one-time Canadian prairie farm-hand and confessed slayer of five persons, including an American dancer, declared himself ready to die as he was called to trial today on charges ranging from murder to attempted fraud.

He told his woman lawyer, Renee Jardin, that "I want to be in order with God before appearing before him," that he was reconciled to execution on the guillotine.

It was to Miss Jardin, favorite among his four attorneys, that he told the story of his "slayings for money" which included the strangling of Miss Jean De Koven, Brooklyn, N.Y., dancer.

Only 150 persons were given permission to enter the court-room where 17 years ago the "Blue-beard" Henri Landrau was condemned to the guillotine for the murder of 11 women.

Miss De Koven was strangled to death at Weidmann's rented villa in suburban St. Cloud July 23, 1937, and he is charged with obtaining 800 francs ($20.80) in cash and $480 in travellers' cheques by her death.

Three On Trial As Aides.

On the trial with Weidmann were three persons accused as accomplices:

Roger Million, 27, charged with murder, robbery, complicity in murder, attempted fraud and receipt of stolen goods.

Jean Blanc, 27, serious looking Parisian wool merchant who allegedly supplied money for the gang's operations, charged with association with criminals.

Weidmann, a German who worked on Saskatchewan farms until he was deported for committing two offences which brought him jail sentences, is accused of murder, robbery, attempted fraud and assaulting French policemen with intent to kill. His victims, the prosecutor charged in the indictment, included a taxi driver, a nursemaid, a German with whom Weidmann had served a prison term in Germany, a real estate agent from whom Weidmann sought to rent a new villa—all for robbery.

C.B.C. To Allow Leadership League On Air

OTTAWA, March 10 — (CP) — Conditional permission has been granted by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation for broadcast over a network of 17 private stations of a Toronto meeting of the newly organized leadership league next Wednesday night, L. W. Brockington, chairman of the C. B. C., informed the Parliamentary Radio Broadcasting Committee today.

Request was received from the organization yesterday for a combination of a number of basic stations of the C. B. C. network and a number of stations not on that network, Mr. Brockington said.

Regarding use of the C. B. C. stations for such broadcast, the management wrote the League that because they were all necessary parts of the C. B. C. system of national distribution, "permission cannot be granted nor the interruption of the regular national network service on these basic stations during period which have been specially reserved and contracted for."

Use of a listed hook-up of private stations would be permitted, if the stations were agreeable and had

A.R.P. Costs Set At $197,945,700

LONDON, March 10—(CP Cable).—Air radio precautions will cost £42,205,907 ($197,945,700) in the 1939 fiscal year but civil estimates published today included only about £5,000,000 for that purpose. The remainder of the sum will be borrowed.

The estimates included the record sum of $62,242,026 for the board of education.

Estimates for A.R.P. represented an increase of £29,981,567 over 1938. The main expenditure will be £30,-328,240 on equipment and material, or £25,050,440 more than last year. Grants to local authorities accounted for £6,600,000, an increase of £4,500,000.

Other figures were civilian training schools £37,912, an increase of £10,612; special services, including research and experiments, £383,690, an increase of £170,690; the storage and distribution of respirators, £202,-535, an increase of £89,825; and evacuation and other emergency expenditure £200,000, an increase of £150,000.

For the protection of vital services a nominal sum of £10 was set down. For respirator factories the estimate was £31,320, a decrease of £37,880.

Included in the A.R.P. estimates was £4,381,210 for emergency fire brigade services, an increase of £2,-500,000, and grants to local authorities, £500,000, an increase of £400,000.

Two new charges were £50,000 for storage and repair of appliances and £11,200 for inspection and examination of appliances and equipment.

A nominal sum of £10 was provided to cover local grants to local authorities in respect to emergency water supplies.

Light-Sleeping Women Spoil Raid On Bank As Alarm Chases Gang Busy On Vault

ST. THOMAS, Ont., March 10. —(CP).— Promptness of Mrs. R. H. Affleck and her guest, Mrs. Elmer Moore, in giving a telephone alarm about three men acting suspiciously in front of the Royal bank office in Dutton prevented a robbery there early to-day.

Awakened by sounds, the women saw the men from the window of the Affleck home on the opposite corner. They at once notified the telephone exchange and the manager of the bank, C. A. Wright, and called the McIntyre hotel, located near the bank.

From the hotel, Frank Garfat walked past and around the bank, made a pretence of opening a gate at the rear of the building and heard a yell from under the building, "What do you want?"

He decided he didn't want anything and retraced his steps until he met Night Watchman Goode. The two returned to the bank to find the would-be robbers gone. The back door was open and there was evidence that acetylene gas torches had been used on the vault. There was also evidence in the snow outside of equipment having been carried into the bank from a car which was also used to hurry the men away. The intruders took two .32 calibre revolvers from the cashier's cage. Provincial police were on the scene within an hour, but no trace of the men was found.

Hopes Rising For Great Arms Parley

Expect Chamberlain To Try Rally During Summer

LONDON, March 10 — (CP). — A cautious hope for some limited form of international disarmament was entertained in British official circles today, while the Empire press reflected a new optimism radiating from Downing street.

Informed circles said the government is more optimistic at present over the prospects for Prime Minister Chamberlain's "realistic" program for European appeasement than at any time in recent months.

While newspapers of the Empire carried London dispatches unanimously reporting this view, the Daily Mail (Independent) said:—

"Mr. Chamberlain is planning to call a conference of big powers to consider calling a halt to the arms race in Europe, possibly before the end of the summer.

"Limitation may be aimed at aerial weapons in the first instance....if progress could be made in that direction the disarmament discussions might bewidened to include world powers including the United States, powrs including the United States.

"The scope of the conference would be extended also to include economic problems."

It was understood that three factors were dominant in the improved international landscape. The British government is convinced Italian territorial claims on France will be settled at a conference table and not by war; peace in Spain is believed in the cards for the near future; Germany, preoccupied with her own economic promlems, is anxious to sign price and marketing agreements with the Pnited Kingdom.

Just A Feeler

In some quarters, the press reports of a possible conference on disarmament were regarded as "feelers" put out by the British government.

They came on a day when Air Secretary Sir Kingsley Wood announced to the House of Commons that Great Britain was spending more than $1,000,000 a day for warplanes alone as part of her gigantic rearmament program and expected to have 2,250 first line fighting planes by the end of this month.

In recent weeks, the House of Commons has received estimates for various branches of the national defence as the nation went ahead with its greatest peacetime armament drive. To meet the tremendous expenditures, parliament authorized doubling the government's borrowing powers from £400,000,000 (approximately $1,880,000,000.)

If progress were made toward limitation of armanents, Mr. Chamberlain was represented as being ready to discuss with Chancellor Hitler Germany's colonial demands.

First, of course, there must be peace in Spain, then a discussion of Italian claims in the Mediterranean before disarmament could be discussed.

The Daily Herald (Labor) said the British cabinet now takes the view that "difficulties in the way of peaceful settlement of problems which are causing tension throughout Europe are no longer insuperable.

"How far this view is based on hard evidence and how far as wishful thinking, it is not easy to say," the newspaper stated.

AMSTERDAM—(CP). — The day after they were hatched 3,000 chicks were flown from here to London.

Father Borrows Truck To Announce Baby And Posties Resent It

Niagara Falls, N.Y., March 10—POLICE Lieutenant Richard Swift reported the theft of a United States mail truck today — not for the mail it contained, but as a vehicle for a new father to carry news of the arrival of a daughter.

The truck disappeared from the Post Office loading platform. Five minutes later it was found, stalled, with the proud father trying to start it.

"He thought it was an empty truck and he borrowed it to drive to his parents' home and tell them the good news," Swift said.

The proud father was held for questioning by postal authorities.

House Approves Canada-U.S. Trade Treaty

OTTAWA, March 10.—(CP). — Having approved the Canada-United States trade agreement in principle, the House of Commons to-day moves on to consideration of the government proposal to create a defence purchasing board, described by Prime Minister Mackenzie King as the second most important measure to come before parliament this session.

Last night without a recorded vote, although Liberal members hoped to have one, Mr. Mackenzie King's motion calling for approval of the trade agreement was passed. It was adopted "on division." There were shouts of "nay" from the Conservative benches but the requisite number of votes did not stand to call for a roll call vote.

A ef wdays ago, the Prime Minister said the trade agreement was the most important item of sessional business and the defence purchasing bill the next in importance. This will set up a board consisting of experienced industrials or business men to make all purchases of materials and supplies for Canada's expanding defence program. Details will become known when Defence Minister Mackenzie introduces the bill following passage of the preliminary resolution which will be called for debate to-day.

The United Staes agreement has still some distance to go before it becomes law. To-day the House begins consideration of the tariff changes, item by item in committee of ways and means. After that a bill to give effect to the changes must be passed.

Passage of the bill will probably give the government the opportunity it missed last night of obtaining a recorded vote. The Liberals are anxious to put Conservative members who criticized the treaty in the debate on record as formally voting against it.

Confusion Upsets Plans.

A bit of confusion in the House as Robert Finn (Lib. Halifax) tried to obtain the floor just as Speaker Pierre Casgrain began to put the question upset plans which had been made for the vote. In the confusion the motion passed and Defence Minister Mackenzie was the only member to jump to his feet to demand a division. The rules require at least six members to stand before a division is called.

Some Liberal members had hastily rushed into the House from a hockey game to record their votes. When they found the motion had passed they dashed back to the game to witness the last period.

Martin To Ask Radio Fee Dropped

Thinks Broadcasting Ought To Be Paid By People Generally

OTTAWA, March 10 (CP).—Paul Martin (Lib., Essex East) notified the House of Commons Committee on Radio Broadcasting today that he intended to move for the abolition of the $2.50 license fee collected from owners of receiving sets.

Consideration of the proposal was put off, but Transport Minister Howe, whose department has jurisdiction over radio matters, requested the committee to make its decision on this point not later than March 25.

"I have taken the position in the House and elsewhere that the radio license fee is prejudicing the interests of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation," said Mr. Martin. "There are arguments both for and against; but I think I can give good reason, when the financial operations of the C.B.C. are discussed in this committee, why there should be no license fee at all."

Asked by J. Earl Lawson (Con. York South) whether his proposal contemplated that the whole cost of broadcasting be borne by the taxpayers out of the consolidated funds, Mr. Martin said that if the C. B. C. was intended as "a moulder of national character" he thought broadcasting ought to be paid for by the people generally.

Without a change in the Broadcasting Act, he did not see where other sources of revenue could be found, Mr. Howe said. He recalled the recommendations of the Aird Commission, acceptance of which resulted in the imposition of the radio licence fee. From the present $2.50 fee, the Corporation derived $2,700,000 representing approximately 1,200,000 licences. To reduce it to $2 would lose $600,000 to the Corporation.

"The fee was raised to $2.50 on representations of the Corporation that its plans for installing complete coverage of high-power stations would require a revenue of $2,500,000," said Mr. Howe.

He reminded the committee that the big stations at Sackville, N.B., and Watrous, Sask., were not yet in operation, and the obligations incurred in their installation not yet met.

"Unless the Government and Parliament can be persuaded to change the costs of radio from the users of radio to the taxpayers the question reduces itself to whether the present fee is unnecessarily high, having regard to the requirements of broadcasting," he said.

It was part of the committee's duty to examine the Corporation's operations and advise the Government whether, in the committee's opinion, $2.50 fee was necessary to carry on the Corporation's work.

"The Government would like some guidance before April 1," Mr. Howe said. "It would upset the collection machinery to change the amount after that date."

The size of the fee was out of the Minister's hands. Under the Broadcasting Act he had no control over the Corporation, he declared. The committee, however, had the right to see how much the Corporation was spending.

Grade Shorthorn Sets New Production Record For All Breeds

Amesbury, Wiltshire, England, March 10—(CP Cable)—CHERRY, a non-pedigreed dairy shorthorn cow, today broke the world record milk yield for all breeds. On the 333rd day since calving she passed the old record of 38,600 pounds of milk in 365 days held by American Holstein-Friesian cow.

A week ago Cherry established a British record—37,846 pounds in 326 days. The previous British record was 37,832¼ pounds, established by Graceful X, a British Friesian belonging to Lord Rayleigh.

Alec McKie, who looks after Cherry, predicts she will be the world's first 40,000-gallon cow.

Ontario Extends Mortgage Moratorium

TORONTO, March 10—(CP).—Formal expression of loyalty and devotion to King George VI will be made today in a resolution in the Ontario Legislature to be moved by Premier Mitchell Hepburn and seconded by Conservative leader George Drew.

Such expression is usually contained in the throne speech but in view of the forthcoming royal visit, it is being especially set forth by resolution. Two war veteran members of the House, Fraser Hunter (Lib.-Toronto St. Patrick) and John J. Glass (Lib. Toronto St. Andrew) will speak to the resolution from the Liberal side. Col. Drew and William Stewart (Con. Toronto Parkdale) will speak for the opposition.

The House had a quiet day yesterday as it gave first reading to a number of government bills and heard the address in reply to the speech from the throne moved by H. Louis Hagey (Lib. Brantford) and seconded by J. M. Cooper (Lib. Sudbury).

Premier Hepburn relieved some anxiety among his followers by a statement that his health was such he was "as fit for the scrap today as I have been at any time." He was confident he would be in the House at prorogation.

There was relief felt by the Liberal members when word came at noon the premier would attend the session. He was ordered to bed by his physician after Wednesday's House opening and alarming reports circulated around the Legislature corridors concerning his condition.

An Extension

The House gave first reading yesterday to Attorney-General Gordon Conant's bill to extend the mortgage moratorium until June 30, 1940. This annual extension has been made by the Legislature since the enactment of the Mortgagers' and Purchasers' Relief Act in 1933.

Health Minister Harold Kirby brought in an amendment to the Public Hospitals Act to require that any action against a hospital of its employees for negligence concerning patients must be brought within six months after the discharge of such patients.

Mr. Hagey urged measures to relieve the burden of relief costs on the real estate owner. It was unfair that such a heavy share of the costs of social services and relief should be passed on to a particular class in the community—the real estate owner—through municipal taxation.

The greatest problem in Canada today is unemployment, said Mr. Hagey. Means of alleviating it through local legislatures were limited and Premier Hepburn had been

Surprise Jail Witness Points Finger At MacDonald In Windsor Murder Case

Claims Mickey Told Him, Night Of Killing "I've Just Shot a Man, He Was a Bookie And No Good Anyway"

TORONTO, March 9 (CP).—John R. Shea, awaiting trial on a bank robbery charge, asserted in police court today that Donald (Mickey) MacDonald told him January 7 he had "just shot a man."

Shea was a surprise witness at the preliminary hearing of Donald and Alex. MacDonald, brothers, charged with the January 7 murder of James Windsor, Toronto bookmaker.

Four men walked into Windsor's North Toronto house on the evening of January 7 and one of them shot the bookmaker, then brutally kicked the dying man's face and body.

Shea said the MacDonalds and Cecil Clancy were in his apartment the night of the murder. When the brothers said they were leaving, Shea swore one of them said, "We're going to do a job."

When they returned some time later Shea said Mickey MacDonald was excited. He quoted Mickey as saying:

"I shot a man and he's dead. I know it because I saw the white in his eyes. He's dead I tell you."

MacDonald Just Grins

..Wearing an overcoat over his jail clothes as he sat in the prisoner's box, Mickey MacDonald grinned during most of Shea's evidence.

Shea said he asked MacDonald "why did you do it?" and the reply was: "I had to do it. He got tough with me and I had to let him have it. He was a bookie and no good anyway."

Shea was committed for trial several weeks ago on a charge of robbing a bank at Port Credit. Alex MacDonald was jointly charged in the bank robbery and also has been committed for trial.

Mickey MacDonald refused to wear any but jail clothes for his court appearance. He was unshaven.

Nova Scotia Has $146,137 Surplus

HALIFAX, March 10—(CP).—Nova Scotia legislators today studied the province's public accounts for the fiscal year ending last Nov 30 and noted a surplus of $146,137 which far exceeded the estimate of $7,896 in last year's budget.

Premier Angus L. Macdonald, provincial treasurer, reported the surplus—third successive one for his Liberal government—as he tabled the accounts yesterday. Revenue was $11,804,393 and expenditure was $11,-296,664. The surplus compared with $62,389 last year.

Increased revenue was shown in reports of all departments except public works and mines and labor. Increased receipts from licenses on commercial cars and the gasoline tax helped boost highways department revenue—biggest single item of revenue—from $3,875,020 to $4,302,-092. A "rather unusually large amount of succession duties," about $140,000 more than last year, boosted revenue of the Attorney-General's department.

Last Minute News Flashes

PEMBROKE—Police Chief William McKee today was suspended from office by town officials after two charges of reckless driving and one of being intoxicated while in charge of an automobile had been laid against him.

TORONTO — Premier Mitchell Hepburn indicated today the likelihood that the municipalities will share gasoline tax revenue with the province if the tax is increased by the Ontario Government. "I said once that if there was an increase the municipalities would share it and I think my word is pretty good," said Mr. Hepburn.

Czechs Dismiss Premier Of Slovakia

PRAGUE, Czecho-Slovakia, Mar. 10.—(AP). — President Hacha dismissed the Premier of Slovakia today and sent Czech troops into the autonomous territory to check radical elements demanding full independence from the Prague government.

The feud between the Provincial and Central governments had smouldered since the Slovaks won autonomy after the Munich partition last September. It broke into the open last night in anti-Czech demonstrations at Bratislava, Slovak capital.

There had been reports during the last week that Slovak extremists were advocating secession, including one report that they had tried and failed to win German backing.

President Hacha acted suddenly to-day by naming Vice-Premier Josef Sivak to succeed Premier Joseph Tiso and dismissing Economics Minister Jan Pruzsinki and Labor Minister Ferdinand Durchansky.

Pargue authorities said radicals appeared to be gaining headway with their demands for independence and that it was necessary to dispatch troops and police into Slovakia.

The Prague government spokesman said they were bringing the situation well under control.

Professor Alois Tuka, leader of the Slovak independence movement, and San Mach, chief of the Slovak propaganda service, were arrested.

Premier-Designate Sivak was appointed by the Central Government in the belief he would promote the objective of a Central Government living at peace with the Slovaks.

Sivak was en route to Rome to the Coronation of Pope Pius XII and was not at once informed of the sudden turn of events.

Anti-Czech and anti-Jewish demonstrations were reported in Slovakia last night. At Malacka the demonstrations were said to have developed into attacks on Jewish shops. In other Slovak cities they were confined to street displays.

350,000 To See Pope Crowned

VATICAN CITY, March 10.—(AP) —Elaborate preparations were underway today for the crowning of Piux XII with the papal triple tiara amid scenes of medieval splendor on the loggia of St. Peter's Basilica.

Vatican authorities expect more than 350,000 persons to jam St. Peters' piazza and open spaces beyond to witness the coronation Sunday. Forty-five thousand may sit or stand inside the vast church throughout the five-hour pontifical mass preceding the coronation.

It will be the first time in nearly 100 years that a Pope has been crowned outside St. Peter's.

The coronation mass and ceremony will be broadcast, also for the first time.

At the omement when the glittering jewel-studded golden trierengo or triple tiara is placed on his head by the dean of cardinal deacons, Caccia Dominioni, the Holy Father will be seated on a specially built throne some 60 feet above the vast throng. For his safety it will have special iron railings.

Veterans Propose National Survey Of 400,000 Members To Aid Authorities In Case Strife Threatens Canada

OTTAWA, March 10.—(CP). — The United Ex-service Men's Associations of Canada have undertaken, as a joint voluntary effort, a national survey of this country's 400,000 war veterans, it was announced here to-day. Its purpose is to gather information on the number, the location and qualifications of ex-service men who, should danger arise from any form of enemy action, would be available to assist the constituted authorities in safeguarding the internal security of Canada.

All national veterans' organizations are linked up in the survey. On their behalf a joint manifesto has been issued over the signature of Col. W. W. Foster, Vancouver, and Col. Charles R. Hill, Toronto, in their capacities as chairman and secretary respectively of the national committee of Dominion presidents of veterans' organizations.

United in this voluntary enrolment of the Dominion's ex-service men are the Canadian Legion of the British Empire Service League, Tuberculosis Veterans' Association, and Imperial Veterans in Canada (Imperial Division), the Army and Veterans in Canada, the Canadian Corps Association, the Amputations' Association of the Great War, the Sir Arthur C. Pearson Club for Blinded Soldiers and Sailors, the Canadian Pensioners' Association, the Disabled Veterans' Association, and the British Imperial Comrades' Association.

Addressed to "all ex-service men and women in Canada," the manifesto emphasizes that the survey is being conducted on the initiative of the war veterans themselves, as a voluntary contribution to the nation, should occasion arise.

It voices the hope that "our services may never be required, but stresses that the conduct of such a survey can be more effectively executed during a time of peace than if it were delayed to a period when the country was experiencing "the demoralizing effect of conflict." It says that "we have reason to believe" that the information gathered will be welcomed by the authorities.

The document sets forth the considerations which have prompted the veterans to embark on this duty. It recalls their devotion to peace through the years, and deplores that their efforts to promote international goodwill have been frustrated by circumstances beyond their control.

"Today world conditions are confused and disturbing," the manifesto says. "Our own will for peace does not, unfortunately, guarantee peace to us. The events of tomorrow are wholly unpredictable. We should be unfaithful to ourselves, to the memory of our comrades and to ou rcountry if we remained indifferent in the face of that uncertainty."

The lessons of the immediate past must not be ignored, the document continues. Of these lessons the manifesto underscores what the veterans believe "the most important." It is that "Canada can not in a period of international tension leave herself exposed to the perils of direct or indirect, hostile action within the state, but should at once provide for our future security."

The country's protective forces should be buttressed by the services of men and women who are competent and willing to serve under the direction of constituted authorities, the manifesto says. It adds that "unquestionably the best reservoir of such men and women is our great body of veterans."

The document traces the steps taken by the veterans during the international crisis of last September. There was unanimous approval of the suggestions that they place their resources at the disposal of the government.

Developments led to the Toronto conference last January when the dominion presidents of veterans organizations accepted the principle of "united veterans action in all matters affecting the welfare of Canada." Establishment of the committee of dominion presidents followed, vested with the duty of ensuring co-ordination and continuity of effort.

Subsequently a series of conferences were held and, says the

Wolf Gets Pink Ribbon For Refusing To Eat Prospector And 2 Pals In Riding Arena

TORONTO, Mar. 10 — (CP).—Jill, a big, bad wolf from Northern Ontario, went about with a pink ribbon around her neck to-day, just to prove Robert R. Cockburn is right in his contention wolves won't attack humans unless cornered.

The ribbon was tied on after Jill and Jack, another equally bad northland wolf, sat down in a riding academy here yesterday and simply refused to attack Cockburn, a prospector who takes issue with Joe Laflamme, the Gogama wolf-team driver who says wolves will attack people.

Jack, 95 pounds of fighting fury, and Jill, 10 pounds lighter, were captured by trappers when Cockburn and Harry (Red) Foster, head of the S.P.T.W.D.G.A.B.P. (Society for Proving That Wolves Go Around Biting People) sent out a call for a couple of timber wolves to prove their point.

Jack and Jill were starved for 24 hours then turned loose in a riding academy. Cockburn, and two other men, entered the academy and awaited developments. Jack crawled along the floor, opened his mouth wide and yawned.

Within two hours the pair of wolves were tamed. Jill submitted quietly to having a pink ribbon tied about her neck and affectionately licked her mate's nose.

"That proves it," Cockburn said later. "Those were hungry wolves. They were alone in the room and might have considered themselves cornered, but they made no move to attack us."

Robbers Smash Handle, Dial On Treasury Vault But Fail To Gain Entry

Latest In Series Of Tampering Incidents With Important Papers Involved; Police, Watchmen Guard Lower Corridors

TORONTO, March 10 (CP).—Provincial and city police refused today to discuss their investigations into an attempt to break into a vault of the Ontario Treasury Deparment at the Legislative Buildings.

Attorney-General Gordon Conant, understood to have ordered an extensive probe into the abortive attempt to get at valuable records, likewise had "nothing to say." The work of provincial and city officers has been proceeding quietly since a door-handle and a combination dial were found battered and broken on the basement vault recently.

The door has been repaired but Legislature police and night watchmen have been keeping a close watch over the lower corridors of the buildings, intent on solving what are reported to have been several incidents of tampering with departmental property. Employees of the Department, particularly from the succession duties branch, are said to have reported finding important papers tampered with.

No arrests have been made but several persons have been questioned. If any information has been gained regarding the depredations, the fact has been closely guarded. Police are understood to believe the persons responsible are familiar with the layout of the buildings and have been interrupted by watchmen before obtaining papers of value.

Canada To Admit 1,500 Sudetens

OTTAWA, March 10 (CP).—Several hundred refugees from the Sudeten area of Czecho-slovakia are to be settled in Western Canada at an early date, completely financed from abroad, Resources Minister Crerar told the Commons yesterday.

The number, he said, would be slightly less than 1,500 and would be determined by tests for fitness — physical, financial and otherwise.

Settlement was being supervised by the colonization branches of the Canadian railways, under an ordinary immigration regulation permitting entry to farmers sufficiently financed to establish themselves on Canadian farms, the Minister said. He did not know exactly where they would be settled.

"While the methods being followed for the admission of refugees to Canada may not be satisfactory to all," he said, "I believe we are going about the matter in the way best calculated to help some of these unfortunate people without, at the same time, disturbing conditions here."

The desperate plight of hundreds of thousands of refugees in Europe appealed to the humanitarian instincts of all, he continued. The criticism had been made that Canada should adopt a more generous attitude regarding immigration, with its vast areas and resources.

Keeping Within Limits.

"We must, however, having regard to existing conditions recognize that there are limits within which we can assist," he said. "Within those limits we are trying to deal with these problems with as much consideration as can be given."

Mr. Crerar told the House a delegation from Czecho-slovakia had visited Canada in December to see if homes could be found for some of those refugees and had been informed no change could be made in immigration regulations but such refugees might be included among the agricultural families being admitted steadily.

The Minister told Agnes Macphail (U.F.O.-Labor, Grey-Bruce) permission to enter Canada had been given by special Order-in-Counil in a few cases where merit was outstanding, such as professional and scientific experts.

"There are too many intelligentsia in this country already," objected Jean Francois Pouliot (Lib., Temiscouata).

The Minister assured H. G. Clarke (Con., Toronto-Rosedale) 95 per cent. of the refugees being admitted were Roman Catholic, so would not be Communists.

Penitentiaries Bill Advances In Senate

OTTAWA, March 10 — (CP) — After being staunchly defended by Government Leader Dandurand and criticised by several Conservative speakers, the government's bill to establish a penitentiary commission was given second reading in the Senate yesterday.

The Upper House then adjourned until Tuesday when the measure probably will be discussed in committee and given third reading. Last session a similar bill was voted down when it came to the Senate a few hours before prorogation.

Conservative Leader Meighen, referring to the clauses in the bill which would provide for three commissioners to replace the penitentiary superintendent, said "I find there is nothing on earth in this bill except the abolition of one job and the creation of three."

It is absurd to contend there is need of a commission in Ottawa with three assistant commissioners, he continued. "I want to warn the government that to build up in Ottawa on autocratic bureaucracy is not penitentiary reform at all. To introduce this as an evolution of human virtue is about as arrant humbug as I have ever heard in the politics of Canada."

Fewer Lots For Japan

(In previous periodic auctions, while Japanese and Russian concerns bid together for some fishing lots, a certain number were sold to the Japanese exclusively. The Japanese contend that Russia now has withdrawn some of the lots from exclusive Japanese bidding.)

Authoritative quarters said Japan would refuse to surrender what she considers a right under the Portsmouth treaty and insisted Japanese fishing fleets would sail in April as usual without Russian approval.

The fishing, it was said, would start beyond Soviet territorial waters in the poorer grounds but the fleets gradually would work in toward the shore, waiting to see what action the Russians would take.

Renzo Sawada, vice-minister of foreign affairs, was said to have questioned closely the British ambassador, Sir Robert Craigie, concerning Britain's backing of the Chinese currency.

(Circulation of the Chinese dollar in North China has been forbidden after today. By decree, persons in Japanese-occupied North China were required to use the Yuan notes of the Federal Reserve bank which was set up at Peiping March 10, 1938.)

the time available, provided the committee arranging the meeting was willing to give the assurances and guarantees laid down by the C. B. C. for such broadcasts over more than one station, the applicant was informed.

Mr. Brockington explained that the C. B. C. recognized no right in any individual or commercial sponsor to broadcast opinion or propaganda over any C. B. C. network or any subsidiary network, which included all private stations. A exception was made for political parties and "duly constituted societies," he said, but the definition of the last named group required clarification.

The Conditions

The League had been informed, by letter, that "properly constituted societies may purchase network time subject to the following conditions:

"(a) That the society accepts responsibility for the broadcast, indemnifying the C.B.C. against the possible consequences of libel or slander.

"(b) That each broadcast is prefaced and concluded by an appropriate announcement making clear the nature and auspices of the broadcast and indicating that equivalent facilities are available to opposing views on the same basis;

"(c) That there is no interference with normal C.B.C. program arrangements;

"(d) That broadcast is of sufficient popular appeal and interest to justify its inclusion;

"(e) That the broadcast is of sufficient popular appeal and interest to justify its inclusion;.

(The leadership league was launched by George McCullagh, publisher of the Toronto Globe and Mail, refused use of network facilities for a series of personal broadcasts which preceded formation of the league.)

Mr. Brockington told the radio committee the C.B.C. was not satisfield with the present definition of "properly constituted societies" and asked the help of the committee in arriving at some arrangement which would be satisfactory to everyone.

The question of political and quasi-political broadcasts was complicated and likely to become far worse. Accordingly, he asked the committee members to forget whether or not they were members of government or opposition groups and help arrive at a real solution of the problem.

"Economic conditions make equality before the receiving set impossible. The CB.C. would like to see equality before the microphone," he said. Broadcast time was limited and, as well, a balance of program had to be maintained.

Sees "Flood" Ahead.

In the next few months, with an election in prospect, the C.B.C. would be flooded with applications for all kinds of time, he said. He did not think the committee would approve a society getting time on the air merely because it had a lot of money behind it.

He suggested the C.B.C. should set apart a time in the week in which political or quasi-political groups, such as the C.C.F., the Saskatchewan Farmers, the Canadian Legion, the group organized by the Hon. W. D. Herridge, and the old political parties, would all be given equal opportunity over thep ublic network, without fee.

"Would you include the Communist Party in that list?" asked Arthur Slaght (Lib. Parry Sound).

"Yes, sir, I would," Mr. Brockingston replied. "I don't know if my fellow-governors would agree with me, but I would. The finest institution in the world is Hyde Park. I'd like to see it on the air."

The C.B.C. did not propose to charge political parties for time on the air at election time as was done in England. He suggested the chief whips of all parties should meet together before election time and work out a schedule, taking cognizance of groups which might be formed between now and election time, so the national radio could make that contribution to public service.

Sees Superior Service.

Situated as Canada was, the future held prospects of this country's broadcasting being superior to that of another, Mr. Brockington said.

"We think the Canadian system is distinctive, and it represents Canadain needs," said Mr. Brockington. The present Board did not invent the radio, or public ownership. At first there had been members of the governing board opposed to national radio, but they had been converted now.

Throughout Canada there were sylvan retreats where citizens might go for recreation and refreshment. These were the national parks, the property of all the people.

"We want to see the radio the national parks of the air, free from the midway and the blatant, places where the high and the humble, the rich and the poor can get enjoyment, entertainment and recreation. That is why I think the radio should be national."

Mr. Brockington said there was no denying certain inconsistencies in decisions previously rendered but he was emphatic that the rulings of the Board relating to the control exercised by the C.B.C. over subsidiary networks were definite on the point of broadcastin⅛ personal opinion. The Board was against radio networks being used for propaganda on controversial matters.

The transcription method employed by G. Geo. McCullagh, publisher of the Globe and Mail, was an indirect violation of the Corporation's rulings and it was his intention to obtain authority for the purpose of jacking these up.

Radio addresses of Col. George A. Drew before he became Ontario Conservative leader were recalled to Mr. Brockington. Permission to broadcast these addresses was an inconsistency, the C.B.C. head declared. It may have been wrong to grant it. He thought that these addresses might have been "border-line cases."

However, the circumstances would be explained by Major Murray when he came to give evidence. The same applied to the broadcast of Edward Reid, London, Ont., of which Mr. Brockington had not heard until last night. Mr. Reid had been sponsored by an insurance company and the impression was he was going to talk insurance but the speech had turned out to be a political one, said Mr. Brockington.

To F. D. McKenzie (Lib. Neepawa) Mr. Brockington said the two- high-powered stations in eastern Canada had cost about $650,000. If it tried to sell them tomorrow, the corporation could get much more fr them than that.

"That is what public ownership means," he commented.

The western station at Watrous, Sask., would cost about $580,000 but the corporation, if it wanted to get rid of it, would have great difficulty "in giving it away."

"That also is what public ownership means," Mr. Brockington added.

Hon. Earl Lawson (Con. York South) suggested the radio and were both publicity media. He felt the difference in principle between advocating control of what publicity was put out over the radio and that put out through newspapers resolved itself to the fact that there was a limited number of hours and wavelengths available on the radio, while there was no limit to the number of papers or pages published.

Mr. Brockington agreed, with the additional observation that radio in Canada was being operated on a national basis. Radio was a community enterprise intended primarily for enlightenment and entertainment.

Newspapers, he said, did not recognize an obligation to permit all points of view to be expressed in their columns. The views expressed were largely those of the proprietor. Radio, on the other hand, should present all facts, as a "community medium for things higher and better than publicity." However, if it was to be used for publicity, it should deal with it fairly and freely.

Youth To Tell Its Side To Kiwanis Club

Members of the Kiwanis Club will hear youth's side of the story nevt Friday when three senior pupils at the Peterborough Collegiate Institute will address the weekly luncheon meeting of the club on vocations they would like to enter and what they are doing about it.

Announcement of this novel meeting was given at yesterday's meeting by President W. A. Richardson, who called for volunteers to sponsor other pupils for the occasion—pupils who would sit in and listen to their fellow-students. Twenty-five responded and that number will be selected to attend the luncheon.

Also present at the meteing, in all probability, will be three ballerinas from the Trudy Schoop organization. Dr. J. J. Craig said he wil sponsor them.

Dick Raine was welcomed into membership in the Kiwanis Club today to the enthusiastic applause of members. He was sponsored by D. J. Fitzgerald and introduced by John I. Allen. President W. A. Richardson welcomed him into membership.

Guest speaker at the meeting was B. Sproule of Toronto, prominent business executive and president of the St. John Medical clinic. He was introduced by Dr. J. J. Craig and Bill English moved a vote of thanks.

Three guests from Montreal attended the meeting, including the secretary of the Montreal Kiwanis Club, T. W. Hodgson. The trio are holidaying at Belmont Lake, north of Havelock, enjoying skiing and snowshoeing. The other two members of the party are A. R. Cumming and A. W. Peters. Another guest at the luncheon was Rev. W. A. McIlroy of Toronto, social service worker in the United Church of Canada. Adam Hawley was guest soloist.

Conspicuously absent from the meeting was Members Lawrie Mitchell and H. R. Scott, who sent a telegram—collect—explaining that they were both ill with flu at their homes and complaining of lack of co-operation from the sick committee.

manifest, "the best advice within the nation was sought and obtained." In consequence of these, "it was realized that the federal and other constituted authorities could not be expected to make specific proposals as to the actual use of our resources until those authorities could know the nature and extent of the resources available."

"It will be obvious to all of you, knowing as you do the demoralizing effect of conflict, that we can only be able to be of greatest value in an emergency if the planning for it be done in time of peace," the document says.

The Right Time Is Now.

"Thus, the only sound conclusion was that we should conduct now, in the full realization and in the hope that our services may never be required, a nation-wide survey of our ex-service personnel in Canada to reveal their number, location and details of their qualifications."

"We have reason to believe that the information which will be available as a result of our proposed survey will be welcomed by the authorities," says the manifesto, which emphasizes the voluntary character of the scheme. Enrolment "does not constitute enlistment, and imposes no obligation of any sort," the document declares.

"The object of the survey is to have available, when it is completed, the necessary information with respect to those of us who are able and who express the willingness to serve. The survey is designed to ensure, by making its results known to them, that the constituted authorities will know hat this great voluntary body of ex-service men and women is ready to assist them in safeguarding internal security should it be threatened by international tension."

Should the need arise, the actual service tasks of personnel would be organized later under the complete control and direction of the authorities.

'If and when you are offered a definite task by the authorities your present enrolment leaves you complete liberty of action to decide upon that more specific step under such conditions as may then be indicated," says the manifesto.

It is particularly stressed that in making the survey the veterans are not seeking to organize themselves into "even an approach to an independent veteran force." What services may eventually be performed will be "closely knit into the protective forces of the nation."

Market Review

TORONTO, March 10 — (CP). — Buyers turned to the Western oil stocks to-day and in the buying rush prices were pushed up right along the line and, with few exceptions, the gains were held till the close. The market was stronger all round and there were a few features aside from the junior oils. Brazilian Traction was outstanding, rising nearly two points in trade of about 35,000 shares. Late profit-taking cut the gain moderately. All indices were up at the close and aggregate turnover was fair at about 625,000 shares.

The market added to its gains through the early session and trading was active in a few selected issues of the mining and industrial group, while the Western oil shares were generally strong and active.

Brazilian Traction was up two points to a new high price for a year or longer on turnover that ran close to 30,000 shares in the first three hours. Foods, steels, utilities and construction stocks were strong.

Action in the golds was concentrated mainly in the medium-price issues, with McIntyre featuring the seniors and setting a record high price at 59.

Wall Street Close.

NEW YORK, March 10—(AP). — Stocks showed a willingness to rally in to-day's market, but most received only mild support.

At that ,there was an assortment of new highs for the year, and fractional gains predominated near the final hour. But losers were plentiful and a number of issues were at a standstill.

Cobourg Tax Rate Is Cut Three Mills

COBOURG, March 10.—Cobourg's tax rate for 1939 was set by the town council at 42 mills on the dollar at the regular meeting this week. This, together with the one mill subsidy from the Ontario Government, means that the taxpayers of the corporation will enjoy a three mill reduction from the rate that prevailed last year, as the actual rate will be 41 mills.

Wins Hallett Prize

The prize was for the highest marks in the primary examination for the degree of Fellow of the R.C.S. Dr. Large studied at Middlesex Hospital and University College, London, for the examination.

Canadian Doctor Offers Hope For Paralytic

DETROIT, March 10 — (CP). — Roger Carr, 34, of Detroit vibrated with new hope today after Dr. W. J. McCormick of Toronto wrote Carr telling of a treatment that may end the multiple sclerosis that for six years has been breaking down Carr's motor nerves in slow relentless progression.

Carr, once a high school track star in Detroit, suffered the disease first six years ago after he had donated 11 pints of blood in 20 weeks. He gave himself to the medical profession as a human guinea pig to aid the search for a cure. "More than 50 experiments have failed, bu Dr. McCormick will succeed," Carr said.

Mr. McCormick, a frequent contributor to Canadian and United States medical journals, said his treament of sclerosis was an outgrowth of his advancement of a new theory that a vitamin B deficiency was responsible for poliomyelittis, often called infantile paralysis.

Dr. McCormick said he heard of a case of multiple sclerosis, "so called creeping paralysis," after he had worked out his theory of poliomyelitis cause.

"Thinking that inasmuch as it is a form of chronim poliomyelitis it might be responsive to the new vitamin treatment I took on his case as an experiment after his case had been given up as hopeless by the neurological staff of Toronto General Hospital," wrote Dr. McCormick to Carr.

Arms, Legs Useless

"The patient, John Baxter, living at 218 Chisholm Avenue, was so completely paralyzed when I began treating him June 10 last that he had developed the habit of turning over the pages of a book with his tongue.

"His arms and legs were completely useless. Even his breathing and swallowing had begun to be affected. Under my vitami ntreatment, consisting of injections of the pure vitamins and a diet rich in same, he has gradually recovered his strength until at the present time he has the free use of all his muscles. He can walk smartly without even a cane, go up and down stairs without assistance, chop wood and shovel snow."

Dr. McCormick wrote he had a considerable number of similar cases under treatment in Toronto, two in Detroit, and one in Cleveland, Buffalo, Hamilton, Edmonton and in Vancouver.

Hungry Sea Swallows Doomed Freighter.

General Franco Massing For Double Clean-up Drive

HENDAYE, France, March 10.—(AP)—Spanish Nationalists were reported today to be preparing to land troops for an attack on Cartagena, after establishing a "starvation blockade" of coastal territory in republican hands.

Dispatches reaching the border indicated nationalist General Franco planned a double attack against the coast and against Madrid to speed up surrender by the Madrid defence council under General Jose Maija, without waisting any more time on discussion of terms.

A message reported to have been intercepted from the republican naval base of Cartagena said the nationalist fleet had arrived off that port, and that the few small warships remaining there under republican command were ordered out in "suicide patrol" to prevent the nationalist landing "at all costs."

Franco was said to have established his headquarters at Carabanchel, only three miles behind the front lines which pass through the outskirts of the capital.

General Miaja was reported to have clamped down a machine-gun rule on Madrid in preparation for surrender to the nationalists—if he could win a few days of grace in which republican leaders could flee.

After checking a 48-hour communist insurrection against his defence council, reports from tht capital indicated Miaja was taking no chances of a new outbreak interfering with negotiations he was said to have opened with France.

The Nationalist blockade proclaimed at Burgos yesterday extended from Sagunto to Adra, northern and southern limits of the Mediterreanean coast-line which is held by the Republicans.

All shipping, regardless of its cargo or flag, was warned it would be liable to capture if it entered within the three-mile limits between those points.

Submarines patrolled before Cartagena and were ready to sing suspected shipping at sight.

The first victim of the blockade was the French merchant vessel, La Corse, captured and taken into the Nationalist port of Barcelona.

The Franco blockade assumed belligerent rights for the Burgos regime—illegal in British and French eyes. Many observers, however, did not expect those two countries to take any action since they have recognized the Franco Government and want the civil war brought to a quick end.

Madrid dispatches said machine-guns were mounted at all important street intersections with columns of tanks two and three abreast patrolling principal thoroughfares. Miaja ordered the troops not to fire unless they were attacked.

Over The Fifty Mark

Records show that in Peterborough we have 28 people over fifty years of age who have been receiving relief for five years or over. That is, continuous relief. It is reasonable to expect that the number will increase from year to year. As things are constituted today, unless a man has some special training or ability it is difficult for him to become gainfully employed after he has well crossed the fifty mark.

Such people are not entitled to receive the old-age pension until they are 70 years of age, so there are a good many years in there when the municipality has to make its contribution toward their upkeep. Experience has also shown that there are virtually none of these cases in which the children are coming to the support of parents or providing for them in old age, so in that way a responsibility is thrown on the public purse which did not rest there in other times.

It may be that what we call the standard of living has made it impossible for children to provide for their parents when they are no longer able to do so themselves. There are more places to go, there are more ways of getting there; there are finer tastes in clothing, and all these things while fine in themselves, call for a greater personal outlay, and in many cases they are very directly contributing to a greater public responsibility as the public purse now does in many cases what the family purse used to do.

We do not believe it is an improvement. Rather it can be looked upon as a retrograde step because when people begin to lose their sense of responsibility in family matters they have forfeited something which makes them actually poorer whether they care to admit it or realize it or not.

Of course it would be possible to have recourse to law to enforce family obligations, but only to a limited extent, and when such course is taken it brings in the element of compulsion which will be evaded on the least pretext.

There have been thousands of cases in this and all other countries where father or mother have been gladly welcomed into the homes of their children. It has been accepted as something which was quite right and proper and such homes have been a blessing to the community and have added to the sum total of human happiness. It is a sad thing to find that sense of family responsibility breaking down under what we erroneously refer to as our higher standard of living.

At a Hockey Meeting

The Ontario Rural Hockey Association held an executive session in Galt and the business on hand was the consideration of various protests about players, arranging dates and such matters. Before the gathering adjourned there was a resolution presented and we read it was passed without dissent:

"The O.R.H.A., an association of 114 teams, goes on record to protest to the Attorney-General against any loosening of the Sunday observance laws as anticipated. We as an association feel it is in the interests of all concerned that the present observance laws be adhered to and that copies of the resolution be forwarded to Attorney-General Conant and Premier Hepburn."

Of course that is an unusual piece of business to be brought before the executive of a hockey association, and that is the reason why it is important. It carries far more weight and conviction than a resolution from a church society or a letter from the Lord's Day Alliance because it would be anticipated in advance what such resolutions would contain.

There is something entirely wholesome about the picture of the Rural Hockey Association being in session and taking time off to politely inform the authorities at Queen's Park that the members speaking for 114 hockey teams preferred to have Sunday left just as it is, and it is conceivable that a resolution of that sort might well have gone a long way toward causing the Attorney-General to drop or indefinitely postpone action toward loosening up on Sabbath regulations.

Great Deal Of Trash

Putting a measuring stick alongside of a story carried in one of the many papers which come to this desk daily we found one about the impending marriage of Clark Gable of the movies which covered 12 inches and more, but for the sake of easy reference we will call it just a foot.

Clark Gable's second wife divorced him and he handed over $286,000 by way of settlement, and now it is expected he will take a third wife, Carole Lombard, and she in turn has been married and divorced.

The story goes on to exude slush and piffle about Gable being along at home and trying to fix things up, and telling how the place "lacks a woman's refining influence" until one who reads is feeling the need of making a hurried rush for the ship's rail.

There is even some reference to romance in it. There is more about his recent divorce having been granted because of his desire for more freedom. Not a word said about him desiring to be rid of wife No. 2 so he could be off to gather to himself wife No. 3.

It does look as though people in the world of pictures centred at Hollywood have a code of ethics all their own which would not be tolerated in a jungle. The laws of God and the dictates of decency are not theirs at all, and yet we are supposed to take them seriously when they appear on the screen as the ones best fitted to portray life at its best with its hopes, problems and ambitions.

Stuck a Gad In The Ground

The most prolific return from the the planting of a tree yet recorded comes in the form of a story from the village of Adelaide in Middlesex county. Truth is there is not much in the place which can be called a village today.

George Barrett, who is now 79 years of age stuck a willow gad in the ground 67 years ago and the thing took root and started to grow and it also threw out branches. It kept on at the growing business until it became a great tree.

This winter it was decided to cut the tree and make it into stove wood. The trunk was so great there was not a saw in the community which could tackle it so the cutting started where the limbs branched out, and the result of the several weeks of effort is 20 cords of wood, and the trunk remains. Judging from a picture there is probably another two cords in that trunk.

So the lad who stuck a willow switch in the ground 67 years ago lived to see the day when it amounted to more than 20 cords of wood. That must be what they mean by natural wealth.

We No Longer Wait

Perhaps the strict and severe method by which the province collects inheritance taxation has something to do with it, but it is plain enough we start talking and having things printed in the papers about a man's money just about as soon as the news of his death has been made known.

The death of Sir Joseph Flavelle was recorded the other day, and almost at once there was a despatch from Toronto telling that the Ontario treasury would probably be enriched to the extent of $1,725,000 by reason of the levies which would be made against the estate by the taxing officers.

It may be the next step will be to have such information incorporated in the story which tells of a man's passing. We are fast approaching that stage as we no longer wait until after the funeral before starting on the money angle.

Perhaps it is right enough to have it done that way, but there is in it such an abrupt departure from the older way of doing things that it is difficult to come into full-orbed admiration of the new method all at once.

He Has a Suggestion

Dean H. S. Stewart of McMaster University, when speaking in a church at Toronto on the question of temperance, had a suggestion which he worded this way: "The Christian people of Canada could worry the liquor business to death if they set out to do so." He would have a boycott of movies in which leading characters were drinking, and there should be a boycott extended to magazines which carried liquor advertising.

The only thing wrong with this good suggestion is that we fear Dean Stewart will not see the day when it comes to pass. The people in churches are by no means a unit in the business of leaving liquor alone, and no person is more aware of that than a good many of the ministers. One of them made this statement to the Examiner:

"When the question of local option was up in the community I felt the church should be in the fight, and I knew it was my duty to speak on the question. I also knew I was not speaking for my entire membership because there are homes in my congregation where liquor is on hand. These people never drink to excess, but the liquor is there."

We doubt too whether people who are classed as Christian folk will cease to buy magazines because they find liquor advertising in them. They have not done it yet and the issue has been before them a long time. That is why we doubt whether they will begin to do it now.

A Man Who Lost Much

Possibly the number of people outside of Toronto who knew Sir Henry Pellatt was small. Most people knew him as the man who had spent $1,700,000 to build a castle on a hill in Toronto and another million to furnish it with treasures from Europe.

Of course building that great place turned out to be a mistake because when the depression came it had to go and it reverted to the city for unpaid taxes. It is not every man who has had to face such hard publicity in parting with his possessions. A man may lose a fortune and the world will hear little of it, but it is different when a man loses a place like the castle on the hill for unpaid taxes.

Sir Henry died in a modest enough home in Mimico, and if there is one fine thing which has been said of the man it is that he took his loss without complaining or growing bitter with the world by reason of it. And we know of nothing which is more calculated to test a man's fibre.

Outlook For Beef Cattle

It may be too soon to predict with certainty what effect the new trade agreement with United States is going to have on Canadian markets, but there are drovers in some parts of Ontario who report that farmers are not now willing to sell cattle at existing prices. They are waiting until the first of April because they expect prices are going to increase. The farmers have plenty of feed in their barns and it is not particularly expensive, so they predict they will be better off by feeding until April before selling. Then Canada will have an 86.2 per cent. share of livestock imports by United States.

One drover said there would be over a 14-cent wholesale price for dressed heifers and steers by the first of June. Animals which are within the 700-pound range are likely to make the highest price as there is a marked preference for that weight in United States markets.

Dealers and butchers predict also that there will be slightly higher prices in the retail stores. It cannot yet be said there is anything like a shortage in supply, but the offerings are less than they were previously and the tendency of farmers to hold off for the opening of the United States market is bound to affect retail values.

The Examiner is not making market predictions but merely reviewing what drovers and dealers are saying in various parts of the province. We do not believe the actual result of any trade agreement can well be judged until after it has been in operation for some time, but at the moment men who are in the cattle business are looking for better prices.

NOTE AND COMMENT

The tax rate in Guelph for the year is 50.5 mills. At first glance that looks high, but the extent depends entirely upon the basis of assessment.

The muskrat season is now open in several counties in Ontario. That is, the muskrat season is open before the season itself is in that condition.

Plane in England, out of gas, crashed through the roof of a farmer's cottage. No person was injured, but there is a feeling that dropping in on people that way is not just the proper method.

A turnip purchased at a store in Peterborough had on it a sticker saying it had been grown in Prince Edward Island, so it had to travel a long way from home to find the ultimate consumer.

Among those seeking Canadian citizenship at Simcoe is Julian Wysochanski from Poland. At the risk of being familiar on short notice we prefer to call him Julian.

Governing bodies generally are telling the people they must prepare to pay higher taxes, but not one of them comes forward with a suggestion telling the folk how to get the higher money to pay the higher taxes.

Worker in Montreal post office is accused of stealing $14,000 from letters directed to the Irish sweepstakes office. It's illegal to buy these tickets and illegal to steal so the thing looks wrong all the way through.

It was admitted at Ottawa that the naming of collectors for radio fees had always been on the basis of patronage. Perhaps so, but when a man gets a summons for not having a license it would do no good at all to go into court and say he was a good Grit.

Dono Edmond, former beauty expert for the court of Rumania, has arrived in New York, and advises that girls should learn to look at men "fleetingly." Better try that over on your cracked looking glass before attempting it in actual operation.

LETTERS

(By A.R.K.)

¶ I feel some better on the day, the mail man comes around my way, and leaves a letter there; it seems to put all things just right, that some one took the time to write, so things seem pretty fair.

¶ When I hear from my Cousin Jake, I know there can't be no mistake, he scrawls an awful lot; and on the envelope I know, the ink marks always start to grow, until he makes a blot.

¶ But when my Cousin Jake sits down, he covers everything in town, out in the country too; he tells me how his ear got froze, describes the way it snows and blows, of paths he has to hew.

¶ He starts then on the family tree, reports how each and all may be, of those in bed and out; an aunt has got a broken arm, she slipped when coming from the barn, her husband has the gout.

¶ Jake doesn't spell his words all right, he holds his pen by far too tight, no paragraphs he knows; he must start in at eight o'clock, nor can he stop to read or talk, at midnight he will close.

¶ But when Jake's letters come to me, I'm well informed as I can be, for they are never thin; like meeting aunts and uncles too, and getting family history too—of all my kith and kin.

What Pensions May Yet Cost Us

(From Hansard)

Mr. DUNNING: At any rate one may say this, that that proportion of fifty per cent eligible, which is really the basis of my hon. friend's argument, has held fairly steady in the provinces which originally came into the scheme prior to the present depressed conditions. There is not the factor of variability there that my hon. friend would probably hope for and which I certainly would hope for.

Mr. HEAPS: But there is an enormous increase in the amount.

Mr. DUNNING: If my hon. friend will look at the figures I gave last year he will find the percentages of those over seventy allowed by the bureau of statistics in making this calculation are as follows: In 1931 our percentage of population over seventy years of age was six per cent. The bureau thinks it will be 6.7 per cent in 1941, eight per cent in 1951, 9.8 per cent in 1961 and 10.1 per cent in 1971, when it is estimated that a general leveling up will have been reached unless in the meantime our age groups are further affected by large scale immigration of particular age groups.

Now, if we lowered the pension age to sixty-five, the immediate additional cost to the dominion alone would be $18,859,000 a year. The total cost to the dominion alone if the eligible age were lowered to sixty-five would be $48,621,000 as against $30,500,000 provided for the current year. If we reduced the eligible age to sixty, the estimated immediate cost to the dominion would be an additional $44,000,000 more than we are now spending. That is to say, to reduce the pensionable age by ten years would cost the dominion immediately some $14,000,000 more than the dominion is now spending on those over seventy, or a total of $44,200,000 immediate increase. Or the total immediate cost to the dominion this year, if the age were lowered to sixty, would be $73,900,000.

To the country as a whole the cost would be still greater; for one must remember that the provinces are in this, and this house cannot lightheartedly change this act and assume that every province will accept the financial obligations involved. I know that would not bother the hon. member for Winnipeg North; he would immediately say, "Let the dominion pay the difference whatever it is." That would be an easy way to get round that difficulty.

Mr. HEAPS: I am willing to speak for myself when the time comes.

Mr. DUNNING: Yes, but I venture to say that would be my hon. friend's solution.

Mr. NEEDHAM: It is a correct one.

Mr. DUNNING: If that is not my hon. friend's solution may I point out to him that there is nothing to prevent any province to-day from deciding to pay pensions itself to its old people between sixty and seventy years of age or any other age it sees fit.

Mr. POOLE: They have not the revenue.

Mr. DUNNING: But I thought my friends in Alberta came into office on the promise that they would provide all the revenue necessary to run that province and pay everybody $25 a month.

Mr. POOLE: Leave it to us and we will do it.

Mr. DUPUIS: What are you waiting for?

Mr. DUNNING: I think I have said all I want to say about the costs. I leave that part with the house. But I want to say a few words about the growing habit in this house of fouling our own nest as a country. Hardly a discussion of a humanitarian character arises but a number of hon. members state that we are the most backward nation in the world on this and on that. Mr. Speaker, I do not believe it. We are not a backward people. In connection with the matter which was discussed just before this resolution, I could have instanced and I wanted to instance that the people of this dominion are not backward in caring for hospitalization and for their sick and their fatherless; they do look after them; the average up as well as any country in the world in that regard. The difficulty is that some hon. members compare what Canada is doing with some country which has either evolved a scheme which enables their national government to do what in our country is a matter for the provinces, or where, as in the case of New Zealand or England, there is a unitary government, not a federal and provincial system of government as we have here. In respect to these matters our people are developing from the bottom up, which is the soundest way.

To The Editor

BIRDS IN WINTER

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—Those folk who take pity on the birds who choose to stay with us during the winter months, instead of deserting this cold clime for the warmth of the southlands have been kept busy during the severe storms of the last few weeks, in supplying a breakfast each morning at the kitchen door. One wonders at times, when the wind is howling, and the air filled with driving snow, how the frail, shivering little things can exist in a zero temperature. But they are always on hand wherever kind-hearted folk have been mindful of them, no matter how the winds may blow.

The aggregations do not seem to vary much, and it is evident that the birds choose a certain number of kitchen doors, looking for their handout. The ubiquitous sparrow is always the largest flock, and next to them the starlings, who are ravenous eaters. Occasionally a few chickadees drop in for some crumbs, but the most welcome of all are the blue jays, and what a picture they make a flash of blue against the pure white of the snowbank. They are very wary birds, and will only remain at rest long enough to pick up a tidbit, and fly up into a tree where it is eaten at leisure: repeating the process until satisfied.

The black and grey squirrels are a disturbing element at the breakfast table. When they appear, all birds take to the trees, and hedges, while the squirrels stuff their faces to repletion. But not satisfied with this they then proceed to carry off and bury in the snow bread crusts, and other scraps. Whether they ever dig these up again is a matter of doubt, as no one has ever seen them do so. But they soon tire of this and disappear, then the birds resume their feasting.

There is however one small bird staying with us through the winter; and who is quite averse to accepting relief. A very independent, and industrious little chap he is. In the worst storm that blows his cheery chirp may be heard, and you get an occasional glimpse of him flying from tree to tree. When he finds what seems a likely location on a dry limb, then he goes into action . . . rrrrrrrrrrrat tat tat. All one can do for this little hairy woodpecker is to hope he may have good hunting. He deserves a good fat grub at the end of his drilling.

• Sir Joseph Backed A Newspaper

CANADA has lost one of her ablest financiers, greatest industrialists and most successful business men in the death of Sir Joseph Flavelle. His life is a real Horatio Alger story says A. R. Ford in The London Free Press. Born of poor, but pious parents in Pterborough, he received a strict, religious, old-fashioned, Methodist training. To his death he boasted that he had never touched liquor, never smoked, never played cards and never went to a horse race. By the time he was 30 he was a successful merchant in Peterbrough and he sought wider fields. He moved to Toronto and it was not many years until he was one of the leaders of business and finance in the then rapidly expanding city. Even by 1900 he was rated a millionaire.

The great adventure of his life, and one of the few unsuccessful ones, was his decision to back Sir John Willison in the launching of an independent newspaper in the City of Toronto. This was in 1903. Sir John had irked under the restrictions of the editorship of a party newspaper as The Globe was in those days. He was never strictly a party man and the attempts on the part of politicans to direct his editorial and news policies troubled him.

Hector Charlesworth gives the only satisfactory explanation we have ever heard of Sir John's decision to leave The Globe. At the time the Liberal party was at the heighth of its power, Sir John had the closest confidence of Sir Wilfird—he had written a history of his leader—and independent journalism was then an unknown and uncharted land. There was every reason for Sir John continuing as head of the most influential Liberal paper, Mr. Charlesworth writes that Sir John one day being short of a subject on a leader editorial, wrote an article presenting certain views on the railway question in the West. The president of The Globe, the late Robert Jaffray, not then Senator, highly commended it and suggested that he make an editorial campaign along these lines, a task he was well qualified to perform. What was the idealistic editor's chagrin a few weeks later to learn that his series of editorials had been used to secure a charter for the Grow's Nest Pass Railway, carrying with it a rich concession of coal lands for Mr. Jaffray and his friend Hon. George A. Cox. Willison felt that he had been betrayed. He could not afford at the time to resign, but he made up his mind that, if the opportunity ever came to rid himself of the yoke of party journalism.

The opportunity came when Sir Joseph suggested in 1902 that he would back him financially in the launching of an independent paper in Toronto. They first endeavored to purchase The Toronto World, owned by W. F. Maclean, M. P., but Mr. Maclean was not in selling mood although perpetually hard up. They secured The Toronto News, an evening paper without much standing or prestige. Sir John endeavored to turn the paper into a high class literary publication and later developments led him to be the leading medium in the defeat of the Ross Government in 1905 and the Laurier administration in 1911, but The News never prospered and finally fell by the wayside.

Sir Joseph had no axes to grind except an honest and idealistic effort to give Toronto and Ontario a superior newspaper. Sir John Willison is authority for the statement that Sir Joseph never intervened or made the slightest effort to direct or control the policies of the paper. It might have been better had he done so, for while Sir John was a great editor, he was not a good business man.

• Gibraltar Was None Too Secure

LONDON. — How unprepared against air attack was the great rock fortress of Gibraltar during the Munich crisis has just been disclosed here by General Sir Charles Harington, who was Gibraltar's governor at the time. He had only four anti-aircraft guns in all and he fully expected that if the French forces seized Ceuta and Tetuan on the other side of the straits, German and Italian aircraft aiding General Franco would have retaliated on Gibraltar.

Sir Charles is a veteran of many international crisis. In 1921 to 1923 while he was general officer commanding in Turkey, he prevented war with Mustapha Kemal Pasha —afterwards Ataturk, the dictator. In Constantinople he got the last of the sultans to safety while enemies were seeking the potentate's life. He gave shelter to king Amanullah when he was fleeing from Afghanistan and to the Emperor Haile Selassie when he was a fugitive from Ethiopia. When governor of Gibraltar he saw much of the naval fighting between the government and rebels navies, including the attack on the government destroyer Jose Luis Diez.

"We in Gibraltar," he said, "were totally unprepared at the time of the September crisis. Two years before I had asked for gas masks, and was told I could expect none before 1939. The navy and army had some, but the colonial service and civilians not one, and on my return at the end of October I passed an outgoing liner with the first gas masks.

"It is difficult to know what the effect on Gibraltar would have been. The French had certainly massed a large force on the Spanish Moroccan border and might quite likely have taken Ceuta and Tetuan. In fact, at that time General Franco was bringing troops back from Spain hurriedly to Spanish Morocco. My information, for what it was worth, was that General Franco had wished to be neutral, but that Herr Hitler had told him that he could be, but that he would use his bombers from Spanish aerodromes, and I think it quite likely that if the French had jumped Ceutra he would have retaliated, and perhaps naturally, on Gibraltar. I had only four anti-aircraft guns—two at each end of the Rock!

"I am told that things are very different now. With unlimited money, things are improving daily and Gibraltar daily grows stronger. I am always interested when I read in the press of all General Franco's guns which threaten Gibraltar and of all these heavy 12-inch howitzers at Palayo, near Algeciras. To my certain knowledge there were never more than four of these great howitzers and to my certain knowledge they had all been removed over a month before I left Gibraltar, two to the Ibro front and two to Cadiz."

IN THE BARBER TRADE.

As in every other trade, so many changes have occurred in the barbering business, said a Walkerton tonsorial artist, that he could dispense with his razor and still make a living so long as he kept a firm grip on his shears.

In other words shaving, which was once the backbone of the profession and kept the bell of the cash register ringing, has now dwindled to the widow's mite of the cause, leaving hair-cutting as the big shot of the works . . .

Prices have changed, too. Many Walkertonians can still recall the days when strips of tickets or cards were used here. The price of each card was $1, and for it a customer received 12 shaves and a haircut. The "buck" had to be paid in advance.—Walkerton Herald-Times.

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

I can of mine own self do nothing: as I hear, I judge: and my judgment is just; because I seek not mine own will, but the will of the Father which hath sent me. If I bear witness of myself, my witness is not true. There is another that beareth witness of me; and I know that the witness which he witnesseth of me is true.

Ye sent unto John, and he bare witness unto the truth. But I receive not testimony from man: but these things I say, that ye might be saved. He was a burning and a shining light: and ye were willing for a season to rejoice in his light.

But I have greater witness than that of John: for the works which the Father hath given me to finish, the same works that I do, bear witness of me, that the Father hath sent me. And the Father himself, which hath sent me, hath borne witness of me. Ye have neither heard his voice at any time, nor seen his shape. . . .

After these things Jesus went over the sea of Galilee, which is the sea of Tiberias. And a great multitude followed him, because they saw his miracles which he did on them that were diseased.—John v, 30-37; ix, 1, 2.

VALUE OF A SMILE.

A press report of a damage action in court recently interested us very much. A little boy had been struck by the broken end of a live wire which touched one side of his face, burning and paralyzing it. In court the boy's lawyer asked the little fellow to turn toward the jury and smile. He tried. One side of his face smiled but the injured side just puckered up in a hideous and pitiful contortion.

It took the jury just twenty minutes to give the boy a verdict of twenty thousand dollars. Twenty thousand dollars was thus legally certified as the value of a smile.—(Oshawa Times)

Michigan Finds Jobless Insurance Boon As Security To Labor And Steady Purchasing Power

By R. K. Taylor
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

DETROIT, Mar. 10—(CP).—Unemployment compensation in Michigan has brought great benefits to labor through increased security and to industry through maintaining purchasing power, said government, labor and industrial leaders here to-day. The interviews followed announcement yesterday at opening of the Ontario Legislature that the Hepburn government planned to clear the way for unemployment insurance in Ontario.

Governor Frank Fitzgerald said the Michigan Act was a "humanitarian law furnishing workers with the security and protection to which they are entitled." He added the Act was the cornerstone in the State's program of providing security for workers."

John C. Townsend, executive director of the Michigan Unemployment Compensation Commission, said labor and industrial leaders were satisfied with the law's operation.

George Edwards, high-ranking official in the United Automobile Workers of America, praised the Act as a "great blessing for employees." He said the automobile workers, whose work was seasonal at best, found the act an unqualified success.

Employers contribute funds for the Act. In 1936 they started by paying one per cent of their annual payroll, increased to two per cent in 1937 and three per cent in 1938. First benefits were paid Aug. 1, 1938. The Commission paid $39,000,000 in benefits to 300,000 employees during the first five months of operation.

The Commission collected $88,000,000 up to Feb. 22, 1939, and paid out $45,000,000 in benefits. Reserves of $43,000,000 included about $1,300,000 in interest.

The Commission expects to establish sufficient reserves by 1942 so employers with a record of maintaining steady employment will benefit by reduced payments to the funds.

Some Employers Excluded.

Not all employers are subject, only those with eight or more employees during any part of 20 weeks during the current or preceding year. Domestics, farm laborers and certain other employees are excluded from the Act. Provision is made for employers who voluntarily wish to obtain coverage of their employees.

Benefits for a week of total employment approximate one half of the workers average weekly wage. No workers may receieve for total unemployment a benefit of more than $16 a week or less than either $7 or six per cent of his wage during the calendar quarter used in determining his benefit rate.

No worker can receieve in any one benefit year more than 16 times his most recently established weekly benefit rate for total unemployment. As the maximum benefit rate possible is $16 a week, so $256 is the total available during any one benefit year. A benefit year dates from the time the worker gets his first benefit payment.

Workers must earn at least $50 in each of three of the five calendar quarters immediately preceding the first day of his benefit year to be eligible for payments, or he must earn an aggregate of at least $250 in any one of the five completed calendar quarters.

Workers must serve a waiting period of either three consecutive or five accumulative weeks of total employment to be eligible.

Workers shall be required to serve disqualification weeks in addition to the waiting period if he has left work voluntarily without good cause, if he has been discharged for misconduct in connection with his work, if he fails without good cause to accept suitable work or return to customary self-employment when directed.

Workers are disqualified under the Act from benefits during the time he is directly involved in a labor dispute. No work is considered suitable if a job is open because of a strike, or if working conditions or pay are substantially lower than those prevailing for a similar work in the locality or if the worker has to join a company union or quit a legitimate union as a condition of employment.

Partially Employed.

The Commission started benefit payments to partially unemployed persons last month as the second phase of the Act went into effect. The Commission's example of operation of the Act regarding partially unemployed persons concerns a worker, Jones, who, if totally unemployed, would be entitled to $10 weekly benefit. During January he worked and earned $20.

Jones would be entitled to the difference between what he actually earned, $20, and five times his weekly benefit rate, which would be $50, so he would get $30 in benefits. There is no waiting period for partial benefits.

Total or partial benefits may not exceed 12½ per cent of the wages earned in the base period, which consists of the first eight of the last nine completed calendar quarters.

Townsend said the Michigan Act was considered a model for the other 47 States of the Union with unemployment compensation. Delegations from New York State and Illinois recently visited Michigan to study operation of the Act.

Townsend said he would welcome a visit from any Ontario government group that wished to study Michigan's Act.

French Optimistic Despite Hints Of Nazi Designs On Swiss, Dutch

PARIS, March 10—(CP-Havas)—French diplomatic circles today were optimistic regarding the International situation despite press warnings of alleged plans of Chancellor Hitler to invade the Netherlands and Switzerland.

This optimism concerns only the immediate future and general satisfaction is expressed over the steady progress being realized by France and Great Britain in their defence programs.

These same circles declare that both the Netherlands and Switzerland have been warned of German military preparations and have taken appropriate measures. As early as last Fall Switzerland announced construction of an elaborate system of "tank traps" and other frontier defences and just a few days ago the Netherlands announced the creation of a Government Department to supervise its border defences.

In recent weeks, however, the Netherlands and Switzerland have received reassuring explanations from Berlin and the Swiss Foreign Minister, Giuseppe Motta, has cautioned the people of Switzerland against unjustified concern.

No Great Outbreak

Paris Diplomatic circles are convinced that the Reich is not on the eve of undertaking a vast International adventure. It was held possible that the German staff has on file strategic plans concerning both the Netherlands and Switzerland but there is no reason for believing that these plans are about to be executed.

At present, both France and Great Britain are accepting Hitler's Reichstag speech of Jan. 30 at its face value and are attempting to negotiate with the Reich on economic matters on the basis of the true needs of the Reich. In both Paris and London these negotiations are counted upon as the cornerstone of further conversations of a general nature with the Reich.

Self Sufficiency In War Materials In 3 Years, Now Aim Of Japan

TOKYO, March 10 — (AP). — Hitherto secret details of a gigantic industrial expansion program designed to give Japan complete self-sufficiency in war materials within three years was disclosed today in Parliament.

The plan embraces Japanese-occupied China and Japanese-protected Manchoukuo as well as Japan proper.

Kazuo Aoki, president of the Cabinet Planning Board, told the Lower House Budget Committee that the program already was under way and was scheduled for completion in 1941. Hence, he said, some phases might be disclosed.

Raw materials derived from newly occupied areas of China play a major role in the production scheme. The majority of industries and articles coming under the plan relate directly to war materials.

The plan envisages the following percentage increases over present output: ordinary steel, 60 per cent; special steel 100; steel ingots, 60; pig iron, 100; iron ore, 150; coal, 30; magnesium, 1,000; copper, 80; lead, 90; zinc, 70; tin, 100; natural gasoline, 30; synthetic gasoline, 2,900.

The gasoline would be ordinary medium test, not airplane fuel.

Still other products and the proposed percentage increases: Natural oil, 40, synthetic oil, 800; dehydrated alcohol, 1,200; soda, 20; caustic soda, 40; industrial salt, 65; amonium sulphate, 40; paper pulp, 20; gold, 20; machine tools, 100; railway locomotives, 30; passenger cars, 70; freight cars, 50; automobiles, 400; wool, 240.

Aoki told the diet that the actual details of how these increases would be effected could not be disclosed at present.

LOCAL ACES HOLD MARKHAM TO 5 TO 5 IN O.H.A. "B" OPENER

Return Contest To Be Played Here On Monday

Peterborough Aces held Markham to a 5-5 draw last night in their first O.H.A. Intermediate "B" playdown game in Markham. With goals counting in the two-game series, the clubs will start off even here on Monday night in the Brock in the return clash. A crowd of 400 fans last night viewed a rugged, even tussle on slow ice.

Several of the Aces were suffering bad colds but made the trip, Wright, Mortimer and Connelly all being on the sick list but playing. Heal starred while the Cournyea brothers up front, Vitarelli and O'Leary on defence and Currie in goal, turned in a bangup performance. And the rest also went good in a tight tilt. For Markham, M. Beck, E. Lawrie, Harrison and Morrison were best, with Miller strong in the cage

Good Hockey

The game was speedy but should be faster here, on better ice, as both clubs dished up a lot of good hockey in an exciting contest. The checking was stiff but the tilt fairly clean throughout. Markham scored the only goal of the first frame, but the Aces held them to a 2-2 tie in a lively second head, and the visitors had a 3-2 edge in the speedy third period. The locals believe they can oust Markham here Monday and step into the next round of the provincial playdowns.

The teams:

Aces: Goal, Currie; defence, Vitarelli and Connelly; centre, R. Cournyea; wings, Heal and Wright; subs, White, Mortimer, O'Leary, Hill and A. Cournyea.

Markham: Goal, Miller; defence, Hare and Pullen; centre, J. Beck; wings, Harrison and E. Beck; subs, R. Lawrie, E. Lawrie, McGill, Morrison and Findlay.

Ski Notes

With the advent of March it is generally figured that skiing is over for the season Such is not the case, however, for the many trails and paths throughout the country districts are really at their best during the month of March. Cool nights more or less offset the increasingly strong rays of the sun and make for ideal skiing

Recent snowfalls have deposited about three inches of powder snow over the abundant winter's snow and right now the skiing is actually better than it has been all winter—and that's something. Also, with the combination of strong sun and snow you can get an early start on your next summer's coat of tan.

Tomorrow afternoon at Jackson Park the regular junior run will be held from the club cabin. After last week's successful junior competitions the "kids" are more enthusiastic than ever and a large turnout is expected.

The road is now open to Bethany which be the scene of Sunday's activities. The skiing there is practically perfect and everybody is urged to take advantage of it

We will again attempt to stage the ladies' championships, and as all previous obstacles have now been removed it looks like "ladies' day" at Bethany on Sunday.
